ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE. 1893,

Full Titles by Authors

NOTE.

In this list the titles generally are verbatim transcriptions (according to the rule of the American Library Association) from books received. Books not received are indicated by a prefixed asterisk, and this office cannot be held responsible for the correctness of their record.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (Folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); E. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo, 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

THE ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1893,

Of Books recorded January 1 to December 31, 1893, with full titles and descriptive notes, arranged alphabetically by Authors.

A., Mrs. J. The home receipt-book: comprising a choice selection from the experience of many years; ed. by M. T. A., 1871. Phil., for sale by The J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. 21 p. T. pap., 25 c.

Abbe, Cleveland, comp. The mechanics of the earth's atmosphere: a collection of translations. Wash., D. C., Smithsonian Institution, 1891 [1893.] 3–324 p. O. (Smithsonian miscellaneous collections, no. 843.) pap., n. p.

Abbott, Austin. A digest of New York statutes and reports from Jan. 1, 1892, to Jan. 1, 1893, with tables of statutes, constitutional provisions, rules of court and cases cited. N. Y., Diossy Law-Book Co., 1893. c. 7+39+540 p. O. shp., $5.

Abbott, Austin. New cases selected chiefly from decisions of the courts of the state of New York: with notes; with an analytical index to all points of law and practice and all code citations contained in the standard reports of N. Y. issued during the period covered by this v. V. 29. N. Y., The Diossy Law-Book Co., 1893. c. 7+43+552 p. O. shp., $5.

Abbott, Austin, and Norton, A. Sidney. Latin for lawyers. N. Y., Gibbs Bros. & Moran, prs., 1893. c. 48 p. S. pap., (privately printed.)

Abbott, Rev. Lyman. The Roman Catholic question. N. Y., The Christian Union Co., Clinton Hall, Astor Pl., 1893. c. 22 p. D. pap., 10 c.

This sermon, preached at Plymouth Church, provoked so much newspaper discussion that it is printed in pamphlet form, by special request of the trustees of the church. It includes a clear account of the recent differences between the liberal and conservative wings of the Roman Catholic Church in this country, and of the present position of the public-school question. Dr. Abbott's own views of the attitude which should be taken by Protestants toward liberal-minded and progressive Roman Catholics are earnestly set forth, and whether accepted or rejected by others are certainly suggestive and based on careful study of the subject.

A'Beckett. Gilbert Abbott. The comic history of England, with reproductions of the 240 engravings by John Leech. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, Ltd., 1893. 16+634 p. 8°, cl., $3.

Aber, Mrs. Mary Alling. Souls. Chic., [published by the author, Mrs. Mary Alling Aber, for free distribution, address care of R. R. Donnelley & Sons, 144 Monroe St.,] 1893. 4–176 p. D. pap., gratis.

"Dedicated to the souls of men." No copies of this book are for sale. 2500 will be given away to those who apply for them, as it is desired that it be "widely and wisely distributed." It sets forth the author's discovery that animals as well as human beings have souls; that the soul in its education upon this planet goes through some eight hundred incarnations, often taking upon itself the forms of animals. The author also tells where souls come from, where they go between incarnations, and what becomes of souls that refuse to develop and purify themselves, etc.

Abrantès, Duchesse d', [Mme. L. P. Junot.] Autobiography and recollections of Laura, Duchess of Abrantès (widow of General Junot); with reminiscences of her life in Corsica, Paris, and in Spain and Portugal. New ed., in four volumes, with portraits. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. 4 v., 21+420; 6+424; 6+431; 7+521 p. pors. il. D. cl., $10.

A new revised library edition of a well-known standard work. A valuable contribution to the history of the inner life of the court of Napoleon.

Across France in a caravan: being some account of a journey from Bordeaux to Genoa in the Escargot, taken in the winter, 1889–90, by the author of "A day of my life at Eton;" il. by J: Wallace after sketches by the author. 2d ed. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1893.] 5–408 p. O. cl., slip cover, net, $4.50.

The writer, his wife Peggy, and the cattle James were the travellers. In a crippled house-van they experiences among the natives of out-of-the-way of France are given. A very pretty cover of and white with a rainy-day sketch makes the exterior tempting.

Adams, C: Francis. Massachusetts, its historians and its history. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 110 p. D. cl., $1.

That Massachusetts for a long period in her history stoutly opposed religious freedom, and scouted the idea of toleration as irreligious, is the position held by Mr. Adams. He sustains this position by copious references to unquestionable authorities, and accuses historians of condoning, if not ignoring, her religious intolerance.

Adams, Rev. C: Josiah. Where is my dog? or, is man alone immortal? N. Y., Fowler & Wells Co., 1892 [1893.] c. 5–202 p. D. cl., $1.

Mr. Adams tells the reader what he purposes to do in clear terms, viz.: "To call attention to the fact that man possesses the physical faculties in common with the beast. . . . To attempt to show that in a degree the lower animal has the intellectual, moral, and spiritual faculties in common with man, and to try to discuss whether there is any argument in favor of man's immortality which may not give us a hope for a future for our more humble brethren, who cannot speak for themselves."

Adams, Francis. The Australians: a social sketch. N. Y., Century Co., 1893. 314 p. 8°, cl., $1.50.

Adams, H: Austin. The larger life. N. Y., J. Selwin Tait & Sons, 1893. c. 6+184 p. por. D. cl., $1.

Eight sermons: The larger life; Who am I?: Rush; Rust; Tact; Contact; Aims; Ends. The author was at one time rector of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, Buffalo, N. Y., and the Church of the Redeemer, N. Y. City. This is his reply to the storm of criticism which broke over him upon his becoming a Catholic. Dedicated "to my former parishioners."

Adams, Herbert B. The life and writings of Jared Sparks; comprising selections from his journals and correspondence. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. 2 v., 51+572; 18+639 p. pors. 8°, cl., $5. [Edition limited to 500 copies.]

Adams, J. Howe, M.D. History of the life of D. Hayes Agnew, M.D. Phil., F. A. Davis Co., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 7+376 p. pors. il. O. cl., subs, net, $2.50; hf. mor., net, $3.50.

Dr. Agnew, "the most experienced surgeon, the clearest writer and teacher, the man most beloved and venerated," was born in Pennsylvania in 1836 and died March 22, 1892. He was modest, retiring, kind, gentle and devoid of all ambition. His manual dexterity was wonderful. He gave a great impetus to American surgery. He was one of the surgeons in attendance on Garfield in 1881. This biography gives the words spoken at his funeral services. An appendix gives the authorities from which the facts are gathered. The writer has known Dr. Agnew since their college days. Full index.

Adams, Justin. At the picket-line: a military drama of the Civil War in five acts. Bost., Walter H. Baker & Co., 1893. c. 39 p. D. (Baker's edition of plays.) pap., 25 c.

Adams, Justin. T'riss; or, beyond the Rockies: a drama of western life in four acts. Bost., Walter H. Baker & Co., 1893. c. 3–34 p. D. (Baker's edition of plays.) pap., 25 c.

Adams, W. I. Lincoln. Amateur photography: a practical guide for the beginner. N. Y., The Baker & Taylor Co., 1893. c. 3–90 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Adams, W:, D.D. Born in the whirlwind. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1893. 304 p. D. (Arena lib. ser., no. 22.) cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

Dr. Adams embodies in this story the experience of his eight years' recent residence in the south. The scene is western Georgia. The story throws a strong light on negro character, in its brightest and darkest aspects. There are descriptions of a cyclone and earthquake, and also a flood, which are written with much power.

Adams, W: T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] American boys afloat; or, cruising in the Orient. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893. c. 9+343 p. il. D. (All-over-the-world ser., [2d ser.,] no. 5.) cl., $1.25.

A continuation of the travels and adventures of Louis Belgrave, the young millionaire, and his faithful friend and constant associate, Felix McGavorty on the steam yacht Guardian-Mother. They are at Gibraltar in the beginning of the story, and after seeing its sights go on to Algiers and Constantinople.

Adams, W: T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] Strange sights abroad; or, a voyage in European waters. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893. c. 6+305 p. il. D. (All-over-the-world ser., no. 4.) cl., $1.25.

Continues the adventures of Louis Belgrave and his friends on the yacht Guardian-Mother. The yachting party cross the ocean to the Azores, call at Madeira, scale the peak of Teneriffe and have an exciting and rather dangerous experience in Morocco.

Adams, W: T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] A victorious union. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893. c. 361 p. il. D. (The blue and the gray ser., no. 6.) cl., $1.50.

The concluding volume of The blue and the gray series. Lieut. Christy Passford is the hero of the naval action and of the story. He is on the Bellevite, a blockading vessel off Mobile in the opening chapter, and assists in capturing two Confederate blockade-runners. The book ends with the surrender of Forts Morgan and Gaines and the conclusion of the war.

Adams, W: T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] The young navigators; or, the foreign cruise of the Maud. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1894 [1893.] c. 11+344 p. D. (All-over-the-world ser., no. 5.) cl., $1.25.

The Maud was the consort of the Guardian-Mother, the steam-yacht owned by the young millionaire Louis Belgrave. The further adventures of these two yachts are traced in a voyage which begins at Constantinople and extends to many islands of the Archipelago. The voyage is continued to Athens, Corinth, Delphi, and the Ionian Islands. Louis Belgrave is the hero of a stirring story, and his friend Felix McGavorty comes in for his share of adventure. The descriptions of the places visited include much interesting historical matter.

Addams, Miss Jane, Woods, Rob. A., Huntington, Rev. J. O. S., [and others.] Philanthropy and social progress: seven essays: delivered before the School of Applied Ethics at Plymouth, Mass., during the session of 1892; with introd. by H: C. Adams. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1893.] c. 10+268 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The titles of the seven essays are as follows: The subjective necessity for social settlements, and the objective value of a social settlement, by Miss Jane Addams; The University settlement idea, by Robert A. Woods; Philanthropy—its success and failure, by Father James O. S. Huntington; Philanthropy and morality, by Father James O. S. Huntington; The ethics of social progress, by Professor Franklin H. Giddings; The principles and chief dangers of the administration of charity, by Bernard Bosanquet, M.A.

Adderley, Ja. Stephen Remarx: the story of a venture in ethics. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1894 [1893.] 3+150 p. D. cl., 75 c.

An English rector in sympathy with the liberal spirit of the day embodies his ideas in a sermon to his congregation, the leading thought being that a man cannot be a true Christian who transgress all principles taught by Christ in his business transactions, or who does not devote some part of his wealth or talents to the service of the afflicted or needy. For this "socialistic sermon," as it is called, he is removed by his bishop. He then with six other men forms a brotherhood and carries out his ideas of vicarious sacrifice.

Addis, W: L., and Arnold, T: A Catholic dictionary. New rev. enl. ed.; with the assistance of T. B. Scannell, D.D., with the imprimatur of Cardinal Vaughan of Westminster, and the Rev. M. A. Corrigan, Archbishop of New York. N. Y., Benziger Bros., 1893. O. cl., net, $5.

Addyman, Frank T. Agricultural analysis: a manual of quantitative analysis for students of agriculture. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1893. 7+200 p. il. 12°, cl., $1.75.

Adeney, Walter F. Ezra, Nehemiah and Esther. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1893. 6+404 p. O. (Expositor's Bible, new [6th] ser.) cl., $1.50.

Adler, Liebman. (Rabbi.) Sabbath hours thoughts. Phil., The Jewish Pub. Soc. of America, 1893. c. 12+338 p. por. D. cl., $1 25.

Forty-four sermons, culled from two volumes of German sermons on texts from the Pentateuch, published by the late Rabbi Liebman Adler, of Chicago. Translated into English, and prefaced by a biographical sketch of the writer.

Æschylus. Choephoroi; with an introd., commentary and translation by A. W. Verrall. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. 8°, cl., net, $2.75.

Æsop. Fables: tr. by S: Croxall, D.D., and Sir Roger L'Estrange; with applications, morals, etc., by Rev. G. T. Townsend and L. Valentine; il. by Herrick. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1893. 1-29+366 p. 12°, (Chandos classics.) cl., $1; 75 c.

Agee, G. W. Rube Burrow, king of outlaws, and his band of train robbers: an accurate and faithful history of their exploits and adventures. Chic., E. A. Weeks & Co., [1893.] 9+194 p. por. D. (Melbourne ser., no. 10.) pap., 25 c.

Aho, Juhani, (pseud.) Squire Hellman, and other stories. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 2+162 p. D. (The unknown lib., no. 25.) cl., 50 c.

An introduction describing "The Finnish novel" is furnished by R. Nisbet Bain, who states that "Squire Hellman" is the first English translation of a Finnish novel. It is rather an incident than a novel. "Squire Hellman" is a fierce, hard-hearted, fiery-tempered land-owner who rages at the village assessors for raising his taxes. His neighbors make him believe he has incurred the penalty of the law for contempt of court and his ludicrous terror and self-abasement are realistically described. Three other stories are included: When father brought home the lamp; Pioneers; Loyal.

Aiken, W: B. An outline of the principles and leads of American whist. Norwich, Ct., Noyes & Davis, 1893. c. '92. 4 p. Tt. pap., 10 c.

Alcott, Louisa M. and Anne. Comic tragedies written by Jo and Meg, and acted by the "Little women." Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 4-317 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Six of the original plays written and performed by the Alcott sisters in their childhood days. They are mostly for two performers only and are rich in villains, ghosts, bandits and disdainful queens. They are named, Noma, or, the witch's curse; The captive of Castile, or, the Moorish maiden's vow; The Greek slave; Ion; Bianca, an operatic tragedy; The unloved wife, or, woman's faith.

Alden, Edmund K. The world's representative assemblies of to-day: a study in comparative legislation. Balt., Md., The Johns Hopkins Press, 1893. c. 4-50 p. O. (Johns Hopkins Univ. studies, 11th ser., no. 2.) pap., 50 c.

The plan of this monograph is foreshadowed in its title; it does not claim to trace the genesis and evolution of existing assemblies, nor—deeply interesting and informing as the task would be—can the labor of a detailed analysis and commentary on all modern legislatures fall within its scope. It seeks rather to set in array the principal phenomena of such assemblies, and from the data furnished to draw the more striking and essential lessons.

Alden, Mrs. Is. M., ["Pansy," pseud.] Stephen Mitchell's journey. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1893. 4+347 p. il. D. (The Pansy books ser.) cl., $1.50.

A story of religious development in a single household and its effect upon an ever-widening outside circle. Stephen Mitchell's journey was made with a load of "garden truck" from his father's shabby farm to a "summer encampment" twelve miles distant. A religious lecture heard at the encampment brings Stephen under fresh and awakening influences; later he falls in with an earnest young clergyman and is fairly started to make something of his life. The changes wrought in the Mitchell household—consisting of father, mother, nineteen-year-old Stephen, and Sarah Ann, two years his junior—and among their immediate neighbors are well and earnestly deserbed.

Alden, Mrs. Is. M., ["Pansy," pseud.] Twenty minutes late. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1893. c. 4-374 p. il. D. (The Pansy books, no. 40.) cl., $1.50.

A train lost by twenty minutes, by a party of young people who had been on a nutting expedition, affects the whole life of Caroline Bryant; her brother puts her into the wrong train, she is taken far out of her way and finally lands in Philadelphia; she finds kind friends in the conductor's family, in whose house scarlet fever breaks out; this for awhile prevents her going home; then the doctor takes a fancy to her, induces her mother to let her spend the winter with his little girl; here she learns stenography and typewriting, etc., etc.

Alden, Mrs. Is. M., ["Pansy," pseud.] Worth having; from The Pansy. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1893. 4+250 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Alden, W: L. Told by the colonel: il. by R: Jack and Hal Hurst. N. Y., J. Selwin Tait & Sons, 1893. c. 3+176 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Mr. W: L. Alden will be remembered by a large class of appreciative readers as the writer of the "sixth column" funny article of the New York Times. This collection of stories bears fresh evidence of his original humor. They are called: An ornithological romance; Jewseppy; That little Frenchman; Thompson's tombstone; A union meeting; A clerical romance; A mystery; My brother Elijah; The St. Bernard myth; A matrimonial romance; Hoskins' pets; The cat's revenge; Silver-plated.

Aldrich, T: Bailey. Mercedes: a drama in two acts; as performed at Palmer's Theatre. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1894 [1893.] c. '83, '93. 4-71 p. D. cl., $1.

First published in 1883, in a volume called "Mercedes and later lyrics." See notice, "Weekly Record," P. W., Nov. 21, '83, [618.] It is now issued as performed at Palmer's Theatre in New York City, revised and rearranged by the author.

Aldrich, T: Bailey. An old town by the sea. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. '83, '93. 5+128 p. D. cl., $1.

Mr. Aldrich has made Portsmouth in New Hampshire one of the famous towns in literature. It is the delightful "Rivermouth" of Tom Bailey in "The story of a bad boy," and the scene of the principal part of his charming novel, "Prudence Palfrey." He now devotes an entire book to his native city, giving in his characteristic style a most engaging account of it, touching many points of history and topography, and including delightful anecdotes concerning its eccentric characters.

Minneapolis, Minn., published by the author, Ja. B. Alexander, 123 State St., 1893 [1892.] c. 10+1067 p. O. cl., $2.75.

"It is my endeavor to point out that organisms instead of being hand-made and purposive, are machine-built machines, and operated when built by forces outside of themselves. Especial care has been taken to ascertain the relationship of man to the other animals, and to point out their resemblances and contrasts. Especial attention is called to mental phenomena and the machinery for their production."—Preface. List of authorities cited. Full index.

A series of discussions on the true character of the Christian creed—on the belief in the Father Almighty, in the incarnation of the Son, in the inspiration received from the Holy Ghost—each of which is stated in its divine simplicity apart from all particular theories on the subject.

Alger, Horatio, jr. Facing the world; or, the haps and mishaps of Harry Vane. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1893.] c. 2+318 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

When Harry Vane's father died he left him in the guardianship of a certain John Fox, of Cobbrook, but after the lad arrived in that town a brief experience with his guardian led him to decide that "facing the world" would be preferable to living with Fox. His adventures after that make up an exciting and interesting story of land and sea.

Alger, Horatio, jr. In a new world; or, among the gold-fields of Australia. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1893.] c. 3+323 p. il. D. (New world ser., no. 3.) cl., $1.25.

The story of two American boys of sixteen who go out to Australia to seek their fortune; after many adventures in making their way to the mines they dig an immense nugget of gold, which makes them wealthy men.

Allen, Grant. Blood royal. N. Y., Cassell Publishing Co., [1893.] c. '92. 3+276 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 132.) pap., 50 c.

A bookseller's assistant in a small English town believes himself of royal descent. His father, now a worthless drunkard and the dancing-master of the town, had once been a literary light of some brilliancy, and had educated his children in the error which he had ignorantly and innocently imbibed, that he was a lineal descendant of the Plantagenets. His son, Richard Plantagenet, obtains a scholarship at Oxford, and leaves the book-store for more congenial surroundings. Richard's career is the leading narrative in the book; his love, his discovery that he is not of royal blood, but the heir to a fortune that has long waited a claimant, are told with much graphic power.

Allen, Grant. Michael's crag; with over three hundred and fifty illustrations in silhouette, by Francis Carruthers Gould and Alec Carruthers Gould. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1893. c. 2–242 p. O. cl., $1.

A story of the Cornish coast, England, in which are intertwined many stories of Cornish superstitions. One of the superstitions is that a Tyrrel is sooner or later bound to kill his man unintentionally. One day, in walking over the cliffs, Walter Tyrrel, when only thirteen years old, kicks down some stones which strike the only son of the Trevennacks who is walking below and almost instantly kills him. This act colors all of Walter's after life, and comes between his love for Cleer Trevennack, the boy's only sister.

Allen, Grant. The scallywag. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] 5+437 p. D. cl., $1.

Continental society at Mentone is humorously delineated, and English society at Oxford is described with some sarcasm. The chief characters are a clever English adventuress, born in the purlieus of Whitechapel, speaking sundry European languages, who passes as an Austrian countess, and the Hebraic moneylender Solomons, who carefully educates the "Scallywag" in order that he may marry an heiress and become a baronet.

Allen, Ja. Lane. John Gray: a Kentucky tale of the olden time. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. 218 p. por. D. cl., $1.

John Gray was a schoolmaster in Kentucky one hundred years ago. Disappointed in the girl whom he hoped to marry, he left Lexington and returned to his old home in Mount Vernon. At a most critical time he met George Washington, and from the life and character of the president of the United States he learned to live again. Mrs. Falconer, a lady who had followed her husband to Kentucky, a strong, noble woman, has great influence with John Gray, and her interest in him through her long, useful life is admirably and pathetically told.

Appleton, Rob., (pseud.) Mr. Philip St. Clare: a novel of fashionable life. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1893. c. 4–292 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The scene is Boston; Philip St. Clare, a representative man of his class, and an influential member of the Brahmin Clubs, marries Margaret Lawrence, a society girl, and is seemingly happy until a chance meeting and circumstances conspire to make him return to a questionable allegiance of his bachelor days. In a final episode of this matrimonial venture it is shown that the present conditions and conventionalities of society tend to make marriage in individual cases a failure. By the author of "Mrs. Harry St. John."

Appleton, W: Hyde, ed. Greek poets in English verse, by various translators; ed. with introd. and notes. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 46+360 p. D. cl., $1 50.

The editor has aimed to do for Greek poetry, through the medium of translations, what has been so often done for English poetry—that is, to give to the reader, within the compass of a single volume, some idea of its wealth, and at the same time to stimulate and guide him to further and more thorough reading. He has collected one hundred and seventy-five of the choicest specimens. These represent the Iliad and Odyssey, the Homeric hymns, Hesiod, Pindar, Æschylus, Sophocles, Euripides, Aristophanes, Theocritus, Moschus, Anacreon, Bion, Sappho and several others. They are from the best translators, including Chapman, Pope, Leigh Hunt, Cowper, Shelley, Mrs. Browning, Edwin Arnold, Symonds, Bulwer, Stedman and others. An excellent essay by Professor Appleton is prefaced to the attractive collection.

Argles, Mrs. Marg., ["The Duchess," pseud., now Mrs. Hungerford.] The hoyden: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. 313 p. D. (Lippincott's ser. of select novels, no. 147.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

An impoverished English lord is accepted by a very young girl—"the hoyden"—of plebeian birth but ample means, after confessing he does not love her, but needs her fortune to pay his debts and redeem his ancestral home. Their marriage, beginning in indifference, finally knows many exciting scenes of love and jealousy, complicated by the wiles of a red-haired enchantress; the story is told with a wealth of dialogue and witty badinage.

Argles, Mrs. Marg., ["The Duchess," pseud., now Mrs. Hungerford.] Lady Verner's flight. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., 1893. c. '92. 3–310 p. D. (Broadway ser., no. 19.) pap., 50 c.

A sweet and innocent young girl marries Lord Verner, a notorious rake, supposing him to be a model of all the virtues; he has married her for her money, consequently the process of disillusionment on her part is rapid. To escape from Lord Verner and his vile boon companions Lady Verner runs away and finds a position as housekeeper to a young and handsome country squire. Of course many complications follow, which are related with both wit and humor.

Argyll, Duke of. [G: D. Campbell.] The Highland nurse: a tale. [Also] An eighteenth century Juliet, by Ja. Mortimer. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1893.] c. '91. 2–170 p. S. (Shandon ser., no. 3.) pap., 25 c.

The Highland nurse by the narrator's calculation must have been at least one hundred and ten years old when he first met her. He had heard of her all his life, as from her his grandfather and father had imbibed all the love of the old Scots upon which his imagination had been fed. Descriptions of Scotch scenery and of many fishing excursions lighten the pages. "An eighteenth century Juliet" is a tale of southern France about 150 years ago.

Armstrong, Le Roy. Washington Brown, farmer. Chic., C: H. Kerr & Co., 1893. c. 326 p. D. (Unity lib., no. 26.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A simply told story of the financial tribulations of the wheat-growers of Kansas. Washington Brown was a New England man who went to Kansas in its early days and grew up with the state. Believing the farmers failed in getting a good price for their wheat from not "hanging together" as he called it, he conceives a plan of a wheat "combine" against the speculators, goes to Chicago himself and makes a successful "deal" after being nearly tripped up by a false friend.

Ballantyne, R. M. Hunted and harried: a tale of the Scottish Covenanters. Bost., A. I. Bradley & Co., [1893.] 3+195 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The story opens in Dumfriesshire. After the breaking of the Covenant by King Charles II., it was the custom of the king's troopers to hunt the Covenanters and submit them to a species of torturing called "harrying" in order to compel them to renounce their faith and betray the whereabouts of their fellow-believers. An attempt to secure Andrew Black, a well-known Covenanter, for the sake of "harrying" him, causes the revolt of William Wallace, a king's trooper, who becomes later one of the hated sect. On this incident is founded a story which deals specially with the history of the Covenanters, and which covers that period of Scotch history before and after the death of King Charles II. in 1685.

Balzac, Honoré de. The Brotherhood of Consolation; tr. by Katharine Prescott Wormeley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 4+329 p. D. hf. rus., $1.50.

The scene is laid in the old part of Paris, 1836. The hero, who is only known as Godefroid, is a careless young fellow who has wasted his life and fortune. Dreaming of a newer and better life, and seeking to reduce his expenses by moving into cheaper lodgings, he drifts into the house of Madame De la Chanterie, a beautiful aristocratic woman, past middle age, who is the central figure of "The Brotherhood of Consolation." The little band thus known have all had bitter experiences in life, several of them being noble persons who have suffered through the Revolution. They live as if in a monastery, meditating upon the "Imitation of Christ" and performing wide-spread acts of secret charity among the poor and vicious. Godefroid only learns this and their individual histories after a term of probation. He is given a case to investigate as his initiation into the "Brotherhood." Its details are rich in romance and have a dramatic bearing upon the sad and cruel experience of Madame De la Chanterie.

Balzac, Honoré de. A great man of the provinces in Paris; tr. by Katharine Prescott Wormeley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 5+426 p. D. hf. mor., $1.50.

The second part of "Lost illusions," noticed in "Annual Catalogue," 1893. The story of the poet Lucien Chardon, otherwise de Rubempré, who comes from the provinces to Paris, expecting to obtain fortune and fame through a volume of unpublished sonnets. His poverty and almost hopeless struggles to live bring him into strange companionships and stranger scenes. The picture given of the publishers, booksellers, authors and journalists, owners and editors of newspapers, the writers of plays and the actors in them, belonging to the period—the first quarter of the present century—is a dark one, vice and corruption characterizing both scenes and characters.

Balzac, Honoré de. Lost illusions; tr. by Katharine Prescott Wormeley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 6+416 p. D. hf. mor., $1.50.

Illusions Perdues is in the original in three parts, of which the first and third (Les deux poètes and Eve et David) given in this volume belong consecutively together; the second part, Un grand homme de province à Paris being comparatively an independent history, will be published in another volume. David Séchard, a young printer, struggling to make a living out of the old-fashioned printing "plant" of his father, and Lucien Chardon, his proof-reader, with Lucien's sister Eve, are the principal characters. David loves Eve and is hoping to make a fortune out of an invention for manufacturing paper out of something cheaper than linen rags. Lucien imagines himself a great poet, and is in love with a married woman many years his senior. The avarice and duplicity of the small business man of the province and the social gossip and scandal are depicted with Balzac's usual cynicism.

Balzac, Honoré de. The village rector; tr. by Katharine Prescott Wormeley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 5+346 p. D. hf. mor., $1.50.

This novel forms one in the series of "Scenes from country life" in Balzac's "Comedy of human life." Limoges is the scene, the time 1802. Veronique, the heroine, is the only child of ignorant people, who had accumulated a large fortune in gathering and selling old brass, iron, furniture, etc. Veronique receives an education, and is indulged in many comforts her parents have denied themselves. At sixteen she is married to a rich old banker of about her father's age. The story after this has to do with the double life she leads. While seemingly a saint in her every-day life, which is full of good deeds, she is in secret the mistress of a young workingman. Her remorse, expiation, and confession after her lover's tragical death fill many pages. "The village rector" is a fine character who works a great revolution among the rich and poor of the scene of the story.

Bamford, J: M. The cracked hearthstone. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1893. 4+180 p. il. D. cl., 70 c.

After Hannah and George Standwell were married Hannah insisted on observing a time-honored custom of her family, and kept her hearth uncovered. Soon after the pair become involved in a series of petty quarrels, during one more serious than the preceding ones, simultaneously with some angry words of George's, the hearthstone cracked. The effects of this household catastrophe with George and Hannah's moral deductions are given in a story of English scene.

Bandelier, A. F. The gilded man (El dorado), and other pictures of the Spanish occupancy of America. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 5+302 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Mr. Bandelier has made a careful study of the antiquities and early history of Mexico, New Mexico and the southwestern regions of America, devoting special attention and research to the records of Spanish exploration and conquest on both the American continents. His book may be best described as a series of chapters from this little-known section of American history. "The gilded man," a literal translation of El dorado, is the story of the many Spanish expeditions sent in search of the golden city believed to be hidden somewhere in the New World. This is followed by "Cibola" a narrative of the treasure-hunting expeditions into New Mexico and Arizona, where the mythical "seven cities," also of gold, were said to exist. Other papers deal with equally interesting bits of Spanish-American history, and all are founded strictly upon original documents and early records. Mr. Bandelier is a member of the Archæological Institute of America, and well known as an explorer and archæologist.

Bangs, J: Kendrick. Coffee and repartee N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 4+123 p. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c.

The scene of this witty series of dialogues was the breakfast-table of Mrs. Smither's high-class boarding-house for gentlemen; the characters were the boarders, variously designated by the author as the "Schoolmaster," the "Idiot," the "Minister," the "Bibliomaniac" and the "Doctor." The conversation dwells on many topics, "repartee," in which the "Idiot" carries off the honors, being a strong point with the boarders. The amusing text and equally amusing pictures first appeared on the back page of Harper's Bazar.

Sixteen short stories make up these "Half hours with Jimmieboy," the youngster who has figured in "Tiddledy-wink tales." In camp with a tin soldier and Mr. Bangs' previous books. In the present volume Jimmieboy has many interesting adventures with all sorts of queer folk, meets dwarfs and dude [illegible] and bicyclopedia birds, talks to comets and blank [illegible] and snowmen, visits Frostland, and sees and [illegible] many curious things.

Bangs, J: Kendrick. Toppleton's client; or, a spirit in exile. N. Y., C: L. Webster & Co., 1893. 4+269 p. D. cl., $1.

Hopkins Toppleton's father was the leading member of an important law firm of New York and London. At his death, in order to retain the name of the late senior member, Hopkins is taken into the firm on condition that he lives permanently in London, and seldom appears at his office. With little knowledge of law, and with a keen relish for fun, the surprising aspect of his first case makes a most ridiculous narrative. He is unexpectedly caught in his chambers in the Temple by a client, who retains his services in a suit to regain possession of his body, from which he claims he is exiled. This client, a commonplace English barrister, had been persuaded to vacate his body at intervals in favor of an accomplished but wicked disembodied soul. The latter having achieved brilliant successes under its false guise, had finally made off with the body altogether.

Barine, Arvède. Bernardin de Saint-Pierre; tr. by F. E. Gordon; with a preface by Augustin Birrell. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1893. 14+209 p. D. (The great French writers ser.) cl., $1.

"The life of Bernardin de Saint-Pierre is so unusual, so interesting, so suggestive and amusing, that the grumpiest of Anglo-Saxons need not complain of the fact that no series of Great French writers would be complete which did not contain the name of the author of 'Paul and Virginia.'" So Augustin Birrell says in his interesting preface, and further he remarks: "Saint-Pierre was no ordinary person, either as man or author. His was a strong and original character, more bent on action than on literature. Though a master of style and a great painter in words, he was ever a preacher, a sermonneur, as Sainte-Beuve calls him."

Captain Lambert Curgenven, the third son of a second son, who has apparently no prospects of inheriting the family estates in Cornwall, unexpectedly becomes heir. Soon after he marries the daughter of the village rector, who is wont to assert herself as the "only" Mrs. Curgenven. At a most inopportune moment, however, a lady with a prior claim to this title appears on the scene, and a tragedy follows. The interest henceforth centres in a plot to obtain possession of a will, which it is hoped will settle the disputed question, and in the action of the woman proven to be "Mrs. Curgenven of Curgenven."

Descriptions of characters inhabiting Lisconnel, a forsaken bog district in the County of Connaught, Ireland. Makes clear why so many wanderers leave this unproductive soil for America, and shows with some humorous touches how families decide which of their members shall become emigrants. Introduces several priests, and points out the peculiar duties of their profession in such a neighborhood.

Barnard, Mrs. Helen Pearson. Patty's granduncle. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1893.] c. 2-425 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Patty Lane's granduncle had made a great fortune in Constantinople. To test the love of his nephews, he masqueraded as a deaf old man, bankrupt in health and fortune; one of them turned him out-of-doors, but the other, a poor struggling shoemaker—and Patty's father—gave the old man a cordial reception, and urged him to remain under his roof. Who wins the fortune is told in a tender story, with a good spice of refined humor.

Barnes, Annie Maria, ["Cousin Annie," pseud.] The house of grass: rev. and ed. Nashville, Tenn., Pub. House of the M. E. Church, South, Barbee & Smith, Agts., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 2-336 p. D. cl., $1.

Charlotte Middleton, a girl of eighteen years when the story opens, is the owner of a grass hut constructed by an old slave on her father's plantation in order to humor a whim of "meh missie." This is the scene of several incidents of the story, and is used as a simile. Besides illustrating the plantation life of the southern negro before the war, many well-known institutions of slavery are introduced, and the relation of master and slave is seen from the attitude of the Christian missionary.

This story of a century ago first appeared in 1886. It lends itself easily to illustration, and the artist has shown nice taste in selecting telling scenes. Dedicated to the Holland Society of New York. Printed on good paper with rough margins, whose width sets off the graceful figures which often overrun the type page. Cover decorated with silver and gilt.

Contents: The mate of the Easter Bell; The harvest of faith; A horse for a wife; A tale of two brothers; Romance of two pictures; The story of a wedding; A discovered life; The true Delzel; Earning one's capital; A brave girl; Just as it happened; The hero of Saltham Pit, etc.

Barr, Mrs. Amelia E. A singer from the sea. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1893.] c. 4+346 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The story opens in Cornwall. The heroine, Denasia Penelles, the daughter of a fisherman of St Penfer, is said to charm the fishes into the nets with her beautiful voice and quaint songs; she likewise attracts the admiration of a man whose social position is above her own. Hence a story of love, unforeseen consequences, and a final surprise.

Barr, W: M. Pumping machinery: a practical handbook relating to the construction and management of steam and power pumping machines. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. 447 p. il. O. cl., $5.

This work is essentially descriptive of pump detail; no attempt has been made to enter into the theory and mathematics of pump-construction. It has been prepared for engineers, architects, contractors, plumbers, etc., who have occasion to recommend and use pumping machinery, and who wish to inform themselves regarding pump-construction; being largely descriptive, its illustrations have been made a prominent feature; with few exceptions the illustrations are from pumping machinery actually constructed and in use.

Barrett, Frank. Kitty's father. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1893.] 5–335 p. D. (Holyrood ser., no. 6.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Two card-sharpers, coming at day-break into the English town of Chichester, enter the vicarage garden and while refreshing themselves with the vicar's strawberries witness a horrible scene; a man comes from the vicarage dragging the corpse of an old man which he hides in the well—and the sharpers suppose they see a murderer disposing of his victim. This incident is the basis of the story, two men being suspected of the murder, one of whom of course being innocent. Kitty is an actress, the story of her career carrying the reader behind the scenes of a variety of provincial theatres.

Besides the opening sketch, "An auld licht manse," which introduces the reader again to the neighborhood of "Thrums" and to the "Auld licht" minister, there are a number of funny articles, short stories, and papers on literary subjects such as "The humor of Dickens," "What is Scott's best novel?" "Q," etc. They are all now for the first time collected into book form, and serve admirably to carry out the publishers' purpose of presenting together specimens of each of Mr. Barrie's three different styles of writing.

Barrie, Ja. M. A Tillyloss scandal, [and other stories.] N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1893.] 2–270 p. D. (Belmore ser., no. 17.) pap., 50 c.

Tillyloss was a part of Thrums. "Tammas Haggart," the hero of the first story, which gives name to the book, ran away from his wife in a fit of anger; a thief who robs him of his coat when he is sleeping is found dead with it on him, and buried as "Tammas Haggart." The amusing part is when the hero determines to come back to Tillyloss, and has to prove to his wife and friends that he is not a corpse. The other stories are "Life in a country manse," already published as "An auld licht manse," "How Gavin Birse put it to Mag Lowrie," and about a dozen short sketches in the same vein.

Barrie, Ja. M. Two of them. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1893.] c. 2–282 p. il. D. (Lovell's illustrated ser., no. 16.) pap., 50 c.

The stories embraced in this collection are in the lighter vein of the humorous English journalist rather than in that of the strong and quaint delineator of Scottish character. There are a half dozen sketches of a literary and semi-critical nature, such as "Woman and the press," "A plea for smaller books," "The lost works of George Meredith," "The humor of Dickens," "What is Scott's best novel?" etc.

This masterly biography contains, also, some reminiscences by Rev. S. B. Halliday, Mr. Beecher's assistant in the pastoral work of Plymouth Church. It is, moreover, valuable on account of numerous contributions by distinguished contemporaries of the pulpit orator, which show what a profound impression he made on various gifted minds. It is further enriched by many of Mr. Beecher's characteristic utterances, and contains an account of his closing days. In swift, flowing narrative the author gives the story of Mr Beecher's spiritual inheritance, his interesting early development, his various achievements, sorrows, and triumphs. The main theme of the book is his richly endowed personality, and to a large extent he has been allowed to speak for himself. Copious index.

The story of a young girl brought from Italy to Germany and reared amid scenes and circumstances uncongenial to her nature. Unappreciated and misunderstood, and her acts misinterpreted, she gets the reputation of being a good-for-nothing and mischievous child; but so interesting is her character and so skilfully are her fine traits developed by the author that the reader is surprised by the vision of beauty and truth and heroism which, as the story proceeds, dawns upon the mind. "Miss Mischief" becomes a noble woman, and by her self sacrifice, patience and energy repays a hundredfold all the protection and assistance which have been grudgingly given to her during her childhood.

Bell, Lilian. The love-affairs of an old maid. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 8+188 p. S. cl., $1.25.

"To-morrow I shall be an old maid," writes the author on the eve of her thirtieth birthday. The love-affairs of an old maid are those of other people delightfully told, and full of noble thoughts for the married and unmarried. The chapter headings show the ground covered: Matrimony in harness; Women as lovers; The heart of a coquette; The lonely childhood of a clever child; A study in human geese; A game of hearts; The madonna of the quiet mind; The pathos of faith; The hazard of a human die; In which I willingly turn my face westward.

Two young girls—orphans—whose only home had been an English school in which "the Primitive Gospellers educated the daughters of their missionaries," were elected by the managers to be sent to South Africa to become the wives of two young missionaries already settled there. This is the "promised land," where the heroines' lives are spent; their experience of married life and of life in South Africa is full of dramatic incidents. The author evidently writes from observation, as scenes and characters are new and life-like.

Gerfaut, the hero's name, also signifies a falcon's head, once used in the arms of French royal families. The story is laid in Alsace and Lorraine in the early part of the century. The hero is a literary man of the clique of which Chateaubriand was then the leader. The heroine is a married woman who remains true to her husband although romantically in love with Gerfaut. The end is tragic. The first mingling of the working people and the aristocracy under the Bourbons is described with historically accurate details. First published in New York by Carleton in 1874 under the title of "A fatal passion;" published in London in 1881 as "Lover and husband;" published in Paris in 1858 as "Gerfaut."

The story deals largely with certain phases of the life and habits of the "lower half" in New York City, and portrays in realistic colors the relations which its members not infrequently sustain to the upper classes. The ludicrous side of the deplorable tenement-packing system, as seen in "Mr. Silas Slack;" the criminal relationships existing between "Lawyer Hardangle" and "Shadow," and "Robert Moreland" and "Rachel Underwood," and the pitiable destitution of poor "Mammy," are by no means "phantoms of the mind."

Besant, Walter. The rebel queen: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 4+389 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The rights and wrongs of women is the leading theme in Besant's new novel. It is a story of the present time, occurring chiefly in London, in which many Jewish characters figure, "the People" being strongly contrasted in their virtues and intelligence with the Christian characters, to the latter's disadvantage. Madame Elveda, a Spanish Jewess, separates from her husband after a few months of married life, as she desires independence, her husband refusing to admit her theories of married life as correct or proper. She devotes her life to "the Cause," claiming equal rights for men and women, and writes a book on "The present condition of women." Francesca, her daughter, is brought up on her theories; but as she grows older and finds both a lover and a father, she changes her views. She is "The rebel queen," from a little Oriental play she produces illustrating woman's inferior position in all ages. Many other episodes and characters enrich the narrative.

Three old friends, a doctor, a judge, and a detective, all about fifty years old, are chatting in the judge's home, when a peculiar sound is heard from the room above. The judge goes to find out the cause and soon returns. Again the sound is heard and he sends his friend, the doctor, to attend his wife, who is indisposed. After a long interval the doctor calls and the judge and detective find him with the body of Mrs. Hollingwood, who has been murdered. The detective work in getting at the mystery makes the story.

The first part of the new edition of "The sacred books of the Old Testament" contains the Hebrew text of the book of Job, with notes by Professor Siegfried, of the University of Jena. The Hebrew text fills 27 pages, and the critical notes 21. The composite structure of the book of Job is illustrated by the use of three different colors. The original portions of the poem are printed in black without any additional coloring, while subsequent additions are placed in blocks of different colors—namely, blue, red, or green; blue indicating parallel compositions; red, corrective interpolations conforming the speeches of Job to the spirit of the orthodox doctrine of retribution; and green indicating polemical interpolations directed against the tendency of the poem. The Elihu speeches (chapters 32–37) are given in a special appendix printed in green. Later interpolations and glosses appear in the footnotes.

The aim of the editors of this New Testament series is to emphasize above all the individuality of the separate writers; this is done by indicating by bold type in the text the words which Matthew alone of the New Testament writers employs; by a list of passages peculiar to Matthew; by an estimate of the occurrences of every word; by a summary of prominent examples of Hebraism. After the Greek text of the Gospel of Matthew there are historical and geographical indexes and a vocabulary.

Black, W: Wolfenberg: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. '92. 6+298 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The oriental steamer Orotava, making the round trip from England to the Grecian Isles and returning, stopping on the way at many interesting places, is the scene. Americans and English people make up the characters, the principal ones being Mrs. Dumaresq and her daughter Amélia, from Florida, having in their train Wolfenberg, a celebrated American artist. Between Amélia and Wolfenberg, who is unhappily married, a strong platonic affection exists, which is destroyed by Paul Hitrovo, a young Russian adventurer, who wins Amélia's heart. This is but an outline of a story embracing several pathetic and original character studies and a fresh love-tale.

Boies, H: M. Prisoners and paupers: a study of the abnormal increase of criminals and the public burden of pauperism in the United States: the causes and remedies. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 12+317 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

The views expressed in this study by Mr. Boies were obtained in the pursuance of his duty as a member of the State Board of Public Charities of Pennsylvania, which led him yearly to visit the four hundred and forty-six charitable, reformatory, and penal institutions of the State. He thinks we are too sentimental regarding our paupers and criminals—that we nurse and cherish types that, left to themselves, would go down in the battle of life; he suggests radical changes in treatment and a "positive remedy" for the extinction of these classes. The volume is full of valuable facts and statistics on the many causes of the problems discussed, such as intemperance, immigration, etc.

Bolton, C: Knowles. Saskia, the wife of Rembrandt. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., 1893. 8+133 p. il. por. O. cl., $1.50.

A picture of the home-life of Rembrandt in the quaint Dutch city of Amsterdam, during the years when it led the world in discovery, commerce, and art. Beginning with the dramatic events of the struggle between William of Orange and the Duke of Parma, in which Saskia's father took a conspicuous part, the narrative changes to the home of a great theologian, and finally to the studio of the famous painter. Full-page pictures of Rembrandt's house, his wife, child, and friends lend a vivid reality to the story of their lives, and at the same time show some of the best examples of the artist's work. Mr. Bolton's visits to Amsterdam have made the home of Rembrandt familiar ground. Documents and bibliographical data, [illegible] before so fully given in English, add permanent value to the volume.

Bolton, H: Carrington. A select bibliography of chemistry, 1492–1892. Wash., D. C., published by the Smithsonian Institution, 1893. 13+1212 p. O. (Smithsonian miscellaneous collections, v. 36, no. 841.) pap., $3.50.

The publication of this extensive [illegible] bibliography was made possible by [illegible] of the Smithsonian Institution, to which Mr. [illegible] the ms. compiled by him as a [illegible] successful attempt to [illegible] pal books on chemistry published in Europe and America from the rise of the literature to the close of the year 1892." The term chemistry is taken in its fullest significance, and the bibliography will be found to contain books in every department of chemical literature, pure and applied. A very full subject-index shows the range of topics. The bibliography is confined, however, to independent works and their translations, and does not as a rule include academic dissertations (which are so numerous as to require a special catalogue), nor so-called "reprints" or "separates" (Separat-Abdruks); no attempt has been made to index the voluminous literature of periodicals except in biography. The work is divided into seven sections: Bibliography, Dictionaries, History, Biography, Chemistry, pure and applied, Alchemy, Periodicals. Cross-references are frequently introduced.

Bonner, J: A child's history of France. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 8+406 p. por. il. D. cl., $2.

The author of the "Child's histories of Rome and Greece" has for some time been planning similar histories of modern nations. He gives special prominence to incident, drama, portrait, landscape, romance, and local color, leaving for later learning political doctrine and campaigns with maps and dates. Begins with Clovis, first king of France, in 481, and ends with the battle of Sedan in 1871.

Shows how induction-coils and other electrical apparatus can be used for instructive amusement; gives directions also for making instruments at home from materials obtained at little cost, commencing with the common horseshoe magnet.

Bonney, T. G., ed. The year-book of science. 1892. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. 7+519 p. D. cl., $1.75.

The first issue of the "Year-book of science" was in 1891. This volume follows the same general plan as the previous one, and observes the same limitations of subjects—the topics covered being physics, chemistry, geology and mineralogy, biology, animal and botanical. The twenty papers under these headings by the most prominent writers on the subjects review what the scientists of the world have done in these lines during 1892.

Bonsal, Stephen, jr. Morocco as it is; with an account of Sir Charles Euan Smith's recent mission to Fez. N. Y., Harper, 1893. 6+349 p. por. il. map, cl., $2.

Sir Charles Euan Smith's mission during the past year to Morocco was undertaken to establish a commercial treaty between England and that country; his interview or interviews with Sultan Muley Hassan at Fez and the life at the British mission house at Fez had many picturesque and interesting sides, which Mr. Bonsal, who accompanied Sir Euan Smith, tells with much spirit. He also gives chapters on the history, scenery and inhabitants of Morocco.

quel to "Sheba.") N. Y., Hovendon Co., [1893.] c. '91. 3-345 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

When the story opens in Paris the Countess Pharamond, known as Bessie Saxton in "Sheba," is an acknowledged society leader. At one of her receptions the introduction of the Earl of Amersley, who figured in the former novel as Paul Meredith, the opera singer, revives Australian memories. The renewal of this acquaintance is the indirect cause of a tragedy, and of some of the sensational and sorrowful incidents in Sheba Ormatroyd's romantic love-affair.

Two important laws for the administration of country communities have been lately passed in Prussia. In 1891 an act for the government of country communities in the provinces of eastern and western Prussia, Brandenburg, Pomerania, Silesia, Posen and Saxony, went into force, and in the following year it was extended with like modifications to the province of Schleswig-Holstein. The importance of these acts is not to be underrated, for they put an end to the last remains of the feudal system in Prussia. This paper briefly examines the character of these reforms, both from a political and an historical point of view.

Borrow, G:. The Bible in Spain: the journeys, adventures and imprisonments of an Englishman. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1893. 7+555 p. il. O. cl., $2.

The author of "The gypsies in Spain" published this work in 1842; since that date it has gone through many editions. It consists of a narrative of what occurred to the writer during a residence in Spain, to which country he was sent in 1835 by the Bible Society, as its agent, for the purpose of printing and circulating the Scriptures; it also includes certain journeys and adventures in Portugal.

The author pronounces this a "drama of passion," which, although it has its scene in Rome, has no particular Roman feature. The characters are Venetians and Englishwomen, Poles, Romans, Americans and Frenchmen, who have sought Rome for profit, pleasure or through expediency. Baron Hafner, a European adventurer, whose connection with the scandal of the Credit Austro-Delmate has tarnished his reputation somewhat, is seeking a noble suitor for his beautiful daughter; the others are chiefly engaged in intrigues of various kinds, in which a husband, wife, or lover is being deceived. The time is the present, the actors representing types found in most large cities. Bourget aims to illustrate through them "the permanence of races," the strength of hereditary traits, which awakened through any great passion

Bourget, Paul. Cosmopolis: a novel; from the French, by Cleveland Moffett. N. Y., The Waverly Co., [1893.] 311 p. D. (World lib., no. 22.) pap., 50 c.

Bourget, Paul. The son, (André Cornelis.)

N. Y., The Waverly Co , [1893.] c. 311 p. D. (World lib., no. 21.) pap., 50 c.

When André Cornélis was nine years old his father was murdered. Very shortly after his mother married again. A bundle of letters written by his father to his aunt, after sixteen years, makes André suspicious of his stepfather. He finds the man "had loved his mother madly enough to purchase her at the cost of the murder of his most intimate friend." The end is tragic and a subtile study in psychology. By the author of "Cosmopolis."

Bourget, Paul. Un scrupule: roman. N. Y., Amblard & Meyer Brothers, 1893. c. 99 p. S. (Petite collection Lemerre.) pap., 40 c.

An episode in the life of a Parisian bachelor again shows the subtlety of Bourget's psychological speculations and his audacity in attacking the most delicate situations. The history of a young girl who was spared through the "scruple" of a man of the world, but nevertheless fell victim to her own vanity and love of ease and pleasure. Delicately gotten up in French style. Printed in this country.

After many years' study of Froebel's principles and methods, Prof. Bowen has concluded that his is the only system in which the details of actual practice are the real outcome of sound psychological principles, and in their application are continuously governed by those principles. In this work he has given a complete statement of Froebel's principles and methods as they refer to physical, intellectual, and ethical training, and a brief sketch of his life. At the end of the book there are two short bibliographies—one a chronological list of Froebel's writings (5 p.), the other a list of "Some books on Froebel likely to be of use to students" (3 p.).

Bowles, J: The stormy petrel: an historical romance. N. Y., A. Lovell & Co., [1893.] c. '92. 349 p. 1 il. D. cl., $1.

"The stormy petrel" was a little girl thrown from the deck of a Mississippi steamboat and caught by Frank Clayton, a noble young Kentuckian. Her story, written by a southerner, gives a fair picture of the closing days of slavery. John Brown's raid and death are described in detail. Abraham Lincoln also shapes events in the lives of the actors north and south. The plot is involved but interesting and rests on facts. Dedicated to "An intelligent and united people, north and south."

Peleg Bulkley made millions in real estate bought with thousands earned as merchant tailor in a large western town. The ladies of his family yearned for social recognition, and Mr. Bulkley retired and came to New York City to realize their wishes. Life at a Long Island summer resort and the doings of society are graphically sketched. The hero was born of the "four hundred," but teaches his fiancée to estimate society at its true value. He is a believer in "Toynbee Hall" movements.

Brackett, Miss Anna C., ed. Woman and the higher education. N. Y., Harper, 1893. 10+214 p. T. (Distaff ser.) cl., $1.

The Distaff series, of which this is the initial volume, is made up of representative work of the women of the state of New York in periodical literature, gathered together for the Columbian Fair Exhibit. The literature has been classified under poetry, fiction, history, art, etc., and it is the intention to bring out a volume in each department—a woman of eminent success in each department being asked to make the selection, including in it an example of her own work and placing her name upon the title-page as its editor. After a general introduction by Mrs Blanche Wilder Bellamy and a preface by Miss Brackett are the following papers chronologically arranged: A plan for improving female education, by Mrs. Emma Willard, 1819; Female education, by Mrs. E. C. Embury, 1831; The collegiate education of girls, by Prof. Maria Mitchell, 1880; A new knock at an old door, by Mrs. L. G. Runkle, 1883; A review of the higher education of women, by Mrs. Alice F. Brevans, J. de. The manufacture of liquors and preserves; from the French. N. Y., Munn & Co., 1893. c. 5+200 p. il. S. cl., $3.

The author is an eminent French chemist who has devoted much time and study to the preparation of liquors and preserves. The great value of the work consists in the formulas, which number over 300, and are so arranged that, if the manufacturer has no distilling plant of his own, he can still make many of the liquors from the essences. The book is well illustrated and has numerous tables and a full index. The raw materials, the plant of the distiller, etc., are described according to the best modern practice.

Brewer, R. F. Orthometry: a treatise on the art of versification and the technicalities of poetry; with a new and complete rhyming dictionary. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 12+376 p. D. cl., $2.

In addition to the features mentioned in the title there is a chapter entitled "Bibliography—works on versification" which directs the student to such works on the subject of verse and poetic criticism as have been written since the 16th century.

Bridge, Horatio. Personal recollections of Nathaniel Hawthorne. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 9+200 p. pors. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Chiefly based upon three papers originally written by the author for Harper's Magazine; some new material has been added (including several letters from Hawthorne and General Pierce) now first published. Commodore Bridge, who was a college classmate of Hawthorne, limits his narrative chiefly to matters connected with his college days, and to some incidents in his later career which, he thinks, have not yet been fully recounted by others.

Dr. Briggs made his own defence in his late trial for heresy. His address, given here, fills nearly two hundred pages, and after some preliminary remarks defines his standpoint through extracts from his various writings on the various questions in dispute, and on the different charges against him. These are grouped as: The rule of faith; Is the Bible the only fountain of divine authority?; The reason; The church; The inerrancy of Holy Scripture; The authenticity of Holy Scripture; Who wrote Isaiah?; Progressive sanctification after death.

Contents: 1, The appeal of the so-called prosecuting committee to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, Jan. 18, '93. 2, The argument of Prof. Briggs before the General Assembly against entertaining the appeal, May 24 and 25, '93. 3, The entertainment of the appeal, May 26, '93. 4, The argument of Prof. Briggs before the General Assembly against sustaining the appeal, May 29 and 30, '93. 5, The action of the General Assembly in sustaining the appeal, May 31, '93, and the final judgment of the General Assembly, June 1, '93.

Briggs, C: A:, D.D. The higher criticism of the Hexateuch. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. '92, '93. 9+259 p. D. cl., $1.75.

Ten years ago the author undertook to write a little book upon the higher criticism of the Hexateuch, but finally turned aside from it, believing the times were not yet ripe for it. The circumstances in which Prof. Briggs is now placed make it necessary for him, he thinks, to define his opinion on the Hexateuch; for this reason he presents to the public the results of his studies so far as they have gone. His conclusions as to the composition and authorship of the books are too lengthy for us to quote, but they correspond in the main with the opinions which have been formed independently by leading Biblical scholars in all parts of the world. The work has been written for the general public.

Brimblecom, C: E. An archer with Columbus. Bost., Joseph Knight Co., 1894 [1893.] c. 4+183 p. il. O. cl., $1.25.

A story of a boy who attracted the attention of Columbus while he was seeking the aid of Ferdinand and Isabella for his great voyage of discovery. The wit and courage of the boy enabled him to be of service to the great explorer, and he served as an archer on the vessel of Columbus. His loyalty and devotion through vicissitude and danger, endeared him to his master, and the story of his experiences and exploits will make him a favorite with boys, young and old.

Brisbane, Redelia. Albert Brisbane: a mental biography; with a character study by his wife, Redelia Brisbane. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1893. c. 6+377 p. por. O. cl., $2.

Albert Brisbane was known as a writer and reformer; he felt keenly on all social questions, writing and speaking both in this country and Europe on timely topics. The present work, a résumé of his literary activity and life, reads like an autobiography. It has many interesting points. Mr. Brisbane knew Karl Marx and Krause and Proudhon: he gives an account of the early days of St. Simonianism and Fourierism. The French revolution of 1830 and 1848 are touched upon, and there is a graphic description of the coup-d'etat of Louis Napoleon. He also knew Horace Greeley, John C. Calhoun, Webster, and other public men of the century.

The author has spent thirty years in teaching the English New Testament. He is now in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, at Louisville, Ky. He first used the "Harmony" of Dr. Edward Robinson; then that of Dr. G. W. Clark. After much thought Dr. Broadus in this work divides the ministry of Jesus into well-defined periods, giving less attention to exact chronology, and more to traeing a gradual progress, 1, in his self-manifestation; 2, in the hostility of his enemies; 3, in his training of the twelve Apostles.

Broadus, J: A., D.D. Memoir of James Petigru Boyce, D.D, late president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1893. c. 13+371 p. por. O. cl., $1.75.

Dr. Broadus says: "I have especially tried to represent the environment and development of Dr. Boyce's early life in Charleston, at Brown University, and at Princeton Theological Seminary, and to bring out his labors as editor in Charleston, pastor in Columbia, and professor in Furman University. The part he took in the war and in South Carolina politics is not overlooked. As his recognized life-work was the foundation and establishment of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, a biography of him could hardly fail to comprise a history of that institution."

Brown, Helen Dawes. The Petrie estate. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 4+316 p. S. cl., $1.25.

A mislaid will makes an heiress of Charlotte Coverdale, a Connecticut school teacher. She was the cousin and heir-at-law of James Petrie, who had intended that Richard Waring, a New York journalist, should inherit his fortune. Charlotte institutes great reforms in the Petrie estate, and receives the sympathy and aid of Waring, whose acquaintance she has made, and who lets her remain ignorant of the fact that a will is supposed to exist in his favor. As this will is finally found, and as Waring and Charlotte have learned to love each other, many complications ensue.

Brown, Horatio F. Venice: an historical sketch of the republic. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. 18+434 p. maps, plan, O. cl., $4.50.

"In this volume I proposed to write a biography of Venice, and if it had seemed advisable I should have prefixed that title to my book. Believing that a state is an organic whole, and that such an organism can be more easily studied in a city than in a territorial state, it appeared to me that the Venetian republic presented one of the most striking examples of the inception, birth, adolescence, decline and death of a community which history has to offer for our observation. . . . With this conception in view I have attempted to note the generation and gestation of the race; to display the operation of extrinsic circumstances, such as geographical and natural position, in the formation of its character, to trace the procedure of these intrinsic qualities, such as commercial spirit, scepticism, seamanship, which led the nation to pursue its peculiar line of development. . . ." Contains a list (15 p.) of books on the history of Venice.

In the Middle Ages the mark was, in England and Germany, a tract of land held in common by a community. In this essay Prof. Bryan considers the mark system, its relation to communal ownership, and the theories as to property in land which have arisen from it; he has drawn as far as possible upon original materials, and believes that the subject has an important bearing upon modern questions of land ownership and economics.

The editor of Puck has selected a few ethical situations from among the brightest of Maupassant's inventions and has reproduced them not as translations, but as American stories based on a Frenchman's invention. An introductory chapter gives Mr. Bunner's estimate of Maupassant, whom he considers the best of story-tellers since Boccaccio. The separate stories are entitled: Tony; The prize of propriety; Dennis; The minuet: A pint's a pound; A capture; Uncle Atticus; The Pettibone Brolly; The joke on M. Peptonneau; Father Dominick's convert.

Burch, Florence E. Chris Willoughby; or, against the current: a tale for boys. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1893. 6–399 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Two English school-boys, Christopher Willoughby and Jack Avery, on the last day of their school life, confide to each other their future plans. Young Willoughby declares his determination to earn his living by hard work, fighting "against the current" if need be; his chum prefers to float with the stream, "take things as they come," and enjoy himself. Both have their way; and while one wins independence and respect, the other yields more and more to temptation, sinking from self-indulgence to wrong-doing, until he also learns to fight "against the current."

In no sense a biography, as it merely points out several of the philanthropic enterprises of the richest woman in England at the time when she inherited her grandfather's immense fortune and became head of a financial house second only in importance to the Bank of England. The work done by the baroness for the Church of England, for education, for poor children, for the protection of animals, for honest business, etc., is told in detail.

The story of Mrs. Burnett's life from her third to her fifteenth year reads like one of her own romances. The events are not so unusual as the manner of telling them is attractive. Beginning with one of her first remembrances, the coming of a baby sister, she describes in a charming manner the many little impressions of her life in an English manufacturing town, which afterwards bore fruit in "That lass o' Lowrie's;" then the books she read, her coming to America, and the events attending the writing of her first stories.

Burnham, Mrs. Clara Louise. Dr. Latimer: a story of Casco Bay. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 3+384 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Dr. Latimer, a prematurely gray physician of forty, spends his life in encouraging and helping everybody. Three orphan sisters begin a kindergarten in a little flat on the outskirts of Boston, and Dr. Latimer proves their good genius. The scene changes to Mt. Casco Bay, and the characters all develop during a beautiful summer among the White Mountains. Dr. Latimer's history is a surprise. An encouraging book for women bread-winners.

The "pronunciation print" is an ingenious method of giving the phonetic spelling of words by denoting the silent letters by hair line type, the vowel sounds by diacritic marks, and the placing underneath a letter which gives a wrong sound a small letter which expresses the true sound. In "The step by step primer" only one additional sound is introduced at each new lesson.

A long-felt need will be met by the present volume, which bridges the gap between the Student's Rome and the Student's Gibbon. It is written directly from the original sources, and covers one of the most important periods in Roman history. The writer presents in a clear and interesting style the political, military, and social history of the empire from its foundation to the death of Marcus Aurelius, together with chapters on Roman art, life at Rome, manners of women, houses, baths, the Circus Maximus, and other interesting matters appropriate to the subject.

The author of "The three Miss Kings" tells another charming story of Australia. It is a single character study, sketched with power and delicacy; the "little minx" is the young wife of Jack Primrose who comes out from England to the Colonies to be curate to Archdeacon Brown. Jack has delicate lungs and Nancy is soon a widow, having in the meantime excited the animosity of all the women and won the admiration of all the men through her beauty and vivacity. Her life has many other dramatic events after Jack dies, and a most unexpected ending.

Campbell, Mrs. Helen. In foreign kitchens: with choice receipes from England, France, Germany, Italy, and the North. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. '92. 2+116 p. D. cl., 50 c.

These recipes were prepared originally for The Epicure, a Boston magazine. So many requests have come for them in more permanent shape that they are now gathered in the hope that they will help to vary the monotony of the ordinary menu.

Campbell, Mrs. Helen. Some passages in the practice of Dr. Martha Searborough. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 2–180 p. D. cl., $1.

Little "Dr. Martha" was a sweet, precocious child of ten years, who had even at that early age imbibed the advanced ideas of her father, Dr. Scarborough, and helped in her infantile way to spread them. There is a slight story, which deals with the cure of several inebriates, and with the restoration to health through purely hygienic measures of a little boy, who has been raised on unlimited pie and cake. The book is a plea for better food, better cooking and better living among New England folks.

Campbell, Mrs. Helen. Women wage-earners: their past, their present, and their future; with an introd. by R: T. Ely. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 5+313 p. D. cl., $1.

Originally prepared as a prize monograph for the American Economic Association, receiving an award from it in 1891. The monograph as now given has been nearly doubled in size. The subjects discussed are: Employments for women during the Colonial period, and the development of the factory; Early aspects of factory labor for women; Rise and growth of trades up to the present time; Labor bureaus and their work in relation to women; Present wage-rates in the United States; General conditions for English workers, for continental workers, and among wage-earning women in the United States; Specific evils and abuses in factory life and in general trades; Remedies and suggestions. Appendix contains: Factory inspection law; Authorities consulted and "Bibliography of woman's labor and of the woman question" (10 pages). Index.

The subject of this memoir was a [illegible] of South Carolina and Secretary of the Treasury of the Confederacy during its existence. In addition to the facts of Mr. Memminger's life, the work contains an exhaustive treatise on the Banking System of the United States, a complete history of the financial policy of the Confederate Treasury Department, a synopsis of the great case of the State vs. The Bank of South Carolina, and the argument of Mr. Memminger in that case.

Carew, S. Moore. A conquered self. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1893. 3+182 p. S. (The Tavistock lib.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

Bernice Yorke, daughter of a Lidford bookseller. betrotbs herself to Harold Warren, believing him to be in love with her. Shortly after this event Bernice learns that Harold is actuated by mercenary motives. Her aetion tbereafter is both surprising and self-sacrificing. Tbis story of middle-class English life is chiefly interesting for its ebaracter studies.

Carey, Rosa Nouchette. But men must work. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. '92. 2-197 p. D. (Lippincott's ser. of select novels, no. 143.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The story is related by Miss Osborne, a middle-aged governess, wbo is engaged to give lessons to a young lady curiously backward in ordinary studies, who lives with her mother and sister in a retired corner of a little village not far from London. That there is a mystery in the Hillyard family soon becomes evident to Miss Osborne, and also that this mystery is breaking the hearts of her pupil and her sister, and depriving them of their lovers; this seeret the story very cleverly unravels.

Carey, Rosa Nouchette. Little Miss Muffet. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. '92. 3-328 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Little Miss Muffet had been christened Effie Beresford, and was the only daughter in a happy-go-lucky English country family. She was adored by her brothers and the servants and animals, but was the despair of her conventional mother and her many unsuccessful governesses. She was very clever and incorrigibly idle. At seventeen she is sent to her aunt's to be educated with her model eousin, Virginia. She winds herself about many hearts and at the critieal moment of her life displays heroic unselfishness.

Cassell's new biographical dictionary: containing memoirs of the most eminent men and women of all ages and countries. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 3+741 p. O. hf. mor., $2.50.

A concise, inexpensive biographical dictionary like the present has long been wanted. The publishers have aimed to make it a thoroughly reliable book of reference; it gives particulars of the world's celebrities, whether living or dead, from the earliest times up to the present date. It also gives the pseudonyms of popular writers, with their real names.

Cassidy, J. S., M.D. Elements of chemistry and dental materia medica. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1893. c. '92. 6+364 p. D. cl., $2.50.

Dr. Cassidy is professor of chemistry and materia medica in Ohio College of Dental Surgery. This work was prepared at the solicitations of members of his class; also for the purpose of testing the comparative value to dental students of the two approved didactic methods of teaching chemistry and materia medica, i.e., by lectures and quiz, and by recitation from approved text-books, in connection with suggestive experiments.

"In two ways of becoming a hunter," to which this story is a sequel, we are told how Oscar Preston's desire to become a post hunter is gratified. The present story deals with him after his arrival in Jolesburg, and tells of his adventures in camp and on the Laramie Plains, of some exploits with Indians and soldiers, and finally of his return to Eaton.

Castlemon, Harry, [pseud. for C: A. Fosdick.] Rodney, the overseer; il. by G: C. Whitney. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1893.] c. 3+456 p. il. D. (Castlemon's war ser.) cl., $1.25.

The time is during the Civil War, the scene [illegible]. The hero is Rodney Gray, who left the Military Academy at Farmington in 1861, and went south [illegible] to go with the southern army; the story [illegible] experience as a home guard, and [illegible] incidents connected with the period.

Castlemon, Harry, [pseud. for C: A. Fosdick.] Two ways of becoming a hunter. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1893.] 3+401 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Frank Fuller, of Boston, was sent to Eaton, a little country town, because he was unmanageable. Shortly after his arrival there he confided to his cousin, Leon Parker, a plan which he believed if carried out would make him a successful post hunter. Oscar Preston, also of Eaton, has likewise individual ideas about becoming a hunter. The interest is in the various means used by the two boys to attain the same end and their results.

Catalogue of original and early editions of some of the poetical and prose works of English writers from Langland to Wither; with collations and notes, and eighty-seven fac-similes of title-pages and frontispieces; being a contribution to the bibliography of English literature. N. Y., imprinted for the Grolier Club, 29 East 32d St., 1893. c. 10+240 p. il. O. hf. mor., $10.

Only four hundred copies of this work were printed on Holland hand-made paper, and three copies on vellum. The books described in the catalogue are with very few exceptions the property of members of the Grolier Club. The fac-similes of title-pages introduced, a feature quite common in French bibliographies, has never been extensively employed in any American work of this character.

Catherwood, Mrs. Mary Hartwell. Old Kaskaskia. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 3+200 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Illinois Territory early in the century, with its inhabitants of French Canadian descent, calls out the peculiar talent of the writer of "The lady of Fort St. John." An old French woman of upwards of a hundred years, who is a tyrannical, bed-ridden family autocrat, a half dozen young girls, two totally differing priests, and several strong men are the characters. The flood that swept away old Kaskaskia is described in detail with its far-reaching effects upon the chief characters.

Catherwood, Mrs. Mary Hartwell. The White Islander. N. Y., The Century Co., 1893. c. 6+164 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The Island of Mackinac, washed by the waters of Lake Huron and Lake Michigan, was the White Island. The White Islander was a young white girl who lived her life among the Indians. Through French, British and early American occupation Mackinac was the centre of the fur trade. Indians and traders met there, and it was the headquarters of the American Fur Company. Describes an Indian massacre that took place at the beginning of the century. This historical tale has received commendation from the historian Francis Parkman.

Catholic dogma: the fundamental truths of revealed religion: lectures delivered in 1891 under the auspices of the Church Club of New York. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 11+189 p. D. cl., net, 50 c.

Six lectures, entitled: The nature of dogma and its obligation, by Bishop A. N. Littlejohn; The Holy Trinity, by W. R. Huntington, D.D.; The incarnation, by Alfred G. Mortimer, D.D.; The atonement, by Rev. John H. Elliott; The office and work of the Holy Spirit, by Bishop Davis Sessumo; Grace and the sacramental system, by Rev. G. H. S. Walpole. The aim of these is to state lucidly the fundamental facts of Christianity as they have been revealed to and are taught by the Episcopal Church.

Cauvain, H: A village priest; from the French, by Albert D. Vandam. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1893. 4+205 p. D. (Library of continental authors.) pap., 35 c.

A translation of the original French story on which H. Beerbohm Tree's play of the same name is founded. The vicar of Bonnières is an interesting figure in a social drama in which Count de Tremallién's honor is involved and Jean de Torquenié is the supposed criminal. When the story opens a lapse of twenty years has occurred and the son of a former actor in the dual crime is the means of revealing an intricate plot.

Twenty-one short stories dealing with exciting incidents in the wilds of Australia and with the peculiar conditions of business in its cities. Some of these stories are rather horrifying, but the greater number are interesting, and all are told with spirit. By the author of the two successful plays, "Captain Swift" and "The idler."

Champfleury, [pseud. for J. F. N. Fleury.] The faïence violin: tr. by W: H: Bishop. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 7+170 p. S. cl., 75 c.

How the mania for collecting incites to unscrupulous selfishness is the theme. Fleeing from mammas with marriageable daughters the wearied hero, whose mild passion is shooting, goes from Nevers to Paris, where he is initiated into the mysteries of faïence by a "collecting" friend, who begs him to find him specimens in the old houses of Nevers. The Nevers friend is smitten with the mania and conceals his findings from the Paris friend who puts him on the track of them. Many comical scenes precede the great "find," the "faïence violin."

Champney, Mrs. Elizabeth W. Six boys; il. by Frank T. Merrill. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1893.] c. 6–235 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The "Six boys" were between the ages of twelve and sixteen; they were the minister's son, who was the ringleader in mischief, a farmer's boy, a little Brazilian, and the three sons of a New York millionaire. The plot turns upon a curious story about a diamond necklace, in which the boys are all concerned, and which is quite a thrilling episode.

Continues the history of "Witch Winnie," whose experiences have already run through many volumes. In the present book Winnie leaves her New York studio, goes to Paris with her friends, Millie, Adelaide, and Tib, and establishes herself with Tib in a small atelier in an unfashionable quarter. There is much art-gossip in the story; the girls meet Bougereau, Laurens, Bonheur, and other artists, and Winnie's American unconventionalities bring her into conflict with her prospective mother-in-law and lead to misunderstanding between herself and her fiance. These difficulties will, it is promised, be cleared away in the next volume of the series, which will tell of "Winnie at Versailles."

The two volumes of the first series of "The lover's year-book of poetry" were published in 1891 and 1892. These volumes are made on the same plan, but the selections refer chiefly to "Married-life" and "Child-life." There is a poem for every day of the year, some long, some short. A list of authors is given, also an index of titles and an index of first lines. Bound in green and white cloth with gold stampings.

Chapin, Willis O. The masters and masterpieces of engraving; il. with sixty engravings and heliogravures. N. Y., Harper, 1894 [1893.] c. 10+266 p. Q. leath., $10.

A history of the art of engraving from the earliest rude efforts to the wonderfully perfect achievements of our own time. The illustrations consist chiefly of reproductions of some of the representative works of the masters of the art at different stages of its development, and are in themselves an interesting and delightful study. The works of Albert Dürer, of Hans Holbein, and of the other famous wood-cutters of the sixteenth century, and even those of Bewick and the engravers who aided in the revival of the art at the beginning of the present century, are brought into sharp contrast with the delicate specimens of workmanship produced by living American artists.

Chittenden, L. E. Personal reminiscences, 1840–1890; including some not hitherto published of Lincoln and the war. N. Y., Richmond, Croscup & Co., 1893. c. 8+434 p. por. O. cl., $2.

Written in the same spirit and on the same plan as Mr. Chittenden's "Recollections of President Lincoln and his administration;" contains a large amount of Lincoln matter not embraced in the first work. The "study" which closes the book, and which fills seven chapters, is, as the author states, "an attempt to show what the qualities were which made Mr. Lincoln great —which as a political leader, an orator, a writer of English prose, a statesman, a military strategist, a friend and benefactor of humanity, so elevated and made him the foremost man of his time." Other chapters offer reminiscences of events in the late war and actors in them, and also go back to the author's youth, describing political and social phases of the time.

Chittenden, L. E. An unknown heroine: an historical episode of the war between the states. N. Y., Richmond, Croscup & Co., 1893. c. 314 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A true history, which reads like a romance. The "unknown heroine," Mrs. Betty Van Metre, was a Virginia woman living in the Shenandoah Valley, whose husband was in the Confederate army. She finds a wounded Union officer, Lieut. Bedell, of a Vermont regiment, in a deserted farm-house, and nurses him back to life, in her own home, risking her life many times to obtain for him necessary food and medicines. She aids him to get back within the Union lines, and accompanies him there, hoping to find her husband, of whom she has lost all account for many months. Secretary Stanton orders her husband to be exchanged for Lieut. Bedell, and gives her authority to visit every camp and prison or hospital in the north till she finds him. This is only the outline of a story full of intense interest and the most romantic and dramatic details. Portraits are given of Mrs. Van Metre and Lieut. Bedell, and Mr. Chittenden vouches that the whole story is substantially true.

"The Danvers jewels" and "Sir Charles Danvers," reprinted here in 1890 and first published anonymously, are by Mary Cholmondeley, the author of "Diana Tempest." This is a novel of many incidents showing an intimate knowledge of English fashionable life. The plot turns upon the disinheriting of a younger brother by an elder, and the attempt of the former to have his brother's young son—who is thought to be illegitimate—put out of the way.

It is only recently—though Macaulay and Carlyle led the van—that historians have had the wisdom to tell the truth of this English hero. Dr. Clark's study, largely based on Carlyle's collection of Cromwell's letters and speeches, is a careful summary of the life and times of the Lord Protector; the book is not a eulogy, but a statement of fact, and aims to rescue from the false environment that prose and poetry have alike thrown about the great Protector, "the life-story of a hero, the character of a man."

The Bank of England once issued two notes of a million pounds each. Two rich Englishmen—brothers—fell into a dispute as to what would become of an honest stranger turned adrift in London with no money but one of these million-pound bank-notes, and no way to account for his being in possession of it. They buy one of these notes, find the man—a young American—to experiment with and to decide which theory is the true one. The first story relates his adventures. Of the other stories, many have never before appeared in book form. They are called: "A cure for the blues," "About ships from Noah's Ark to the vessels of to-day," "Playing courier," "The German Chicago," "A majestic literary fossil," "Letter to Queen Victoria," "The enemy conquered" and "Mental telegraphy."

Clifford, Mrs. W. K. A wild proxy: a tragic comedy of to-day. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 2+288 p. D. cl., $1.

A strange escapade which leaves the reader in doubt as to the hero's sanity gives title to the story. This character, by name Frank Merreday, a young Englishman of birth and means, pervades the narrative; he is wildly eccentric, being one of those peculiar combinations of opposite qualities which Mrs. Clifford depicted in "Aunt Anne." He is the bad influence in the lives of several women, and almost succeeds in breaking the heart of the young bride of his cousin Laurence Halstead.

Cobb, Weldon J. The victim of a crime. Chic., E. A. Weeks & Co., 1893. c. 3-369 p. D. (Melbourne ser., no. 13.) pap., 25 c.

The hero is the victim of a conspiracy and has just escaped from prison when the story opens. His attempted rescue and supposed death throw his persecutors off his track and they resume their unscrupulous schemes of robbing a rich young girl in whom he is interested. There is a long succession of sensational incidents before the mystery is explained. The scene is Chicago and the Exposition grounds.

Isabel is a very talented English girl who at the age of twenty-four is instructor in a teacher's institute. Her burden is an opium-eating father, who in his lucid intervals composes a book on transcendentalism. A black servant disturbs the family peace, leads his master into disastrous cotton speculations and almost breaks up an ideal home. Isabel conquers her father's weakness, builds an institution for aged governesses, and at the last is saved from sacrificing herself and her lover to a mistaken sense of duty.

Collingwood, W. G. The life and work of John Ruskin. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 2 v., 14+260+21; 5+261–565+21 p. por. il. O. cl., $5. Large-pap. ed., limited to 250 copies, cl., net, $15.

Those who in any adequate degree appreciate Mr. Ruskin will heartily welcome the two volumes in which Mr. W. G. Collingwood, for many years his secretary, describes his life and work. The four books into which the volumes are divided relate to (1) The boy poet [1814–1842]; (2) The art critic [1842–1860]; (3) Hermit and heretic [1860–1870]; (4) Professor and prophet [1870–1892]. Mr. Collingwood has had access to much important material, but has not included a large number of Mr. Ruskin's letters; to these he has added letters of biographical interest by Carlyle and Browning. The great interest of Mr Collingwood's work is supplemented by several portraits of Mr. Ruskin and some other illustrations. An appendix, contains a chronology, a bibliography (7 p.) of Ruskin's writings, and "a catalogue of drawings by Mr. Ruskin."

Columbus, Christopher. The letter of Columbus on the discovery of America: a fac-simile reprint of the pictorial edition of 1493; with a literal translation and an introd. 2d ed. N. Y., printed by order of the Trustees of the Lenox Library, 1893. 48 p. D. pap., 25 c.

This scholarly work has been edited for the library by Mr. Wilberforce Eames, the assistant librarian of the Lenox Library and editor of Sabin's "Dictionary of books relating to America." It is a fac-simile reprint of the edition of the Latin version of Columbus' letter to Gabriel Sanchez, which is supposed to have been printed at Basle in 1493, and of which the only perfect copy is in the Lenox Library. To this Mr. Eames has added a translation in English, which though termed "new" on the title, is, we believe, the first translation this edition has ever received. In the appendix is given a second printing of the original Latin of this edition, and in opposite pages are printed the reprints of the three Latin editions printed in Rome in 1493, thus enabling the student to detect, almost at a glance, the variations in these four texts.

"The object of this work is to elucidate the teaching of Jesus and to present both in their relation to it and to one another the principal types of religious doctrine contained in the New Testament. The pursuit of this object has led to a consideration of the resemblances and differences which exist between the word of the Master and the interpretations of it by his followers who composed the several writings of that book. While the classification of the New Testament literature results from critical processes, it was not consistent with the limits proposed to enter upon a detailed discussion of them, and no more has been attempted in this direction than to present those grounds of the classification adopted which are apparent from an analysis of the writings."—Preface.

Cooke, J: Esten. Beatrice Hallam: a novel. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 14–332 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The scene is Virginia, in the colonial days, 1763. Beatrice Hallam, an actress in Hallam's company, captivates Champ Effingham, on the Williamsburg road, and later makes a still greater conquest of the young man's heart by her rendering of Portia. His actions under these circumstances are the cause of a duel, and bring about other sensational and sentimental consequences in the life of Beatrice.

Coppée, François. True riches. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 4+168 p. S. (Appleton's summer ser.) cl., 75 c.

A former criminal, anxious to make restitution, carries a sum of upwards of 2,000,000 francs to a French priest in Paris, begging him to distribute them at four addresses. The visits are described, and in all cases the happiness of the people did not depend upon money. "A cure for unhappiness," the second story, conveys the same lesson.

Coppée, H: General Thomas. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 11+332 p. por. D. (Great commanders ser., no. 5.) cl., $1.50.

General Thomas achieved a record unrivalled in the history of the late war. His classmate and comrade, General Sherman, in announcing his death to the army, spoke of him as one who "never wavered in battle; who was firm and full of faith in his cause; who never sought advancement of rank or honor at the expense of any one; who was the very impersonation of honesty, integrity, and honor; and who stands as the beau-ideal of the soldier and gentleman." This volume gives the principal events of his life, in the condensed manner of the rest of the series. Many authorities have been consulted.

Corelli, Marie. Barabbas: a dream of the world's tragedy. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1894 [1893.] c. 317 p. D. cl., $1.

With original imagination the story of the crucifixion is told. Pilate, Caiaphas, Judas Iscariot, Barabbas, the robber, etc., are given motives by the author for their actions in the world's tragedy that serve to point a deep lesson for humanity. Melchior, one of the "three kings from the east," is the monthpiece of the author's philosophy. The sister of Judas Iscariot is made prime mover in inciting the Jewish mob. The leading thought is that priestcraft, of whatever faith, always stands in the way of the truth that will benefit all mankind and make them brothers.

Corelli, Marie. Wormwood: a drama of Paris. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1893.] 10+421 p. D. (Belmore ser., no. 12.) pap., 50 c.

A young, prosperous banker of Paris is informed by his fiancée that she has been seduced by his friend, an unusually gifted man studying for orders in the Roman Catholic Church. In the first moment of despair he meets a wild artist friend, who leads him to drown his trouble with absinthe. The rest of this powerful story full of tragedy is a study of the life of a man given to indulgence in absinthe, which the author thinks the curse and sure to be the ultimate ruin of the French nation.

His heart is so little in his work that his uncle yields to his wish to take a long sea-voyage, and induces John Cabot to give him a place on one of his ships sailing to Venice and the Levant. Diccon has an adventure with Sebastian Cabot before sailing, afterwards falls in with pirates and his ship the Catherina is sunk, and he is washed up on the coast of Spain. In Spain he meets Christopher Columbus, and accompanies him on his first voyage to America.

Coues, Elliott. History of the expedition under the command of Lewis and Clark to the sources of the Missouri River, thence across the Rocky Mountains and down the Columbia River to the Pacific Ocean, performed during the years 1804–5–6, by order of the government of the United States. New ed., reprinted from the only authorized ed. of 1814. N. Y., Francis P. Harper, 1893. c. 4 v., 132+352; 4+352-820; 5+820-1298; 1298-1364 p. por. O. bds., [ed. of 200 on linen paper,] net, per set, $25; [ed. of 800 on laid paper,] net, per set, $12.50.

The history of the expedition of Lewis and Clark is the official narrative of the first white men who ever crossed the continent of North America, from the Mississippi River to the Pacific Ocean between the parallels of about 38° and 52° north. It was the first governmental exploration of the great west, then all included under the name of Louisiana. The courage, fortitude, skill, and good fortune with which the famous expedition was conducted to a successful issue, with scarcely a casualty, for over 3000 miles and back, have never been surpassed in the annals of exploration. No complete and perfect edition of the work has appeared until now since the original edition of 1814. Among other features the present edition comprises a copious critical commentary, prepared upon examination of unpublished official archives and many other sources of information, including a diligent study of the original manuscript journals and field notebooks of the explorers, together with a new biographical and bibliographical introduction, new maps and other illustrations, and a complete index.

A story in the interest of the great association of "Christian Endeavorers;" how the associates got a footing at the Corners; how they contended with discouragements, had their ups and downs, their trials and their triumphs, is all told in the homely dialect and Down East talk of good Jonathan Hayseed, farmer, reformer, humorist, and a Christian.

Cowles, M. L. Redbank: life on a southern plantation. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1893. c. 370 p. D. cl., $1.

A quiet story of rural home life in Georgia after the war. There is no manifestation of sectional feeling and the incidents are few, but the ordinary routine of southern country life is well described. The plantation of Redbank is the impoverished and not especially happy home of Jessica Holcombe and her brother, whose carelessness and dissipation wreck his life. Jessica's love-story is a happier one.

The dates of these letters run from 1765 to 1791, and belong to the latter part of Cowper's life, when he began to write and publish poetry. They are addressed to his cousin Lady Hesketh, to Joseph Hill, the Rev. William Cawthorne Unwin and others. They tell the uneventful story of his life, and show him to have been of a gentle, lovable nature, guided by a cheerful philosophy, and possessing a sound good sense.

In the introductory notice to each author only so much of biographical detail has been given as may enable the reader to judge the general circumstances of the author's life and surroundings and the scope of his work; and to this is added a critical description of his style and methods and of his place in the development of English prose. It is thought that the specimens thus brought together may prove useful to the student of our literature as a supplement to the histories of that literature now chiefly in use.

Crawford, F. Marion. The children of the king: a tale of southern Italy. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c.'92. 4+320 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1.

In the little town of Verbicara in Calabria there is a family who have worn for many generations the name of Dei Figli del Ré—"The children of the king." Whether a king had founded their race is not now known, but they were considered something above ordinary mortals. Two brothers, Ruggiero and Sebastiano, the present descendants of this family, are the heroes. Ill-treatment forced them to run away from Verbicara when boys, and after many years of adventure on the sea they came to Sorrento one summer, and now sail the pleasure-boats for visitors. Here the chief episode of the story takes place. It relates to Ruggiero's love for the Signorina Beatrice, a beautiful heiress, whose mother is trying to obtain rank for her by marrying her to the Count of San Miniato, a libertine and a gambler.

Crawford, F. Marion. Marion Darche: a story without comment. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 2+309 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1.

Marion Darche is the ill-mated wife of the defaulting treasurer of a large manufacturing concern. He finally wrecks it, is sentenced to a term in the penitentiary, but through the connivance of his wife escapes from the law officers on his way to prison, and dies on the Patagonian shore. Marion's senile father-in-law and her friends Dolly Maylands, a former schoolmate, Harry Brett, an admirer and slighted suitor who in the end succeeds in wooing her, and Russell Vanbrugh, a criminal lawyer, are the characters in a rather commonplace story. The scene is laid in New York City.

Crawford, F. Marion. Pietro Ghisleri. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. '92. 2+429 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1.

In Pietro Ghisleri is presented a strong character study of a man of the world, moving in the same circles of Rome to which the Saracinesca and Montevarchi families belong. He is a very human mixture of good and bad, the good predominating—his career being entirely influenced by the women he loves and who love him. The story deals only with love and intrigue and includes several good character studies besides that of Pietro—notably Laura Carlyon and her half-sister Adele, the children of an Englishwoman married to the Prince of Gerano. Laura is the daughter of the princess' first husband, an Englishman—her quiet, domestic character forming an interesting contrast with the jealousy, duplicity and meanness that characterize Adele. A number of the characters of the "Saracinesca" novels reappear in minor parts.

In a beautiful rural district of Georgia, Elizabeth, the village school-teacher, had grown up surrounded by family love and imbued from earliest youth with a wholly spiritual view of life. Longing to benefit her fellow-men with the theories of Christian science received from a school-mate she leaves her home and becomes companion to a nervous hypochondriac. Afterwards she devotes herself to a lame boy in New York City. The strain of fashionable New York life upon her theories is great. Again at home she meets the deciding crisis of her life.

Captain Hope, just returned from India, through a pardonable mistake makes the acquaintance of and learns to love the granddaughter of an elderly retired officer. The unexpected developments of their chance meeting are brought out in a novel, in which an irascible grandparent, a scheming relative, and a parrot have important parts.

The characters of these eight stories are Anglo-Indians, and the scenes the English stations in India, or the steamers going out to India. The first, which gives name to the volume, "To let," is a gruesome ghost story. "Mrs. Raymond" painfully depicts the probable fate of an English girl entrapped into a marriage with an East Indian of wealth and rank. In addition to these are: "The secret of the amulet," "The former passengers," "If you see her face," "The other Miss Browne," "The Dâk bungalow at Dakor," and "The Khitmatgar."

Crommelin, May. Mr. and Mrs. Herries: a novel. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., [1893.] 2+250 p. D. (Mayflower lib., no. 8.) pap., 30 c.

Stephen Herries, after a disappointment in love, marries a little sixteen-year-old heiress—who has been in a manner bequeathed to him by her grandfather—hoping to retrieve his fallen fortunes. Later her entire fortune is lost in a bank failure, and Mr. and Mrs. Herries retire to a cottage in the north of England, where the story follows them through a series of mutual mistakes and misconceptions to final wealth and happiness—a result chiefly brought about by the girl-wife's affection and practical common sense.

Patricia, Helen, Annis, Bobby, and Paul, while in search of a real "Bogy" find their way through a hawthorne hedge into a quaint old garden, where they imagine this personage exists. The search ends with a gratifying adventure, and is the final cause of an invitation to tea being extended to the entire party. During this tea "Bogy" tells the children how to obtain and keep the "gentle heritage." Their quaint way of interpreting his beautiful conception is described in a story with a moral.

He arranges for consideration those facts which must determine a "rational" use of the Scriptures; and in this respect the bearing of the discoveries by new scholarship on the world's uses of the Bible from now onward is what is most distinctive in the book.

It was during this tour that he collected the material from which this volume is made up. It consists of humorous sketches, and equally humorous text delineating actual scenes and places and prominent people of the time. Pen and pencil supplement each other in a clever, attractive style.

Curry, E. S. Can she forgive? N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 160 p. il. D. cl., 60 c.

A simple story of lower-class London life, tracing the fortunes of a young couple introduced on their wedding-day. The young wife soon finds her husband intemperate and a gambler; then follows suffering and humiliation on her part, flight, long separation, the husband's repentance and sorrowful search and final reunion for a happier future, darkened only by the shadow of the question, "Can she forgive?" The story points morals against hasty marriages, intemperance, and gambling.

The volumes which will make up this work—it is not yet stated how many there will be—will comprise a selection of Mr. Curtis' chief orations and other discourses from 1856, when he was thirty-two years old, to 1892, the year of his death. In an editorial note, prefacing the 1st volume, Mr. Norton says: "The range of the subjects dealt with in these addresses is wide, but the spirit which pervades them gives unity to the collection. It is the spirit of a lover of his country, firmly convinced of the validity of the fundamental principles of American democracy in its highest sense, and believing, consequently, in the indissoluble connection of morals and politics."

Czapski, Count Nepomuk. All or nothing: a novel; after the Russian, by Meta de Vere; il. by Walter M. Dunk. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, [1893.] c. 4–358 p. D. (Ledger lib., no. 91.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The scene opens in Moscow in 1879, although the action is in both St. Petersburg and Moscow. The novel is founded on a tragedy of Russian history, the assassination of Alexander II. Incidents preceding and succeeding this event, especially the ascension to the Russian throne of Alexander III., are interwoven with the love-story of Prince Peter Michnelow, whose motto is "All or none," where love is at stake. Celebrated Russian nobles and noted Nihilists are introduced.

Daily food for Christians: a promise and another scriptural portion for every day in the year, with the verse of a hymn. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1893.] 192 p. il. T. cl., 75 c.

Daintrey, Laura. Gold: a novel. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1893. c. 5–316 p. D. (Daintrey ser.) pap., 50 c.

In one of the colossal dry-goods establishments of New York City the story opens. Its head, worth $22,000,000, is murdered on the Christmas eve that witnessed the burning of the Hotel Royal. The suspected murderer can only clear himself by proving where he spent that night. How he is cleared brings out the different quality of love two women have for him. New York society women make a sorry show in Miss Daintrey's new exposure of life in a great city.

Dale, Darley. Lottie's wooing. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 5+371 p. D. cl., $1.

Lottie is the leading spirit in her fatherless family. Having taken a house in the beautiful Derbyshire country of England, Lottie makes up her mind to marry the landlord for the good of her incompetent family. The tricks and manœuvres she resorts to in her scheme to win this middle aged, well-balanced man are the substance of a well-planned story. Needless to say she is successful, and the confessions of the lovers at the end are quite amusing.

Daly, C: P. The settlement of the Jews in North America; ed. with notes and appendices by Max J. Kohler. N. Y., Philip Cowen, 213 E. 44th St., 1893. c. 18+171 p. O. cl., $1.50.

This monograph upon the achievements of the Jews in this country has been out of print for twenty years. It is now reprinted with an introduction by the editor, based on a paper upon "The beginnings of New York Jewish history," read in 1892, in Phila., before the American Jewish Hist. Soc., fuller notes, a continuation of the narrative through 1893 by Judge Daly, including sketches of prominent New York Jews. The appendices embrace some legal information concerning Jews.

Dana, Mrs. W: Starr. How to know the wild flowers: a guide to the names, haunts and habits of our common wild flowers; il. by Marion Satterlee. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 15+298 p. il. D. cl., net, $1.50.

Mrs. Dana describes more than four hundred varieties of wild flowers, making them easily recognizable; they are classified by color. The romantic, literary, legendary, and other associations of each are referred to, giving the book a value for the library as well as for the field.

Danaher, Franklin M. Manual for the court of Albany. Alb., Ja. B. Lyon, pr., [F. M. Danaher, Room 41, cor. So. Pearl and Norton Sts.,] 1893. c. 58 p. O. hf. slp., subs., $2.

Dandelyon, Ritter, (psend.) Rheingrafenstein: a romance of the eleventh century. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1893. c. 6-314 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The heir of Rheingrafenstein, an old German castle, was summoned from his monastery to his father's death-bed. He there met his beautiful young stepmother. The incidents of the Crusade of 1096 under Godfrey of Bouillon furnish the setting for a romantic tale of love and war.

Daniel, C: Ai: a social vision. Phil., Miller Pub. Co., 2006 N. 29th st., 1892 [1893.] c. 296 p. S. cl., $1.

A plan for the social reform of Philadelphia is offered in the story of "Ai," who begins his work of regeneration in Minister St., a narrow lane in the vicinity of Seventh and Lombard Sts. His successful efforts in that locality are finally the cause of the people electing him bishop. In his conception of the part is seen the overthrow of many cherished social and religious institutions of Philadelphia. The time of the story is supposed to be 1950, after Ai, with the co-operation of the heroine, Enid Burr, has established a City of Brotherly Love. The localities mentioned are well-known streets mostly in the old city proper.

Daniel, Rev. J. W. A ramble among surnames. Nashville, Tenn., Pub. House of the M. E. Church, South, (Barbee & Smith, Agts.,) 1893. c. 2-208 p. D. cl., 80 c.

The origin and signification of surnames are discussed at length in this volume.

Daniel, Lizzie Cary, comp. Confederate scrap book: copied from a scrap-book kept by a young girl during and immediately after the war, with additions from war copies of the Southern Literary Messenger and Illustrated News, loaned by friends, and other selections as accredited: published for the benefit of the Memorial Bazar held in Richmond, April 11, 1893. Richmond, Va., J. L. Hill Printing Co., 1893. 7+256 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.

Contains the farewell addresses of Generals Lee, Mosby, Magruder, Kirby Smith, Commander Maury at sea, the last words written by Stonewall Jackson, etc., etc. Also, "The form of parole," "Reward for Mr. Davis," "The amnesty proclamation," the "Order forbidding wearing the gray," the "Jeff Davis bond," "The Richmond Examiner's famous convention of beasts," "The constitution of the Confederate states and that of the United States compared," and a number of Confederate war poems and songs.

Daniels, Mrs. Cora Linn. As it is to be. Franklin, Mass., published by Mrs. Cora Linn Daniels, 1893. 200 p. il. por. 12°, cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Dante Alighieri. The divine comedy of Dante Alighieri: translated into English verse by T: W: Parsons; with a preface by C: Eliot Norton, and a memorial sketch by Louise Imogen Guiney. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 17+353 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Dr. Parsons was a devoted student of Dante, and translated the Inferno and most of the Purgatorio, but unfortunately did not complete the translation of the Paradiso. The finished portion of the work is now published with an introductory essay by Prof. Norton, who is widely known as one of the foremost of living scholars of Dante. The translation, while reproducing Dante's poem with admirable fidelity, is singularly free from the clumsiness and infelicities which disfigure many translations otherwise good. It is vigorous, stately, fluent, and highly poetical. An appendix contains some notes by Dr. Parsons on Dante, and paraphrases by him of portions of the Paradiso.

Dare, Arline. Both were mistaken: a novel. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 4-287 p. D. pap., 50 c.

One of the "millionaire swells" of New York City finds he has a heart, but the girl who touches it has none, and they ruin each other's lives. The scene shifts, and the sensational story ends in tragedy in Mexico.

Darwin, C: Charles Darwin, his life told in an autobiographical chapter and in a selected series of his published letters; ed. by his son, Francis Darwin. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. '92. 8+365 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

In preparing this volume, which is practically an abbreviation of the "Life and letters" (1887), Mr. Darwin's aim has been to retain as far as possible the personal parts of his father's autobiography. To render this feasible, large numbers of the more purely scientific letters are omitted, or represented by the citation of a few sentences. The part of the story relating to the writing of the "Origin of species" is one of special interest as a turning-point in Darwin's life, has been told with nearly the full amount of [illegible] detail.

Eighteen selections from Daudet's most popular stories. The preface and introduction give an excellent estimate of Daudet. The annotator's [illegible]

French in Yale University and his notes are very practical A list of works of reference, an index of derivations, a grammatical and historical index, an index of proper names, an index of idioms and a chronologieal bibliography of Daudet's writings (2 pages) are iueluded.

Daudet, Alphonse. Letters from my mill: tr. by Frank Hunter Potter; with il. in color by Madeleine Lemaire, and decorative headpieces by G: Wharton Edwards. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. c. 3-263 p. por. O. cl., $4; large-pap. ed., $10.

Alphonse Daudet came into possession of an old windmill in the valley of the Rhone, abandoned for more than twenty years. From this beautiful spot in Provence he writes descriptions of that poetic region, its manners, customs, people, poets, and other attractions. Beautifully printed and illustrated in color.

Davies, T: A. A Biblical discovery: am I Jew or Gentile? or, the created origin of the races. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, [1893.] c. 2+187 p. D. cl., $1.

The author has worked for forty years to gather his evidence agaiust the accuracy of the Bible as it appears in the received translations. He believes that Adam was a name given to the created heads of five races of the human family, and that "The Adam," the husband of Eve, was the head of the Hebrew Jewish line only. He points out the need of a Bible that will give a correct account of the creation and a correct genealogy of Jesus Christ, and thinks the clergy and churches should be assisted towards that end.

Davis. Rev. F. S. The master sower. Cin., Cranston & Curts, 1893. c. 196 p. D. cl., 75 c.

The author explains how "the principles of the Christian religion are strikingly like principles of germination and growth in material nature. Christian truths germinate, grow, and multiply in a single soul, and in the souls of the human race en masse." He reads the "parable of the sower" in the light of events that have occurred in the religious world in eighteen centuries.

Davis, J. C. Bancroft. Mr. Fish and the Alabama claims: a chapter in diplomatic history. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 2-158 p. por. D. cl., 75 c.

The settlement of the Alabama claims is one of the most conspicuous landmarks in the diplomacy of the United States. It was largely due to Hon. Hamilton Fish, at that time secretary of state, and is one of the surest of his claims to gratitude and to enduring fame as a statesman. Mr. Davis has had long and intimate connection with the State Department, and his discussion of this subject is very full, and based on thorough acquaintance with it in all its political and personal relations, and is a valuable contribution to our diplomatic history.

Davis, Noah K. Elements of deductive logic. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 10+208 p. D. cl., 90 c.

The author is professor of moral philosophy in the University of Virginia. The book is designed as a text-book for undergraduates. A peculiar feature is a praxis appended to each chapter which, worked alone "without any recitation of the text, will insure a more satisfactory knowledge of elementary logic than the closest reproduction of the text, the praxis being omitted." The severity of the subject is mitigated by copious illustrations.

Davis, R: Harding. The rulers of the Mediterranean. N. Y., Harper, 1894 [1893.] c. 6+228 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Descriptive papers in which Gibraltar, Tangier, Malta, the Suez Canal, Cairo, Athens, Constantinople, and many other localities famous in the story of the Mediterranean and its peoples are sketched as they are and seem, with brilliant color and literary impressionism.

Davis, T: The patriot Parliament of 1689; with its statutes, votes and proceedings; ed. with an introd. by Sir C: Gavan Duffy. N. Y., P. J. Kenedy, 1893. 95+172 p. sq. S. (The new Irish lib., no. 1.) pap., 50 c.

The writer of this little book, who offers an unprejudiced account of the "Popish Parliament of James II. in Ireland," was the youngest son of a family who were Protestants, and belonged to the party of Protestant ascendancy in Ireland; his father was an Englishman and an officer in the British army. While in college he spent most of his leisure time studying for himself the problems of Irish history; he died in his thirty-first year, three years after this inquiry into James' Parliament was written His judgment here expressed is, that this Parliament, "so long and so shamefully misrepresented was, to a notable degree, just, reasonable, and patriotic;" that it was "more moderate and honest, and essentially fairer, than the English Parliaments which preceded and followed it in order of time."

Dawson, Daniel L. The seeker in the marshes, and other poems. [2d ed.] Phil., Rees Welsh & Co., 1893. c. 10-158 p. 1 il. D. cl., $1.50.

"The volume contains about fifty selections, ranging from gay to grave, and presenting types of epic and lyric verse. . . . Much the best work in the book is to be found in the poems upon Norse mythology. The author is deeply read in Scandinavian lore, and reads modern meanings into the strange legends of the Northland. The title poem, 'The seeker in the marshes,' 'Childe Roland bides the weird,' 'The banner of the Ruddy Fox,' 'The doom-word of Tristan,' 'Childe Roland rides,' and 'Fragment of a Norse epic,' are poems in the style of William Morris, admirable in their interpretation of northern romance and fable, and at times faultless in their perfect symmetry of verse."—*Phila. Dawson, Ernest. and Moore, Arthur. A comedy of masks: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 2+304 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 124.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

There is very little comedy in this quaint story of a young English artist who calmly appropriates other men's ideas, wins wealth, success, and distinction by unscrupulous effrontery, and finally permits his nearest friend to bear the stigma of his own wrong-doing. He is finally unmasked, but the wrong is then past mending. "A tragedy of masks" would be a better title.

A story of Minneapolis, Minn., illustrating the hardships and injustice which the law often visits upon a man placed upon trial for a criminal offence who has neither friends nor money. The hero of the story is the victim of a conspiracy which makes him appear guilty of assault and robbery.

Dearborn, Laura. (pseud.) At the threshold. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1893. c. 5+144 p. nar. D. (The unknown lib., no. 20.) cl., 50 c.

A romance of the infinite, in which the writer conveys her ideas on immortality, judgment, and eternal happiness. A soul, severed by death from the body, enters immortal life, journeys past successive spheres, each of which marks an advance in spiritual progress, and is left at last "at the threshold" of the "Eternal City," the abode of purity, harmony, and immortality.

Combines the best features of the natural and grammatical methods. While the student is trained, from the outset, to comprehend the foreign idiom when spoken, and to express his own thoughts in the foreign language, the conversation is under the constant guidance of grammar, question and answer, address and reply being always kept within the limits of the grammatical knowledge of the student. The grammatical instruction, distributed over 124 lessons, passes in very easy stages through the whole range of German etymology and comprises the essential rules of German syntax.

Deland, Mrs. Margaret. Mr. Tommy Dove, and other stories. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 4+280 p. D. cl., $1.

Mr. Tommy Dove is one of the most distinct and in a way most charming of Mrs. Deland's characters. His gentleness and shyness, his kindness and genuine goodness, win the heart of the reader as well as Miss Temple's; and it is a satisfaction that the course of true love of these two mild souls, though it could not be otherwise than smooth even when obstructed, eventually led out into sunshine and peace. The other stories are: At whose door?; A fourth-class appointment; Elizabeth, and The face on the wall.

Deland, Mrs. Margaret. The old garden, and other verses; decorated by Walter Crane. [New holiday ed.] Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., [1893.] c. '87, '93. 8+114 p. sq. O. cl., $4.

The designs are in colors, and are mostly frames to the verses, and are illustrative of the poem they surround. As the poems sing of the birds and flowers and aspects of nature, they lend themselves easily to symbolic illustration. The cover also shows a design by Walter Crane.

Claims to be a true picture of life in the south during and after the late war. The scene opens in the Sands Mountains of northern Alabama, and changes to Washington during President Johnson's administration. A love-story is interwoven with characteristic episodes in which local southern factions take part, and which present typical southern characters, known as "Loyalists," "Unionists," or "Scalawags" at the north, but chiefly as "Union men" and anti-secessionists in Alabama.

Written in blank verse. In the preface the author explains that he has perhaps not represented the popular Napoleon, but has endeavored to portray him as he is convinced he will appear at a not far-distant period. To this end he sometimes sacrifices historical accuracy, as his chief aim is to elucidate Napoleon's character and bring all within the compass of an hour's reading.

Jack Kittson, a handsome, bright, high-spirited, honorable boy from the West Indies, is the leader in his school in an American city; he is liked with one exception by boys and girls, and is the ringleader in all mischief. His enemy, a boy about his own age, is intensely jealous of him, and tries to injure him in many ways. One day he induces him to go out with him in a row-boat and lands him on a desert island; then drugs him and forsakes him. Jack loses his memory entirely from the shock, and cannot tell the captain of the French vessel that rescues him who he is. He is carried to France, appears as a bare-back rider in the hippodrome, is seen by his father and mother, and restored to health and happiness.

A young French physician, Dr. Mirabel, is introduced as dying of consumption in an English village, tended by his handsome, silent English wife. His "theory" is that immortality is demonstrable, that man possesses an earthly body and a spiritual body, and that the spirit body, released by death, is launched upon an unknown future existence. The doctor is a most sensitive hypnotic subject; the wife learns this, and her use of the influence she possesses over him is the tragic climax of the story. The minor characters—types of well-to-do English people—are cleverly sketched, and the gradual revelation of Mme. Mirabel's character is an interesting study.

Dibble, F. L., M.D. Vagaries of sanitary science. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. 2-462 p. O. cl., $2.

The author claims that the whole sanitary movement thus far has no resemblance to scientific investigation. Much sanitary nonsense has been foisted on the people. He submits carefully investigated facts on air, water, soil, sewer gas, cemeteries, public funerals, meat, milk, filth and fecal diseases, typhoid fever, yellow fever, cholera, diphtheria, epidemics, boards of health and vital statistics. His purpose is to do away with the vague terrors people have about disease by teaching them their true nature and the means to avoid them scientifically.

Dickens, Mary Angela. A mere cypher: a novel. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 4+128 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1.

Was first published in serial form under the title of "A modern Judith." The present title is the one originally intended by Miss Dickens, who is the author of "Cross currents." In this novel she has sought a new field and one full of shadows. The hero is a dipsomaniac who is sent for treatment to the home of Dr. Custance in an obscure English village. Mrs. Custance, though "a mere cypher" in the world's estimation, is the controlling influence of his life. Through her he reforms, and when in after years he becomes a rich man and her unprincipled husband endeavors to extort money from him by threatening to fasten upon him a crime of which he is innocent, she commits murder for his sake.

Dickins, Mrs. Marguerite. Along shore with a man-of-war. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1893. c. 242 p. por. il. O. cl., $1.50.

Mrs. Dickins is the wife of an officer in the navy, and her book is a pleasant, gossipy narrative of travel, made up of her letters written home during two or three years of cruising up and down the east coast of South America. Pernambuco, Rio de Janeiro, Montevideo, Buenos Ayres, and many smaller towns were among the places visited, and her description of the scenery and points of interest, as well as of the amusements and the ordinary life of the people, are fresh and interesting.

Dr. Hugh Paull when house-surgeon in a great London hospital is called to the accident ward and finds the wounded man is the titled head of a large city banking-house. Friendship follows between the doctor and his patient, a pessimistic woman-hater. Dr. Paull marries a peculiar character who is constantly probing and exhibiting her love for him. She is fiercely jealous and exacts upon her death-bed a promise that he will shoot himself. He is saved and the great romance of his life follows. His theory relates to souls and the [illegible] powers in this world and the next, in which he looks for the solution of all problems.

Dod, S. Bayard. A hill-side parish. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. c. 2+269 p. D. cl., $1.

At the beginning of what promises to be a brilliant career as a lawyer Arthur Dinsmore feels a call to be a Presbyterian minister. His first charge is the hill-side parish. His efforts to give a larger view of life and more earnest interests to the farmers, tanners, gypsies, and small store-keepers composing his flock are described with skill.

Dodel, Arnold. Moses or Darwin? A school problem for all friends of truth and progress; from the 3d German ed.: with preface for the American ed. and a disquisition on school reform in the west by F. W. Dodel. N. Y., Commonwealth Co., [1893.] c. '91. 3–326 p. D. (Commonwealth lib., no. 4.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Whether school-children shall be taught the Mosaic account of the creation or the scientific conception of gradual and slow evolution of matter is the subject discussed. These lectures were first addressed by the author, who is professor of botany at the University of Zurich, Switzerland, to an audience of workingmen in Zurich and in St. Gall in the winter of 1890. The attention of teachers in our public schools is now directed to them.

A convenient little epitome of English history, from William the Conqueror to Victoria, given in rhyme. First published by the Century Co., in 1885, in a different form.

Dodge, Theo. Ayrault. Riders of many lands; il. with drawings by F: Remington, and from photographs of Oriental subjects. N. Y., Harper, 1894 [1893.] 5+486 p. O. cl., $4.

A series of descriptive and historical chapters on equestrianism in America, and on Arabian, Egyptian, Turkish, and other Oriental riders. Colonel Dodge has not merely studied the horse and horseman everywhere, but from the saddle, as it were, has observed things, women, customs, and costumes in passing not too rapidly from Russia to Africa, from Japan to Westchester County. The drawings are strong and free as heart could wish—partly for the reason that the text makes opportunity for Remington's best gifts.

Doudney, Sarah. Godiva Durleigh. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1893.] 4+404 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Godiva Durleigh was the only daughter of the editor and proprietor of the Champion, a radical journal. Her father's unconventional views, way of living and unexpected death are the causes of pecuniary embarrassments and of Godiva's going to live with her cousins at Silversea. Incidents of her life there, with the details of a quaint love-affair, are told in a story of English home-life.

Dougall, Miss Lily. What necessity knows. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1893. c. 5+445 p. D. cl., $1.

The mysterious happenings of this story are laid in the forests and clearings of Canada. The Second Adventists, or Millerites, who were in the height of their power in 1843, furnish some of the characters. The differing fate of two brothers, one appointed to an honorable position after graduating from Oxford, and the other wandering as emigrant to the far west is told with insight into character. The heroine is wholly original in word and action. By the author of "Beggars all."

Douglas, Amanda M. Bethia Wray's new name. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893. c. 3-405 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Bethia Wray was the daughter of a New England school master, who died on the night of her birth; her mother's death following shortly afterward Bethia is taken in hand by a spinster aunt, who confers on the baby a name which later becomes the child's aversion. The story tells how fate, a rich granduncle and the girl's own fancy conspire to give her a more fitting name, and closes with a romantic episode of her life.

Douglas, Amanda M. Larry. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893. 6+242 p. por. D. (Good company ser., no. 27) cl , $1; pap., 50 c.

This story won the $2000 prize offered by the Youth's Companion. Larry was a waif picked up in the streets of New York and sent west by the agents of the Children's Aid Society. A coarse and brutal farmer was expected to take him into his service, but when the practised eye of the employer saw the thin, wan, and delicate boy, he refused to receive him. A single woman, who was a most successful farmer and manager, and had a heart as well as a head, was moved by pity for the friendless boy, and took him home with her.

Douglas, Amanda M. Lyndell Sherburne; a sequel to "Sherburne house." N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1893.] c. 5+369 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Lyndell Sherburne's father married the daughter of an English clergyman and for nine years kept his little girl in Europe. Upon her return to America she is harshly received by the great-aunt in possession of the landed estates in Delaware to which Lyndell is sole heir. Lyndell is impatient and exacting and the family life is troubled. She meets a physician who proves her good genius, and after she has learned her duty she succeeds in winning over all her jealous relations.

Doyle, A. Conan. The firm of Girdlestone: a romance of the unromantic. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1893.] 354 p. D. (Belmore ser., no. 18.) pap., 50 c.

"The firm of Girdlestone" dealt in ivory, gums, ebony, gold-dust, and other African products. Its two members, father and son, were cold-hearted, hard-headed scoundrels, who over-insured their ships and indulged in other fraudulent practices. The elder Girdlestone becomes guardian of a young heiress whose money reverts to her guardian in case of her death. The plotting of father and son to obtain this fortune and save the firm from bankruptcy makes up the story, the scene of which is principally in England.

Doyle, A. Conan. The refugees: a tale of two continents; il. by T. De Thulstrup. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 7+366 p. D. cl., $1.75.

The Huguenot persecution in France under Louis XIV furnishes the motive of this striking historical novel. The first half of the story is laid in the Old World, in and about the court of the "Grande Monarque," at the time when the haughty Mme de Montespan struggled desperately and in vain against the influence of her rival, Mme de Maintenon. The secret marriage of Louis and Mme. De Maintenon is presented as a fact, and through her influence the revocation of the Edict of Nantes is signed. This is the signal for an outburst of Huguenot persecution, the flight of the humbler characters of the drama, and their escape as refugees to the New World, where, in the Canadian wilds, they find themselves hemmed in by the hostile tribes of the "Five Nations." Their journey from the banks of the St. Lawrence to a settlement on New York is a series of hairbreadth escapes and thrilling dangers.

"The sign of the four" is an intricate bit of detective work, in which Sherlock Holmes, the unofficial detective who figures in most of Dr. Doyle's short stories, displays his skill in deducing facts from fragmentary circumstances. It was first published in Lippincott's Magazine. The volume also includes "A scandal in Bohemia" and "A case of identity," two stories originally published in "The adventures of Sherlock Holmes," and "A study in scarlet," the first of the Sherlock Holmes stories, which has passed through numerous editions in this country and England.

As in "The making of New England" and "The making of the great west," this book aims to meet, so far as it may, the want for brief, compact and handy manuals of the beginnings of our country, and though primarily designed for school or home instruction in the study of history, pains have been taken to make it of interest to adult readers, more especially to teachers, by the addition of copious explanatory notes, or by reference to first-hand authorities, as aids to fuller investigation.

Mr. Yancey was born in Georgia, Aug. 10, 1814; was educated in the north and admitted to the bar in Abbeville, S. C.; he moved to Alabama in 1836, where he served in both branches of the legislature; he was also a member of Congress twice between 1844 and 1847; he was noted as an orator through the south, taking for nearly twenty years sides against Henry Washington Hilliard on leading southern questions. He opposed the compromise measures of 1850 and was the leader of the secession movement of 1861; he died in 1863. This work reveals a strong and picturesque personality, and offers an interesting history of southern thought, and the growth of parties and ideas, as seen from a southern standpoint.

The plot deals with the conspiracy of Cardinals Fleury and Richelieu to corrupt the young Louis XV. of France and force him to adopt a career of unredeemed profligacy. Olympe De Clèves, an actress, is the object selected to captivate Louis' senses, but her inclination for another man frustrates these plans for the moment. Madame de Mailly afterwards forces herself upon the king, and reigns as favorite for ten years. All this is told with a wealth of detail.

"This book is as much for the merchant as for the banker. In the part devoted to credits the business man will find a guide that will enable him to trust out his goods to those who will pay for them. It will teach those not engaged in business to conduct themselves in such a manner as to merit the confidence and thereby the credit favors of the business community. I have incorporated the principles of banking and credits in as few words as are consistent with a proper and comprehensive elucidation of the subject-matter, and have aimed to produce a work that would be practical and useful."—Preface.

Edwards, Miss Matilda Betham. The curb of honor. N. Y., Anglo-American Pub. Co., [1893.] 4–320 p. D. cl., $1.25.

During a season spent at a Spa in southern France, Eldred, the ward of a deformed, highly intellectual man, meets a French Evangelical clergyman. Eldred's governess, laboriously right-minded and painfully rigid in performance of duty, has telling influence with guardian and ward. The curb of honor restrains the afflicted protector from marrying his young charge, and he protects himself against his love for her in an original manner. His fears for hereditary deformity lead to scientific discussion.

Edwards, Miss Matilda Betham. A North country comedy. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892 [1893.] c. '91. 347 p. D. (Lippincott's ser. of select novels., no. 142.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Edwards, Miss Matilda Betham. Pearla; il. by Davidson Knowles. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1893. 5–384 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A story about a boy who only becomes acquainted with his mother when he is fifteen years old. His father had been governor of a South Pacific island and in ill-health for many years, so "Geoff" was sent when a very small boy to England to be educated. He is fifteen when his father dies, then his mother "Pearla" comes to England and makes a home for him. The story consists chiefly of the details of Geoff's tutor's love for his mother, Geoff's objections to a step-father, and of Geoff's own love-affairs.

The book deals solely with facts. The account of the adventures of Prof. Dyche is taken from his note-books and diaries, and nothing is added to make the book interesting or exciting. Professor Dyche is professor of zoölogy and curator of birds and mammals in the Kansas State University.

Egan, Maurice Francis. A gentleman. N. Y., Benziger Bros., 1893. 16°, cl., 75 c.

Egan, Maurice Francis. A marriage of reason. Balt., J: Murphy & Co., 1893. c. 3+344 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A novel of real life, written from a Catholic standpoint; the scene is laid in a suburb of Philadelphia, where the "select few" reside. The story of the pretty heroine is told with both humor and pathos. The weaknesses of the society people of Philadelphia are very cleverly satirized. The moral is against "mixed" marriages.

Egerton, G: Keynotes. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 4–192 p. D. cl., $1.

A volume of stories; almost all illustrate some odd phase of a woman's nature, most of them treating of love. They are entitled "A cross line," "Now spring has come," "The spell of the white elf," "A little gray glove," "An empty frame," and "Under northern sky."

Eggleston, E: Duffels. N. Y., Appleton & Co., 1893. c. 7+262 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The American Dutch traders at the beginning of this century dealt largely in a kind of coarse cloth which they called "duffels," and little by little almost all their small wares were known under that name. This collection of heterogeneous stories, mostly of American life, are grouped under the old-fashioned heading. Seven short stories, which only [illegible] peared in The Century

Elliott, Sarah Barnwell. John Paget: a novel. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1893. c. '92. 3+407 p. D. cl., $1.25.

After the civil war little twin brothers are separated, one going to New York City to become the ward of a worldly cousin, the other to Corpus Christi, Texas, under the care of a noble clergyman, also a cousin. The northern boy becomes a fashionable man of the world, the southern boy after a wild life as cowboy, studies for the ministry. Later the brothers meet. John Paget, the clergyman, longs to do lasting good to the poor. There is a strong arraignment of fashionable churches and devotion to creeds. The yellow fever at the south and the work of nuns and lay sisters play important parts in the sad dénouement.

Ellis, E: S. Across Texas. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1893.] c. 4+349 p. il. D. (Wildwood ser., no. 3.) cl., $1.25.

Herbert Watrous, with whom Nick Ribsam, the Pennsylvanian, made a visit to the Maine woods, as related in "The young moose-hunters," in search of health, is in his turn placed in the hands of the doctors, who, fearing consumption, order him to a warmer climate than New York. Mr. Watrous offers to pay all Nick's expenses if he will accompany Herbert in a journey through Texas, Arizona, New Mexico, and southern California. The boys start off together and have no end of adventures.

Ellsworth, Mrs. L. C. Furono amati: a romance. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., 1893. c. '92. 3–164 p. D. cl., $1.

Furono amati is the Italian for "they were loved." The hero is introduced as an Italian boot-black nine years old, dozing under a bench in Madison Square, New York City. Into his squalid tenement home comes a whole-souled German, possessor of an Amati violin, with which he charms the musical soul of the boy. In a fit of passion, because he cannot make the Amati sing for him the boy destroys the valuable instrument. Later he becomes the fashion and marries a girl of good family. He discovers that she loves his music more than himself and he destroys her as he had done the violin, because she would not sing for him. But "they were both loved."

Elson, L: C. The realm of music: a series of musical essays, chiefly historical and educational. Bost., The New England Conservatory of Music, 1892 [1893.] c. 5+314 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Essays gathered from different periodicals, to which they had been contributed by the writer during the past ten years. They are intended for the general public as well as the musical student, and relate to the rise of the sonata: The development of musical notation; Old English ballads; The legends of music; Wives of the great composers; Musical humbugs; The evolution of Verdi; The development of technique; Musical novels; The intellectuality of Wagner; Wagner and his enemies; Talent and genius, etc.

Elterlein, Ernst v. Beethoven's symphonies in their ideal significance: explained by Ernst von Elterlein; from the German, with the author's approval, by Francis Weber. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. 12°, cl., $1.50.

Elton, C: I: and Mary Augusta. The great book-collectors. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons. 1893. 8 + 228 p. il. O. (Books about books, ed. by A. W. Pollard.) cl., $2.50.

The authors have preferred to restrict themselves within narrow lines, and deal with the famous book-collectors or book-hunters rather than with the owners of good books, librarians or specialists, merchants or brokers of books, or that most odious of all, "the book glutton who wants all that he sees." The result is a fresh book out of the beaten track, full of original matter covering the subject from the classical period to the Victorian age. The following countries are covered: Ireland, Northumbria, England, Italy from the age of Petrarch; Germany Flanders, Burgundy and France to the time of Renouard. Index.

Ely, R: T. Outlines of economics. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1893. c. 10+432 p. D. hf. leath., net, $1.25.

The present work was begun as a revision to the author's "Introduction to political economy," but it has become practically a new book and the older work is retained upon the market. This newer work is more theoretical and naturally follows the earlier one. The "Introduction to political economy" gives large scope to a teacher to develop his own line of thought. The aim of the "Outlines" is to give a systematic sketch of theory. Much space and attention have been given to the bibliography and to the subjects for individual study.

Eschenbach, Marie v. Ebner. The [illegible] of the parish: a novel. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, 1893. c. 4–342 p. D. (Choice ser., no. 81.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Pavel, the son of a cruel, utterly immoral bricklayer, is thrown upon the parish after his father is hung for murder and his mother sent to the penitentiary for ten years, having been proved accessory to the crime. By his own efforts he makes himself respected. He dreads his mother's release, fearing it will spoil his position. The death of his sister, who has become a nun, his mother's confession, and his friends, all work to make him a worthy man. The scene is Moravia.

Eschenbach, Marie v. Ebner. The two countesses; tr. by Mrs. Waugh. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 3+176 p. nar. D. (The unknown lib., no. 27.) cl., 50 c.

Two German countesses of dissimilar traits and with different home environments relate their individual experiences—one through a series of letters to a friend, the other through the medium of a memoir of her life. In both cases the heroines have revolted against marriages made for them by their parents regardless of their personal feelings.

Eschstruth, Nataly v., (Baroness.) A priestess of comedy: a novel; from the German, by Elise L. Lathrop; il. by Warren B. Davis. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, [1893.] c. '92–'93. 3–307 p. D. (Ledger lib., no. 90.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The heroine mockingly terms herself "a priestess of comedy." She is the only child of a vulgar, newly ennobled millionaire, and is determined to win recognition and position in the "comedy" of social life. Her arroganee, selfishness, and bad taste make social success unattainable, and she marries a titled adventurer who dissipates her fortune. Through poverty and much suffering her nature is changed and softened, and a second marriage brings her domestic happiness as well as the longed-for social recognition. Scene and characters are German.

Euthanasia; or, turf, tent and tomb. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, 1893. 2+310 p. D. bds., $1.25.

The career of Lord George Mansfield as depicted in this novel is typical of that of a large class of young English society men. He loses a fortune on the turf and with it the girl he loves, sells out of his regiment, goes to Vienna and enters the service of the Austrian army, and after new love experiences dies a heroic death. The heroine is a brave, attractive specimen of womankind.

The book makes the distinctive doctrines of these bodies accessible to laymen in cheap and convenient form.

Evans, A. Eubule. Second sight; il. by Lancelot Speed. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., 1893. 256 p. il. D. cl., $1.

A quiet love-story of English domestic life. A young Canadian on his way to visit English relatives is blinded by a stroke of lightning. Through his illness and slow recovery he is tended by his cousin Elsa, whom he imagines an ideal maiden, stately and beautiful. At last he sees her, and finds her a fresh, wholesome English girl, in no sense beautiful. Nevertheless her gentle influence gradually changes his selfish, egotistical nature, and he learns at last that "second sight" is best.

Everett, C: Carroll. The gospel of Paul. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 13+307 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Dr. Everett, dean of the Harvard Divinity School, presents what he believes to be a wholly new view of Paul's doctrine of the atonement based upon the most direct and literal interpretation of which his words admit. The result reached is equally removed from the traditional view which makes Christ the vicarious bearer of the penalty of the world's sin, and that which sees no efficacy in his death beyond its effect upon the hearts of his followers. The presentation of this interpretation is preceded by a study of the significance of sacrifice in the ancient world, and a brief survey of the history of the doctrine of the atonement. It is followed by an examination of Paul's philosophy of history, and of his positive doctrine of salvation.

Exell, Rev. J. S. Homiletical commentary on the Book of Exodus. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1892 [1893.] 23+592 p. O. (Preacher's complete homiletic commentary, v. 2.) cl., $3.

This is the second volume of an extensive work of twenty volumes on the Old Testament, printed from imported plates obtained from the publishers in London, where the entire work has been issued after years of preparation. As we have already mentioned, in this great commentary, by various authors, is found a sermon outline or homiletic suggestion on every paragraph or verse of the Old Testament that can be turned to use in the preparation of a sermon. Abundant choice selections of illustration, from many eminent sources other than the authors of the volumes, are also given. Except in some introductory, critical, and explanatory notes, preceding each chapter, no foreign words, such as Hebrew or Greek, are used.

Eysenbach, W: A practical German grammar; rev. and largely rewritten, with notes to the exercises and vocabularies, by W: C. Collar; rev. by Clara S. Curtis. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1893. c. 15+242 p. D. cl., $1.10.

The publishers call this "Collar's shorter Eysenbach." The aim, method, and essential characteristics of the larger book have been kept; the notes have been shortened, also the exercises, the vocabularies, explanations, etc.

Fairbairn, A. M., D.D. The place of Christ in modern theology. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. 20+556 p. O. cl., $2.50.

This work "is an endeavor through a Christian doctrine of God at a sketch of the first lines of Christian theology." The author, who is principal of Mansfield College, Oxford, thinks that "what God signified to Jesus Christ he ought to signify to all Christian churches." The first part is concerned with historical criticism, the second with theological construction. He endeavors to explain the factors and forces that have moved and shaped the theologies of the past that he may draw the groundwork of a theology for the present. The matter was originally embodied in a Morse Lecture and also in the Lyman Beecher Lectures at Yale University.

Farjeon, B. L. The last tenant. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 5+349 p. D. cl., $1.

The hero and his wife have led a childless but happy existence for years when the wife grows restless and insists upon moving. On a house-hunting expedition they meet with a queer adventure at 79 Lamb's Terrace, London. They are told the house is haunted, but the husband insists upon getting at the mysteries although the idea of taking it is abandoned. The following-up of "the last tenant" is full of adventure and mystery, and the end is unforeseen and artistically brought about.

Farjeon, B. L. Something occurred. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, [1893.] c. 5+331 p. D. cl., $1.

The scenes and characters of this story belong to modern English life, but the events read like a fairy tale. A young married couple, embarrassed for ready money, resort to some playful incantations, and wish very hard that they may be helped. When they raise the light, they find a queer little man seated in their room, who says he is "Wottesnot, the Genius of the Utterly Absurd." He gives them four wishes, with the promise that they will be granted if not unreasonable, but that something ridiculous will happen to them each time. They go through four absurd transformations, which make great fun for the reader.

Margaretta Kennaird, née Van Lerius, of Knickerbocker lineage, marries an impecunious Englishman and removes to London. Her evident desire to further her only daughter's interests and her way of executing her plans cause her to be called the "Pushing American." The novel introduces many New Yorkers prominent in society, notably Alonzo Lispenard, who is the hero, also King Clarimond of Saltrovia, in whose kingdom an interesting episode in the life of the heroine occurs.

Fawcett, Edgar. Loaded dice: a novel. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1893.] c. '91. 2–288 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Three Americans (two men and a woman), a French sharper, and an innocent young English girl are the actors in a highly sensational drama which takes place in Paris. The central figure is a beautiful American woman with a past, who has been the mistress of one of the men and wishes to marry his rich friend, but is balked in her plans by the "sharper," of whom she had hoped to make a tool as easily as she had won his love. The English girl is caught in the net for a while, but escapes with the aid of one of the Americans. The ending is tragical, justice being done swiftly and surely.

Fenn, G: Manville. The Grand Chaco. N. Y.,

Tait, Sons & Co., [1893.] c. '92. 3–383 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A story of adventure in South American forests, along the banks of the Grand Chaco and its tributary streams. An English naturalist seeking rare orchids, two lads of fifteen or sixteen and a veteran guide are the characters whose varied and perilous adventures make up a story of hairbreadth escapes from dangers by land and water.

Fenn, G: Manville. Nurse Elisia. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 4+313 p. D. cl., $1.

The Elthornes are the county family of Lincolnshire. The squire falls with his horse and injures his spine. His son, a surgeon in a London hospital, treats the case, sends for advice, and the consulting surgeon sends "Nurse Elisia" from the hospital. Her arrival leads to many misunderstandings. She throws light upon the character of the daughter's suitor and endears herself to her impulsive patient. The young surgeon declares his love and the end is a great surprise.

Fenn, G: Manville. Real gold: a story of adventure; il. by W. S. Stacey. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1893.] 4–384 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The "real gold," whose search is productive of so many thrilling adventures in the mountains of Peru, is the tree from which the Peruvian bark is obtained. Colonel Champion, an Englishman, is seeking seeds, roots, or cuttings in order to propagate these trees in hot, mountainous English colonies, and considers the risk he runs of hostile Indians, etc., well encountered in the cause of science. He is accompanied by his son Percy, and Percy's friend Cyril Nelson, a servant, and Indian guides

Fenn, G: Manville. Sail-ho! or, a boy at sea; il. by W. H. Overend. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 2–575 p. il. D. cl., $2.

Alison Dale, a Cornish lad, ships as a midshipman on board the Castle Burghe, an English merchantman. During his first voyage a fellow-midshipman incites a mutiny. The interest centres in Dale's action in this emergency and the romance that concludes the story.

Fenn, G: Manville. A secret quest. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., [1893.] c. '92. 2–349 p. D. (Broadway ser., no. 20.) pap., 50 c.

An English lord occupying a minor post in the government and hoping for future leadership is much annoyed by threatened exposure by means of two letters which he knows to be compromising. He sends his solicitor on a secret quest for these letters, which are in the keeping of a gouty colonel travelling in Switzerland with his daughter and step-sister. Swiss scenery, storms, avalanches, glaciers, mountain walks, searchings for reputed gold-mines and many scenes of love and intrigue make a brisk story with happy ending.

Fenn, G: Manville. Witness to the deed. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 5+398 p. D. cl., $1.

An old-fashioned story of love, crime, suspicion, detective-work, mystery and science that takes place in a London lodging-house. On the point of starting to be married the hero is attacked in his rooms. His bride awaits him in vain. His best man sticks to him through all the mystery that follows, but his true helper is the "witness to the deed."

Fenollosa, Ernest Francisco. East and west, The discovery of America, and other poems. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., 1893. c. 8+214 p. D. cl., $2.

In "East and west," the Phi Beta Kappa poem of 1892 at Harvard, Mr. Fenollosa has formally stated the problems of their ultimate union, begun to-day, after two thousand years of separation since the epoch of Alexander. In "The discovery of America" he has pursued the same thought, in showing that the lofty idealism of Columbus, which contemplated a Christian conquest of the Oriental world, so far from being a delusive dream, is only now, in this Columbian year, reaching a grander realization in the peaceful fusion of Asiatic and European ideas. These two long poems, with some thirty shorter lyrics, make up the volume.

Ferrier, Susan Edmonstone. Marriage: a novel. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 2 v., 4+344; 3+324 p. S. hf. rus., $2.50.

Miss Ferrier died in Edinburgh in November of 1854. Her three novels, "Marriage," "The inheritance," and "Destiny," portray with a clever, satirical pen the humorous side of Scotch social life; through them she has painted some indelible portraits of the men and women of her time, doing for Scotland what Jane Austen and Maria Edgeworth did for England and Ireland. The present edition of her works is unabridged, being the first reprint from the original editions, and contains all omitted matter in other reprints. The volumes are uniform with the edition of Jane Austen, published by Roberts Bros., and each contains a frontispiece in photogravure from designs by Frank T. Merrill. The first volume opens with an article on "Miss Ferrier's novels," reprinted from Temple Bar of Nov., 1875, and a paper reprinted from the same magazine for Feb., 1874, entitled "Recollections of visits to Ashestiel and Abbotsford," by Miss Ferrier.

A tragical episode is evolved out of a promise made by Major Mauriee de Frémeuse to his intimate friend, Robert de la Pave, on his death-bed. Robert had married a beautiful woman of whom he was insanely jealous; receiving a mortal wound in the Franco-Prussian war, he forces a promise from Maurice to carry his commands to his widow not to marry again, accompanied by the threat that if she does she will receive his curse and his spirit will appear to her. This is the motive of "The widow." The second story details the efforts of a rich woman of plebeian birth to enter the exclusive circle of the Faubourg St. Germain.

A story of the French Revolution. "Little Count Paul" is the ten-year-old son of a Breton noble; on his quiet, petted, luxurious life the "reign of terror" suddenly breaks. His father is a "suspect" hiding in Paris; his mother dies of shock and grief, the ancestral home is confiscated, and the homeless child sets out on the long journey to Paris to join his father. Then come days of grief and fear, plots and suspicions, imprisonment of father and son, and finally the downfall of Robespierre and the lifting of the storm.

Field, H: M., D.D. The story of the Atlantic telegraph. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. '92. 8+415 p. por. il. O. cl., $1.50.

The Rev. Henry M. Field tells the story of the Atlantic cable, from its inception in 1854, when the idea first presented itself to his brother Cyrus W. Field, a merchant of New York, who had retired from business, that the telegraph might be made to span the Atlantic Ocean, until after twelve years of unceasing toil and heroic patience the miracle was at length wrought, and the two continents were brought into speaking distance of each other. This is a new edition, revised and entirely rewritten, of a work first published in 1866.

The romance of "The strayed arrow" begins in the school-days of three children—a girl named "Pearl," who dons a boy's dress so that she may share the boys' instruction and learn to read, and two boys, "Golden Branch" and "Grouse." Whilst the story of these little Chinese goes quietly on, the teacher from time to time tells his pupils the forty tales included in the narrative. They are simple and funny and original and quite adapted to the intellect of young people, who will find them very amusing.

This story of English village life is told by the lad who is chief actor in the events described. The son of a farm laborer, he goes to work on a neighboring estate, where he falls under the influence of bad companions who make a cat's-paw of him. He is suspected of thieving, is disgraced, and has a very hard time, but is finally proved innocent and restored to favor.

Filon, A: Garrick's pupil; tr. by J. V. Prichard. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1893. c. 3–217 p. il. S. cl., $1.

A faithful and brilliant study of London life in the latter half of the eighteenth century. The times of Reynolds, of Garrick, of Johnson, and of Burke have been carefully studied and skilfully reproduced. The virtues, vices, and follies of that age have seldom been more strongly presented; while with a fine historic sense, which never deserts him, the author has succeeded in conveying a true idea of the social and political forces that fermented in the society of London during that remarkable period.

Mr. Finck's reputation as a musical scholar, his thorough familiarity with Wagner literature, and his interesting style give his work a permanent value. It is the result of many years' special study, and is both a full review of Wagner's life, the dramatic episodes of which are treated with unusual fulness, and a summary and critical analysis of the musical and poetic contents of his writings, rich in anecdote and quotation. Mr. Finck acknowledges himself indebted to previous biographies for less than a twentieth part of the material contained in these two volumes; the rest is based on his own personal experiences, on Wagner's autobiographic writings and other original documents, including a collection of Wagneriana which he began seventeen years ago.

First (The) millennial faith: the church faith in its first one thousand years: by the author of "Not on Calvary." N. Y., Saalfield & Fitch, 1893. 2-84 p. D. leatherette, 50 c.

Gives through a compilation from the writings of the Christian fathers, covering all church literature to the year 1000, the opinions held during the first years of Christianity relative to the doctrine of Christ's atonement. A sketch of the life and times of St. Anselm, the monk who put forth for the first time the "satisfaction" theory, occupies part one of this interesting volume. The concluding chapter deals with the personality of Satan, and the life-long sacrifice of the Son of God, whereby our redemption was wrought.

In St. Augustine, Florida, an elopement is planned. At the last moment the girl reconsiders and sends her young cousin, a girl of fifteen, to tell her lover of her change of mind. She is seen and her generosity and courageous silence lead to many complications. Six years after the story shifts to Venice, where the same characters unexpectedly meet. The devoted cousin has become rich and is jealously guarded by her stepbrother, who wants her hand and fortune. To marry the man of her choice she is finally obliged to elope, and a story of true love is brought to a smooth conclusion.

When Bernadette Arnaud's mother was killed in a railway accident which occurred in a mountain gorge of the Blue Ridge Range, Bernadette was adopted by a Scotch family who lived in the vicinity, and reared a Catholic. At the age of fifteen she is unexpectedly restored to wealthy Protestant relatives, whose home is in New Orleans. They are so charmed with her simplicity of manner that they call her "A little maid of Arcady." The interest is in the quaint love-story of the heroine, and in her way of showing her devotion to the Catholic religion.

Fletcher, W: I., comp. The A. L. A. index; an index to general literature: biographical, historical and literary essays and sketches, reports and publications of boards and societies dealing with education, health, labor, charities and corrections, etc., by W. I. Fletcher, with the co-operation of many librarians; issued by the publishing section of the American Library Assoc. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. '92. 6+329 p. Q. cl., net, $5; hf. mor. net, $6.50.

The "A. L. A." (American Library Association) Index is intended to make available for use the great mass of papers, essays, sketches, etc., contained in collections where their individual character does not appear, just as "Poole's Index to Periodical Literature" has brought into ready use the stores of valuable material contained in the magazines and reviews. Every library, even the smallest, contains many volumes of the character indicated above, which are little used because there is no ready key to their contents. The essays of Carlyle, Macaulay, Lowell, Emerson, Whipple, and others belong to this class, as well as the "Collections" of historical and literary societies and the publications of various boards and societies, and many works of history, travel and general literature, whose individual chapters furnish a monographic treatment of special persons, places, events or topics. It will be found one of the most useful helps in every public library, and in the larger private ones, and a good book to have in the house to indicate what books should be got from the library to furnish the best brief treatment of any subject.

Fletcher, W: I., and Bowker, R: R. The annual literary index, 1892; including periodicals, American and English, essays, book-chapters, etc.; with author-index, bibliographies and necrology; ed. with the co-operation of members of the American Library Association, and of the Library Journal staff. N. Y., Office of The Publishers' Weekly, 1893. c. 8+224 p. O. cl., $3.50.

"The annual literary index" succeeds to and includes what has hitherto been known as the "Co-operative index to periodicals," the list of periodicals indexed being largely increased, and contains several new features, the most important of which is the first annual index to those portions of the books of the year which are practically monographs on special subjects. It is the first volume of a series which will include the annual Fletcher index as well as the annual "Poole," known as the "A. L. A. index." In the "Index to general literature" many books are covered issued previous to 1892, but not prepared for record in time to be included in the "A. L. A. index" volume. The lists of special bibliographies published during the year, and the necrology of authors deceased during the year, both new features, will be found very useful.

Under cover of friendship for her husband, Stuart Price, a veritable Lovelace, woos and wins the admiration of Madeleine Forest, née Arnsleigh, the favorite daughter of a New York millionaire; this accomplished, Mrs. Forest leaves for Europe, where Price joins her a few weeks later. The utter disregard of the pair for conventionalities finally arouses Forest to institute divorce proceedings. At this juncture Arnsleigh, Madeleine's father, dies after making a will in favor of the Forest children, and utterly disregarding his daughter's expectations. Lack of money and love and other complications bring about a tragic ending to the guilty romance.

Founded upon the fact of the siege and destruction of Bedford Castle, in Bedfordshire, England, in the reign of Henry III. The robber baron was Fulke de Breauté, one of King John's lawless nobles, who, when the story opens, was intrenched in Bedford Castle, after having driven out the Beauchamps, the rightful owners. The interest of the story centres in the perils and adventures of young Ralph de Beauchamp and his betrothed, who is carried off to Bedford Castle by the brother of the robber baron. The fall of Fulke de Breauté and the destruction of the castle by King Henry's troops are the means by which the young people are reunited and restored to happiness and prosperity.

A phase of the Civil War as seen chiefly in the small towns and villages of the north is depicted in "The Copperhead," which was a name given at that time to a northern man not in sympathy with the war. Farmer Abner Beech is proven to be as sincere in his opinions as his antagonists, who would die to liberate the slaves, but would not permit a man to hold views contrary to their own.

A bright, vivacious narrative of the adventures, successes, and failures of two amateur photographers who are forced to depend largely upon their own ingenuity. Their entertaining experiences show what may be done by any amateur without a very large expenditure of time or money. The illustrations from their own portfolios are an unusually interesting feature of the book.

French, H. Willard. Oscar Peterson, ranchman and ranger. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1893. c. 6+380 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.

When the story opens Oscar Peterson is a sixteen-year-old boy, just returned to his father's fine ranch in Manitoba, Canada, after ten years at school in England. On the day of his return his father is mysteriously murdered and later Oscar finds that his property has passed into other hands. With a cowboy friend Oscar sets out to find the murderer, whom he suspects to be an agent of his father's at Leadville, Col. The journey from Manitoba to Leadville is a series of exciting adventures and hairbreadth escapes, told with much animation. The travellers are attacked by Indians, "held up" by road-agents, and run into many perils through which bravery, common sense, and keen wit carry them triumphantly. Of course their quest is successful, the mystery is explained, and the Manitoba property recovered.

The universal spread of the kindergarten has given a new and vivid interest to all that relates to Froebel. In the selections from his letters never before published, just made by Mr. Heinemann, we are taken into the silent brain-chambers of the friend of children; and we see how he toiled painfully along the road pointed out by reasoning and experience before (in his simple phrase) he "found" the kindergarten. This book with its explanatory notes becomes at once a memoir and a history of the system.

Fuller, Anna. A literary courtship: under the auspices of Pike's Peak. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 4+184 p. T. cl., $1.

One evening at the "Pow-wow," a New York club, several men discussing the question of why women writers had so often used men's names as pseudonyms, conclude, with the exception of John Brunt, a successful writer, that it is because a man obtains a hearing and recognition quicker than a woman. Brunt, to test his belief that if a book has merit it will make its way whether a man or woman's name is on the title-page, issues his next novel under the nom de plume of "Lilian Leslie Lamb." Another "Lilian Leslie Lamb" living at Colorado Springs, opening a correspondence with her supposed namesake, an amusing series of incidents follow.

Fuller, E: The complaining millions of men: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. '92–'93. 5+417 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Two lines from a poem of Matthew Arnold—"The complaining millions of men darken in labor and pain"—suggested the title, and give the keynote of the story. The scenes are laid in Boston, chiefly in the haunts of laboring men of Socialistic inclination. Francis Baretta, a Socialistic leader, is one of the chief characters; his career illustrates the emptiness of the views of which he is the exponent, proving, as he does in himself, that all men are not born equal.

Fuller, H: B., ["Stanton Page," pseud.] The cliff-dwellers: a novel; il. by T. De Thulstrup. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 4+324 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The novel's clever title refers to the four thousand heterogeneous inhabitants of one of Chicago's eighteen-storied business buildings. "The Clifton" is the scene of almost the entire action, its bankers, brokers, capitalists, lawyers, "promoters," clerks, and stenographers, its engineers, janitors, scrub-women, and lunch-counter girls, offering every variety of character. To these may be added the wives and sweethearts who at times visit the "Cliff-dwellers." The story is a serious attempt, most successfully carried out, to depict present striking phases in the social and business life of the great western metropolis. Mr. Fuller wrote "The Chevalier of Il Pensièri-Vani" and "The châtelaine of La Trinité."

Funk, I: K., D.D., Mareh, Francis A., Gregory, Dan. S., D.D., eds. A standard dictionary of the English language upon original plans, designed to give, in complete and accurate statement, in the light of the most recent advances in knowledge, and in the readiest form for popular use, the meaning, orthography, pronunciation, and etymology of all the words and the idiomatic phrases in the speech and literature of the English-speaking peoples, prepared by more than two hundred specialists and other scholars, under the supervision of I: K. Funk. Two-volume ed. V. 1. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1893. c. '90–93. 19+1060 p. il. F. rus., (for 2 volumes,) subs., $15; or complete in 1 v., subs., $12.

This is the first volume of the two-volume ed. of the new "Standard Dictionary," bringing the alphabet down to "Lyttoniidæ." It will be followed by a second volume, and later the whole work will be offered in one volume complete. The work has been in preparation since 1890, and has engaged the services of 247 editors and specialists, and nearly 500 readers for quotations. It is claimed the vocabulary is extraordinarily rich and full, far exceeding any dictionary previously published. The publishers place its number of words at 300,000, which is 75,000 more than are contained in the Century Dictionary. Thousands of the words are now for the first time admitted to a general dictionary, and meanings and spellings are up to the very latest data on the subjects. Many innovations make it especially useful; and there are many new and fresh points of interest too numerous to mention in our limited space. It is unusually complete and most carefully prepared, and is both for the scholar and average reader. The illustrations are profuse; they consist of small pictures in the text, many plates beautifully colored of flags, seals, gems, coins, etc., also plates in black and white of groups of dogs and other animals, etc.

In 1878 the author delivered a speech on the injustice of church and state to women before the National Woman Suffrage Association. This theme she has now elaborated. She believes there was a time before the Christian era when women ruled and the world was better. With the patriarchs, she thinks, began the degradation of women. The author quotes freely from well-known writers and interprets many statements for her own purposes.

Gaulot, Paul. A friend of the queen, (Marie Antoinette—Count De Fersen;) tr. by Mrs. Cashel Hoey. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. 10+371 p. O. cl., $2.

The romantic story of Count John Axel Fersen's life and his devoted friendship for Marie Antoinette was never before so completely and interestingly told. Fersen was a young Swede, of about the same age as Marie Antoinette, when he first appeared at the French court. His charming personality soon won for him the favor of the Dauphiness, the future Queen of France, the friendship then begun lasting to the hour of the queen's unhappy death. Fersen came to America during our Revolution and served in the American army; again he returned to France and risked his life several times to save Marie Antoinette from the guillotine. His own death was unusual and tragical. This work is based on many new documents recently brought to light.

Gayley, C: Mills, ed. The classic myths in English literature; based chiefly on Bulfinch's "Age of fable," (1855;) accompanied by an interpretative and illustrative commentary. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1893. c. 36+539 p. D. cl., $1.65.

The author, professor of the English language and literature in the University of California, undertook some time ago, at the request of his publishers, a revision and rearrangement of Bulfinch's "Age of fable," in order to adapt it to the purpose of teacher and pupil. It had been recommended as a text-book by the Academic Council of the University of California, but proved in many ways unsuited to the purpose. After a year's work Prof. Gayley found half of his material for copy was altogether new, and that the remainder differed in many important respects from the book upon which it was based. Hence while the obligation to the "Age of fable" is acknowledged in full, a new title has been selected for this volume.

The flower is a white carnation with blood red centre that takes a prize at a flower show on the estates of the ancient German family of Sturmfeder. The seed of this flower is an heirloom in the family of an Italian painter and his bewitching grand-daughter. Count Sturmfeder loses his heart to this girl, and carnations sprouting from seed given to her affianced lover are the voices that betray the Count's methods of capturing an unwilling bride.

Forty-one poems, of which only fourteen have appeared before. The title poem was written for the annual reunion of the Society of the Army of the Potomac, held in Boston, on June 27, 1893. Bound in white cloth, with gilt decorative design.

Giles, Rev. Chauncey. Consolation. Phil., American New-Church Tract and Pub. Soc., 1893. c. 2-187 p. D. cl., 75 c.

The author has dedicated this little book "to the bereaved," to whom he says: "It is dedicated to you in the hope that it may give you consolation in your sorrow, or at least direct you to the only source from which the healing of all wounded affections comes, and give you some hints of the means by which you can gain access to its consoling and life-giving power."

The scene is Chicago. Mr. Jarvis evidently stands for Christian K. Ross, of Philadelphia. He is seen following up a clue for the recovery of his lost son given him by Mrs. Mosher, whose son was one of the abductors of Charley Ross. The interest is in Ross senior's methods and the final developments in an extended search.

Gill, W. H., D.D. The Bible catechist: an instruction in Biblical introduction for the young. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1893.] c. 64 p. S. pap., 15 c.

On the plan of the author's "The temple opened." The Catechist has been prepared with reference to its use in the Sunday-school, both by the teacher in the class and by the superintendent in general Bible drills.

Gillett, Omer T., M.D. How I became a preacher: a sequel to "How I became a sailor." Cin., O., Cranston & Curts, 1893. c. 2-436 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Grandpa Trumbull, who was appointed midshipman in the United States navy in "How I became a sailor," appears in this story as Samuel Trumbull Gillett. Ten years of seafaring life are covered, during which he sees all parts of the world. Standing at the tomb of the Saviour in the Holy Land he feels the call to be a preacher. Back in his old home in Indiana he finally takes courage to carry out this intention.

Gilliat, E: Velveteens: a Norfolk story; il. by F. Barnard. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 250 p. D. cl., $1.

An English rural story, the chief characters being villagers, gamekeepers, and tenants of a large estate. The murder of the head gamekeeper by poachers is the central incident, the story gradually revealing the identity of the murderer and the motive for the crime; this has to do with a little love-story of rival suitors, jealousy, and wrong-doing.

The "smart" set of New York City, it is claimed, furnished the types from which the author studied his characters. It is the familiar story of a woman who prefers wealth to honest love, and permits her heart after marriage to return to her former lover.

Gilman, Bradley. The musical journey of Dorothy and Delia; il. by F. G. Attwood.

N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1893.] c. 3+79 p. il. obl. D. cl., $1.25.

Written somewhat in the style of "Alice in Wonderland." A little girl falls asleep at her music lessons and finds herself in Musicland, where all the music notes are alive. The object of the book is two-fold—first, to tell a fanciful, interesting story; second, to illustrate and "light up" the rudiments of music.

Gilman, Nicholas Paine. Socialism and the American spirit. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 10+376 p. D. cl., $1.50.

This work, by the author of "Profit sharing between employer and employee" and "Conduct as a fine art," is a timely discussion of the present position and the probable future of socialism and social reform in the United States. After two introductory chapters on "Individualism and socialism" and "The present tendency to socialism," the author outlines the principal characteristics of the American spirit, and defines its general attitude towards the extremes of individualism and socialism. "Nationalism" and "Christian socialism" are criticised from this standpoint. Constructive chapters follow on the "Industrial future," the "Functions of the state," and "Industrial partnership." The last three chapters consider the "Higher individualism," "Social spirit," and the "Way to Utopia." Contains a "Select bibliography" (4 p.), giving the titles of the best recent books on topics touched by this volume—mostly issued since 1888.

Gilman, S. C. The story of a western claim: a tale of how two boys solved the Indian question. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. 201 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is on the frontier of Nebraska. The first chapter introduces an incident of western life which illustrates the methods of claim-taking and the force of the pre-emption act. The successive chapters give in detail the experiences of two Eastern lads who took up a claim and interested themselves in the Indians of the locality.

Gilmore, Ernest. Sweet Millie; or, wayside ministries. Albany, N. Y., Leonard Pub. Co., 1892. 2-305 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

In the midst of her fourth college year "Sweet Millie" is called home. Her father had been injured badly; her mother was prostrated with fever. In spite of higher education and a rather pampered early life Millie proved herself a household blessing. Her bright speeches and thoughtful tact are the foundation of a pretty home story.

Gissing, G: The odd women. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. 4+446 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1.

By "the odd women" the author means the half million excess of women over men in the British Isles unprovided with mates—hence forced to live single lives. The characters are four sisters; one is a teacher, two have been nursery governesses and companions, the fourth and youngest is a draper's assistant. The story opens in London in cheap lodgings, with two of the sisters out of employment; they are prematurely old, commonplace, and hopeless, living sad, colorless lives and scarcely allowing themselves enough to eat; their hopes all centre in the youngest sister, who, they trust, will marry. The details of their various careers are sad and depressing, and related with a pitiless realism.

Gist, Christopher. Christopher Gist's journals; with historical, geographical, and ethnological notes, and biographies of his contemporaries, by W: M. Darlington. Pittsburgh, J. R. Weldin & Co., 1893. c. 6-296 p. Q. cl., [edition of 400 copies.] $5; [edition of 100 on Whatman paper,] $10.

One of these three journals of Christopher Gist was never before published; the three are now published together for the first time. They cover the periods of 1750-51, 1751-52, and 1753, the first two giving an account of his travels and discoveries down the river Ohio and its branches for the Ohio Company, together with his transactions with the Indians and his return home; the third is an account of a journey in attendance upon Major George Washington, to the commandant of the French fort on the Ohio River. Gist's explorations of the region now included within the boundaries of Ohio, Ky., W. Va., and parts of western Maryland and S. W. Penn., were the earliest made so far west, for the single object of examining the country, as they are the first also of which a regular journal was kept. As they were, however, in the interest of a great land company, their results were not generally made known. In 1776 the first journal was published in London, but few copies came to America. This volume also includes notes on all the journals, biographies of the Montours, George Croghan, T: Cresap, Gen. Ja. Grant, with other valuable papers relative to the subject.

Gladden, Rev. Washington. The Cosmopolis City club. N. Y., The Century Co., 1893. c. 5+135 p. D. cl., $1.

In the form of a story Mr. Gladden points out the evils and corruptions of politics, and calls upon young men to organize and do away with "rings" and the abuse of the franchise. Municipal reform he considers the most important practical question now before the American people. Mr Gladden favors the nationalization of railroads, telegraphs, telephones, mines, and other "natural monopolies."

Gladden, Rev. Washington. Tools and the man; property and industry under the Christian law. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 7+308 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The chapters are devoted to (1) The Christianization of society, in which the general laws of Christian life are laid down; (2) Economics and Christian ethics, in which the author seeks to show the impossibility of treating economics as a pure science; (3) Property in land, a criticism in part of Henry George's theory; (4) Property in general, an attempt to discover the relation which the person holds to the material world; (5) The labor question, a study of the mutual rights and duties of employers and employed; (6) The collapse of competition, an examination of the principle as applied to modern society; (7) Co-operation, the logic of Christianity; (8) The reorganization of industry; (9) Scientific socialism, an inquiry into the philosophic basis of current schemes of socialism; (10) Christian socialism, an effort to formulate the growth of a new condition under the sway of genuine Christian principles.

The publication of the maxims belongs to the later, that is to say, the last thirty years of Goethe's life; and the greater number of them appeared only in the last ten, while some are posthumous. They are rich in profit and delight to the thoughtful reader; this is the first time an attempt has been made to present these incomparable sayings in English. They are grouped under the headings: "Life and character; Literature and art; Science; Nature, aphorisms.

A series of letters written by an educated man of the world to a beautiful society woman and famous artist; they depict all the various stages of an ardent passion from the first moment the hero is attracted to the lady through the genius he recognizes in her paintings at the art gallery, through the period of waiting when he professes only to be her devoted friend, until the time arrives when he is permitted to kneel at her feet. The letters tell the story with the aid of a few explanations given by a friend.

A comparison of the wages, cost and standard of living, savings, etc., of workers in the coal, iron, and steel industries of the United Sates, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Germany, and other European countries. The American laborer is shown to have a higher standard of living than the worker of any other nation. The deduction is that the cost of the production here and abroad is about equal—that the higher daily wages in America do not mean a correspondingly enhanced labor cost to the manufacturer, as the American's superior skill, intelligence, and physical condition cause him to turn in more and better work than the European.

Gould, G. M., M.D. The meaning and the method of life: a search for religion in biology. N. Y., G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 3+297 p. O. cl., $1.75.

From the author's introduction we quote the following paragraph, which gives some insight into the motive of his work: "It is plain that a practically omnipresent, invisible, living, intelligent force is operating in and through every living thing. To identify matter and this living intelligence by any system of idealism, monism, pantheism, or materialism, is to do violence to logic and misread the facts. The dark riddle of life is to explain why life is thus incorporating itself in material forms, and why the peculiarities, course, accidents, length of progress, and evils of the process are as they are. This little book, I believe, gives the keynote and method of solution of the riddle."

The hero parts with the heroine in Damascus, and after unsuccessfully tracing and following her to Pekin, Tokio, San Francisco, New York, Paris, Rome, he sees her occupying a chair in Hyde Park, London. They make peace and determine to meet in a year. A mysterious message calls the man to Egypt, and then follows an improbable story of very stirring life among the Majorcan Zingari tribes looking for "the nameless city."

Grand, Sarah, (pseud.) The heavenly twins. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1893. 13+679 p. D. cl., $1.

The boy and girl who receive in derision the name of "the heavenly twins" have a perfect genius for mischief. From the time they can walk until they settle down into married life their audacious, ridiculous pranks make most amusing reading. Evadne Frayling, however, is the real heroine, the author expending much space upon the elaboration of her original character. Evadne has fresh views about life and men and women, believing that there are as strong reasons for purity in men as for virtue in women. Her life, in her two marriages, illustrates her theories when brought into contact with realities. The author is an Englishwoman, who hides her identity under a pseudonym. She has written "Singularly deluded" and "Ideala"—the latter not having been reprinted in this country. "Ideala" reappears in this story.

Grand, Sarah, (pseud.) Ideala. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. 6+269 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 123.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Ideala is the name of an unconventional young Englishwoman possessed of many ideas, which she expresses freely and at length; they refer chiefly to the marriage relation, social immorality, the education of women, and the equality of men and women. Her story is a brief and familiar one; she is tempted to leave a brutal and unfaithful husband for the protection of a man she loves, but is prevented taking the step through the wise counsel of a friend. She leaves her husband's roof, however, and after a year spent in China returns to England to devote the remainder of her life to the weak and erring of her own sex. "Ideala" appears again in "The heavenly twins."

Grand, Sarah, (pseud.) Singularly deluded: a romance. [Anon.] N. Y., Appleton, 1893. 2+259 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 117.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Through an odd train of accidents Mrs. Leslie Somers is led to believe that her husband has deserted her while temporarily insane. In her attempts to find him she travels from England to France, and gets upon the track of another man, whose description answers to that of Mr. Somers. There are a number of exciting complications before all the mysteries are cleared up.

Grant, Arthur J. Greece in the age of Pericles. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. 13+ 331 p. il. maps, D. (The university ser.) cl., net, $1.25.

Two objects were kept in view by the author in the preparation of this work. First he tried to make his account of Greece as comprehensive as possible, and to omit none of the main forces that helped to mould Greek civilization; he has therefore given a good deal of prominence to the social and religious conditions of the country. Second, he has tried to treat of Greek history in relation to the general history of Europe.

Grant, Jeannette A. Miss Gray's girls; or, summer days in the Scottish Highlands. Bost., Joseph Knight Co., 1894 [1893.] c. 6+260 p. il. sq. O. hf. cl., $1.50.

A teacher, starting at Glasgow, takes a lively party of girls, her pupils, through the Trossachs to Oban, through the Caledonian Canal to Inverness, and as far north as Brora, missing no part of the matchless scenery and no place of historic interest. Returning through Perth, Stirling, Edinburgh, Melrose, and Abbotsford, the enjoyment of the party and the interest of the reader never lag. With all the sight-seeing, not the least interesting features of the book are the glimpses of Scottish home-life which the party from time to time are fortunate enough to be able to enjoy through the kindly hospitality of friends.

Grant, Rob. The opinions of a philosopher; il. by W. T. Smedley and C. S. Reinhart. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 2+ 224 p. D. cl., $1.

On a thread of story the author of "The reflections of a married man" strings a multitude of ideas on social, political, and other questions The married man has reached middle life and now philosophizes upon his son playing football at college, upon his daughter becoming a Christian scientist, and upon his own efforts in running for office. Fred and Josephine are made to give a fine picture of contemporary morals and manners.

Dr. Paul Gifford, who accompanied an exploring expedition to the very centre of the Australian Continent in 1874, became detached from his party, and after many hardships and adventures found himself in the midst of the fabled Fallen Race, the Anonos of Australia, who appeared like huge balls, covered with hair and with small paws and legs, and were nearer animals than human beings. The Great White Queen who ruled over them is a reminiscence of Haggard's "She." The whole story is a vivid effort of the imagination.

Gratry, A. Guide to the knowledge of God: a study of the chief theodicies: tr. by Abby Langdon Alger; with an introd. by W: Rounseville Alger. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 10+469 p. O. cl., $3.

The author was born in 1805 and died in 1872. He was a priest and professor of moral theology at Sorbonne. This work of Christian philosophy was crowned by the French Academy, of which Gratry was elected a member in 1867. To bring the contents of the original two volumes into one the superfluous appendices and some of the footnotes containing texts have been omitted; also the prefaces to the first three editions, abounding in personal and local references and the long polemical introduction. The author condenses the wisdom of twenty-five centuries and gathers up the treasures for his readers. His keynote is that "the demonstration of the existence of God is the supreme achievement of the reason."

The experiences of two London waifs are related by seven different authors, who each occupy a chapter in the narrative. The book is pathetic and humorous by turns, and seems adapted both to young readers and older ones.

Professor Asa Gray was not only one of the foremost of botanists, but a man of scientific genius, with remarkable powers of observation and equally remarkable talent for discerning principles and formulating theories. He was one of the earliest to recognize the value and the profound significance of Darwin's work, and the philosophy of evolution has had no abler or more acute exponent than he. His letters now collected are highly valuable for the range and interest of their subjects, and attractive by virtue of their charming style and the very engaging personality they reveal.

Grayson, Pauline. The social evil; or, the woman Lalarge. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, [1893.] c. 2–160 p. D. (Peerless ser., no. 61.) pap., 25 c.

The author sets forth in story form what she calls the "social evil," that is, the bringing into the world of a larger family than parents are able to provide for. She would have the births regulated by law, and so decrease the large class which becomes criminal because it has no other method of existing.

Greeley, Horace. Greeley on Lincoln; with Mr. Greeley's letters to Charles A. Dana and a lady friend; to which are added reminiscences of Horace Greeley; ed. by Joel Benton. N. Y., The Baker & Taylor Co., [1893.] c. 3–270 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

The opening treatise, "An estimate of Abraham Lincoln," shows Mr. Greeley's mind in contact with the questions and the personality which, perhaps, were most prominent in the course of his own career, and to a certain extent epitomize it. The letters to Mr. Dana and those to an intimate lady friend not only cover rare periods and incidents in Mr. Greeley's life, but they show the naive, unconscious motions of a mind never tempted to dissimulation, and (in the privacy for which they are intended) without motive to be other than sincere.

The scope of this volume is confined to explorations of great importance or peculiar interest made by men of American birth who are no longer living; two exceptions to the rule are included, Du Chaillu and Stanley, without whom the collection of sketches would be incomplete. Beginning with Louis Joliet, Peter Le Moyne, Jonathan Carver, and numerous others of the early days of this country, we find also Wilkes, Frémont, Kane, Hays, De Long, and Hale.

Green, Anna Katharine, [now Mrs. Rohlfs.] Marked "personal." N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 5+415 p. D. pap., 50 c.; cl., $1.

Twenty-five years back of the story lies the cause of the package marked "personal." Twelve years back lies a connecting link during the time of the New York draft riots of 1863. On his wedding-day, Samuel White, with everything to live for, is found dead in his room two hours after the ceremony. His son and young second wife employ friends and foes to get at the mystery of his death. The ingenious plot is built up with all the skill of the writer of "The Leavenworth case" to the very last chapter, which contains the surprising solutions of several mysteries.

A few hours before his death Michael Delancey bequeaths a fortune to Hamilton De Grow, of Cleveland, with a proviso that the latter will search in New York for a girl of specified name and characteristics, and in compliance with his last wishes bestow upon her the three millions of dollars in question. On De Grow's action in regard to this trust is dependent a story of sensational interests and tragic consequences. The action takes place in New York and Great Barrington, Massachusetts.

The guardian of Gwendolyn Ducie—Gervaise Forsyth—having gambled away her fortune of sixty thousand pounds, reflects that her coming of age in a few months will bring to him a day of reckoning. In consultation with a former gambling friend, who passes as a German professor expert in nervous disease, a plot is concocted to get the girl out of the world, either by proving her mad or by poisoning her. The way their unscrupulous plans are frustrated by a man who loves Gwendolyn is told with many details.

The central figure of this story of the days of Wesley and Whitefield, Tom Heron of Sax, is a wild, dare-devil young blacksmith, who falls under the influence of an itinerant Methodist preacher, and whose stormy religious experiences are described in detail. There are many characters and somewhat varied action in the story, which aims especially to show the religious condition of England in the first days of Methodism, and to make clear the points of difference and agreement existing between the Established Church and the followers of Wesley.

Ralph Robinson Green was the only son of the Rev. Rufus S. Green, of Orange, N. J.; his death by drowning in the Muskoka Lake region, Canada, in August of 1892, ended a life of great promise. He was born in 1874, so was only in his eighteenth year when he died; he was a bright, manly, talented boy, as energetic in his play as in his studies, and a true Christian without being a "prig." His life reads like a story; it includes descriptions of two trips to Europe and several vacation fishing trips.

In the life of General Nathaniel Greene we have the history of the most eventful period of the Revolutionary War, and the story of one of the leading characters of that period, and of one of the very first to take up arms for his country. He first enlisted as a private in an independent company formed at Providence, R. I.; his zeal and ability afterward raised him to the rank of commander of the forces of Rhode Island. His subsequent appointment as major-general, his services at Boston and New York, his brave conduct at Brandywine and Germantown and during the melancholy and trying days of Valley Forge, are minutely and forcibly described.

The old theme of a secret marriage between a gentleman and a maid of low degree is developed with all the tragic and emotional power of the author of "The silence of Dean Maitland." The story opens in Brittany, where Renée Kéronac becomes the wife of the young English barrister who has visited her remote home on a sketching tour. Returning to England alone, the young husband enters upon a course of deceit which culminates in the tragic death of the deserted wife and the abandonment of her young child. He marries again and becomes a chief justice, the strong plot reaching a thrilling climax when the deserted child is tried for child-murder before her own father and from his lips receives the fatal "last sentence."

In this volume, Mr. Grinnell treats of another race of Indians, the Blackfoot, in the same manner as he did the Pawnee in "Pawnee hero stories." These stories were told to him by the Indians themselves, and are given in the words of the original narrators as nearly as it is possible to render those words into the simplest every-day English. They are Indians' stories, pictures of Indian life drawn by Indian artists and showing this life from the Indian's point of view; they tell of the history, customs, and oral literature of the tribe. The author believes they depict the true character of the Indian as it is impossible for a white man to depict it.

The chapters included in this work treat the practical side of the subjects discussed. They have for some time been a feature of the editorial pages of The Publishers' Weekly. They are rich in information of a kind not easily otherwise obtained, which is simply presented and familiarly illustrated; the beginner cannot fail to derive help from the work, and the veteran, perhaps, suggestions. The chapter headings which we give plainly designate the subjects; the bibliographies of literature and of trade catalogues, etc., are careful and scholarly compilations, richly annotated, and invaluable for reference for others than booksellers. Contents: Preparatory training; Entering the profession; Bibliography of literature; Supplementary reading; In the store; Trade catalogues, papers, literary journals, etc., and their study; Arrangement and care of stock; Stock-books; Classification; Tables; Bulletin boards; Dusting; Window-dressing; Advertising; Learning stock; Buying stock; The order department; Delivery and shipping department. Index.

Gruber, Josef. A text-book of the diseases of the ear. 2d Amer. ed. from the 2d German ed., and ed. with additions by E: Law, M. D., and Coleman Jewell. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. 648 p. il. 8°, cl., $6.50.

Guerber, H. A. Myths of Greece and Rome narrated; with special reference to literature and art. N. Y., American Book Co., 1893. 2-428 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Aims to present a complete and entertaining account of Greek and Roman mythology in such a manner that the student will appreciate its great influence upon literature and art. These myths, an inexhaustible fund of inspiration for the poets and artists of the past, have also inspired many noted modern works. The better to impress this fact upon the student, appropriate quotations from the poetical writings of all ages from Hesiod's "Works and days" to Tennyson's "Œnone" have been inserted in the text, while copiductions of ancient masterpieces and noted examples of modern painting and sculpture are pleutifully used as illustrations.

Guérin, Eugénie de. Journal of Eugénie de Guérin; ed. by G. S. Trebutien. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. 2 v., 4+283; 4+239 p. S. cl., $3.

The reissue of Eugénie de Guérin's journal, uniform with that of her brother Maurice's, is full of interest to the admirers of this gifted pair. Her journals were first published in 1861 in France, and in English translation in 1865. These new volumes come from the Cambridge Press, and are printed on fine white paper with generous margins.

Gunter, Archibald Clavering, and Redmond, Fergus. A Florida enchantment: a novel. [New ed.] N. Y., Home Publishing Co., 1893. c. '91. 260 p. D. pap., 50 c.

St. Augustine, Florida, and New York City are in turns the scene of an impossible story. The time is the year 1891. A rich New York girl is represented as finding in an old curiosity store in St. Augustine a quaint black box, which contained a manuscript and a glass vial in which were four amber-colored seeds. The ms. tells a wonderful Rider Haggard story of Africa, the finding of the seeds and their mysterious power; they will change the sex of any one who eats one of them, it is claimed, changing a woman to a man, a man to a woman. The New York girl turns herself and her colored maid into the opposite sex, and reduces her lover to the abject condition of a woman. The adventures which ensue betray a vivid imagination.

Arena Pub. Co., 1892 [1893.] c. '91. 2–192 p. por. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A young novelist, poor, proud, and ambitious, goes south for literary study, travelling under an assumed name. He is engaged to an unattractive New York heiress, caring only for her money. At Chattanooga, Tenn., he meets Irene Stanton, a beautiful, talented young girl, falls deeply in love with her, and wins her affection, still, however, maintaining an affectionate correspondence with his fiancée. Irene discovers his duplicity by chance, rejects his suit, and he returns to New York determined to at last act honorably. He breaks his engagement and puts his remorse and love into a novel. This novel is the "mute confessor" through which he obtains from Irene a second and successful hearing.

Harnack, Adolf. Outlines of the history of dogma; tr. by Edwin Knox Mitchell. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1893. c. 10+ 567 p. O. cl., $2.50.

Adapted not only for a text-book for students, but for a popular and comprehensive history of the creeds of Christendom. Dr. Harnack begins with the first apostolic declarations concerning Christ, traces carefully the results of contact with the Hellenic schools of thought, notes the effect upon Christian doctrine of the political changes during the ages and conveys a clear understanding of the great historical controversies down to the days of Luther, out of which were gradually evolved the various creeds and formulas that give character to the different sects of to-day. The work is conveniently subdivided, each subdivision being preceded by a brief and masterly historical survey of the period considered. The book is printed in large type and has marginal index notes on nearly all of the pages, and a practical table of contents, which furnish ample facilities for ready reference.

Harris, J. Rendel. The newly-recovered Gospel of St. Peter, with a full account of the same. N. Y., Ja. Pott & Co., 1893. 67 p. D. pap., 50 c.

In the winter of 1886–87 the French Archæological Mission at Cairo published a volume made up of Greek documents found by excavation amongst the Christian tombs in Upper Egypt. At the end of this book are found the contents of a vellum manuscript of thirty-three leaves, containing portions of three lost Christian works—the Book of Enoch, the Gospel of Peter, and the Apocalypse of Peter. This Gospel of Peter is a product of the second century. It was considered heretical by the early Christians, because it does not believe in the humanity of Jesus nor his physical suffering.

Eleanor Halliday, the beautiful daughter of an old Knickerbocker family, marries for love Gerald Vernon, the only child of a wealthy widow, who hopes through the Halliday connection to gain an entrance into New York society. This wedding in a crowded fashionable New York church opens the story, which follows the career of the young couple on their bridal tour to Florida, where Eleanor's disillusion begins and she discovers that her husband is a very selfish, ordinary young man. Outside of this story is Eleanor's younger sister's love-tale and some clever satirical sketches of English and American society characters.

Sam Williams, the hero, was born on a Southern plantation in 1843. He describes his boyhood's home, the negro quarters, the peculiar characteristics of the African slave, with his superstitions and religious beliefs, the "cracker" and other social institutions of the old south, and ends with a quaint romance. The author aims to reproduce a picture of the south in ante-bellum days, although the story ends after the Rebellion, and deals incidentally with the southern secession.

Contains besides the title-story, "The conspiracy of Mrs. Bunker," "The transformation of Buckeye Camp" and "Their uncle from California." The first story is of Georgia, in the period following the war; the others relate to California.

Harte, Fs. Bret. Susy: a story of the plains. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. '92. 2+264 p. D. cl., $1.25.

In a former story by Bret Harte, called "A waif of the plains," "Susy," the heroine of the present story, first appears. There she and a little boy, Clarence Brant, were the only ones saved from Indians who attacked an emigrant train crossing the plains. In the present story "Susy" is the adopted daughter of Judge Peyton, and again comes in contact with Clarence Brant, who is a rich man. The unconventional scenes of love, murder, and revenge which follow could only have occurred in the unconventional life of California of thirty years ago.

Hatton, Jos. Under the great seal. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 4+406 p. D. cl., $1.

The opening scene is the little fishing village of "Heart's Delight," not many miles from St. John's, Newfoundland, the time being almost one hundred years ago. A conflict between the settlers and a company of unprincipled men, who claim their land "under the great seal" of George the Third, precipitates the action of the story, turning a beautiful picture of love and peace into one of hatred and revenge. One of the most deeply injured of the settlers seizes with his companions a French war-ship and enters upon a career of piracy, sweeping the Spanish main for twenty years. His treasures he brings back to bury in Newfoundland. His son's life in England, his love for a good girl, the finding of his father after many years, and the almost fabulous wealth that becomes his are full of romance.

Hawthorne, Julian, ed. The confessions of a convict; il. from life. Phil., Rufus C. Hartranft, 1893. c. 3–288 p. il. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

In his preface Mr. Hawthorne states that this diary was really written by a convict while serving a term in Auburn Prison. His reminiscences embrace many entertaining stories of prison life and vivid pictures of the officials and of his fellow-convicts, some of whom are easy of recognition under their pseudonyms. The notorious Jimmy Hope, the bank robber, was the bench companion of the writer in the workshop for two years, the picturesque adventures of his extraordinary career being embraced in the convict's narrative.

Hawthorne, Julian. Humors of the Fair; il. by Will E. Chapin. Chic., E. A. Weeks & Co., [1893.] 4–205 p. D. (The Marguerite ser., no. 12.) pap., 25 c.

An amusing account of the World's Columbian Exposition, giving Mr. Hawthorne's impressions of the "White City," of the notable features and scenes of the Fair grounds, of the officials and visitors, and last but not least of the customs of some of the foreign nations represented. His humorous comments are accompanied with characteristic pictures, portraying not only the humors, but also racial traits and national customs of both American and foreign peoples.

Hawthorne, Julian. Six cent Sam's; il. by J: Henderson Garnsey. St. Paul, Minn., The Price-McGill Co., [1893.] c. 6–332 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The title "Six cent Sam's" stands for a secluded and mysterious New York eating-house, where the inner man may be satisfied for six cents; the proprietor is a mysterious person, who disguises his true name, and is said to be "a mixture of St. Paul and the devil." All classes meet at his restaurant—rich and poor, the ignorant and cultured. Among other queer rules of the place is the following: If one guest offers to treat another and the offer is accepted, the guest is bound to entertain his host with a true story of his adventures. Many of the series of stories are brought on in this way; others grow out of the narrative. "Sam" figures in most of them. Hypnotism, spiritualism, and other isms" play conspicuous parts.

The "brambles" the writer attacks with his "jack-knife" are some of the minor difficulties which surround the great questions at issue in religious matters. He trusts his humble labors will make it easier for the younger men, who labor with him, to do the heavier work. His book is divided into seventeen chapters, chiefly devoted to a discussion of the authorship and meaning of the books of the Bible.

Haynes, Emory J., D.D. None such? there will yet be thousands. Bost., The North Publishing Co., 299 Devonshire St., 1893. c. 331 p. cl., $1.25.

Through an interesting story the writer points out new methods to the millionaire of disposing of his surplus, when wishing to help poor humanity. The principal character is a typical American millionaire, who, having no near relatives, and realizing that his life is nearing its end, conceives a plan of investing his thirty-five millions so that it may help hundreds and thousands of individuals at the critical moment of their lives with the aid of a few thousand dollars.

The Ethical Series, of which this is the second volume, will consist of a number of small volumes, each of which will be devoted to the presentation of a leading system in the history of modern ethics, in selections or extracts from the original work. These selections are accompanied by explanatory and critical notes, and are introduced by a short bibliography and a brief biographical sketch of the author of the system, a statement of the relation of the system to preceding ethical thought, and a brief explanation of the main features of the system and its influence on subsequent ethical thought.

Heilprin, Angelo. The Arctic problem and narrative of the Peary relief expedition of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. Phil., Contemporary Pub. Co., 1893. c. 2+157 p. il. O. cl., $3; Popular ed., $1.

Contents: The Arctic problem; Polar expeditions; The Spitzbergen route to the Pole; The Peary relief expedition; A lost companion; The Greenland ice-cap and its glaciers. These papers are mainly records of personal experiences in the north and reflections upon the best method of attaining the object which has so long baffled the energies of the hardy explorer. A portion of the work has already appeared in narrative form in Scribner's, and another portion is an amplification of an address delivered before the Geographical Club of Phila.

Heine, H: The family life of Heinrich Heine: one hundred and twenty-two family letters of the poet, hitherto unpublished, from his college days to his death, by his nephew, Baron Ludwig von Embden; from the German, by C: De Kay. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. '92. 18+356 p. pors. D. cl., $1.50.

The family life of Heinrich Heine has been so often falsely depicted in many ways, and his relations to his nearest kindred so wofully twisted that his nephew, at his mother's request, published this series of letters, which she had long preserved as a precious legacy of her beloved brother. They are not literary at all. They simply reflect the hopes and needs of the man, his attitude of mind towards money, his wife, household, publishers, friends, enemies, and relatives.

Heine, H: Heinrich Heine's life told in his own words; ed. by Gustav Karpeles, and tr. from the German, by Arthur Dexter. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1893. 10+375 p. D. cl., $1.75.

A biography of Heine, compiled from the poet's writings. The frontispiece portrait of Heine was photographed expressly for the volume, from the original medallion modelled from life by David d'Angers.

Twenty-seven little essays pointing out the weakness and strength of human nature as the author has studied it in various characters. First published in 1873.

Henty, G. A. In the days of the mutiny: a military novel. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., [1893.] c. 2–397 p. D. (Broadway ser., no. 21.) pap., 50 c.

The events which led up to the Sepoy mutiny in India and the horrible and historical scenes of the massacre at Cawnpore and the siege of Lucknow are made the motive of an exciting story, in which English officers and their families figure along with the leading characters of the natives involved in the mutiny.

Henty, G. A. A Jacobite exile: being the adventures of a young Englishman in the service of Charles XII. of Sweden; il. by Paul Hardy. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 6–353 p. map, D. cl., $1.50.

The events take place during the reign of William of Orange. The father of the hero is a Jacobite gentleman who to avoid arrest is compelled to flee to Sweden. Here the hero, Charlie Carstairs, and a young companion engage in the service of Charles XII., taking part in the wars between Sweden and Poland. Carstairs acting as a scout, falls into the hands of Polish bandits After numerous exciting adventures and hair-breadth escapes he finally secures his release and returns to Sweden. Then he serves for a time under Marlborough in France and distinguishes himself signally. His father is afterwards pardoned and they return to England.

Henty, G. A. St. Bartholomew's eve: a tale of the Huguenot wars; il. by H. J. Draper. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. 4–384 p. map, D. cl., $1.50.

A story of a lad of English birth but Huguenot parentage, who visits relatives in France at the time when the feeling between the Catholics and Huguenots was bitterest and the country was disturbed by religious strife and dissension. His relatives being leaders in the Huguenot party, the hero devotes himself heart and soul to the Protestant cause, following it faithfully through the varied and exciting scenes that preceded and led up to the terrible massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day.

Henty, G. A. Through the Sikh war: a tale of the conquest of the Punjaub; il. by Hal Hurst. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 5–386 p. map, D. cl., $1.50.

Percy Groves, a plucky, high-spirited boy, the son of an English officer, loses his parents at an early age and joins his uncle residing on his estate in India, situated in the very centre of the troubles that developed later into the Sikh war. The hero and his uncle become involved in the dangers and intrigues that surround them, and take active part in the war, passing through many thrilling experiences and adventures during the two notable campaigns that resulted in the conquest of the Punjaub.

Her heart was true: a story of the Peninsular war founded on fact; by an idle exile. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 2+134 p. nar. D. (The unknown lib., no. 21.) cl., 50 c.

Bessie Sweetapple's heart is true to Robin Norcott, who gets himself into trouble with smugglers and for two years follows the fortunes of the Duke of Wellington. The story opens among the quarries on the coast of England, then shifts to Spain and Waterloo.

Herbart, J: F: The science of education; its general principles deduced from its aim and the aesthetic revelation of the world; from the German; with a biographical introd. by H: M. and Emmie Felkin and a preface by Oscar Browning. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1893. 15+268 p. D. (Heath's pedagogical lib.) cl., $1.

Herbart's chief educational work is represented by this volume. To those who desire to study psychology in relation to education few writings will have more value than those of Herbart. He was a psychologist of the first rank, the founder, some would call him, of modern psychology. He was also a practical teacher.

Herbert, G: The temple: sacred poems and private ejaculations; with engavings after Albert Dürer, Marcantanio, Holbein, and other artists. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. 252 p. 12°, cl., $2.

These prose poems are drawn from the histories of ancient Oriental nations; they embrace in all nearly fifty traditious and are the earliest knowu traditions of the human race They so closely resemble the Bible narratives as to be most interesting. Herder is little known in this country save by his work on the "Spirit of Hebrew poetry;" he was a man of wonderful literary attainments, familiar with almost every Oriental or European language. It was in the study of Oriental languages that these traditions came under his notice.

Professor Herron believes that "a great idea is now leading the world's thought and lifting its hopes." He sees everywhere the signs of universal change. "We are," he says, "in the beginning of a revolution that will strain all existing religious and political institutions and test the wisdom and heroism of the earth's purest and wisest souls: a revolution that will regenerate society with the judgment of infinite love." Under the title of "The new redemption," in a series of six discourses, he portrays with impassioned and yet temperate eloquence the duties of the church in these new and trying times.

Higginson, T: Wentworth, and Channing, E: English history for American readers. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1893. c. 30+334 p. maps, il. D. cl., $1.30.

The name "English history for American readers" suggests the keynote of the book. The events in English annals which have had the most direct influence on the history and institutions of our own land are given the most space. In the treatment of every detail the authors have accepted the best result of modern English investigation, and have aimed to avoid all unfair or onesided judgments. "A list of some useful books for consultation" covers six pages.

Higginson, T: Wentworth, and Higginson, Mary Thacher. Such as they are: poems. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 3–71 p. il. sq. D. cl., $1.

These poems have appeared in the Century Magazine, Harper's Magazine, the Atlantic, the Cosmopolitan, Scribner's, St. Nicholas, etc. As now presented they are most gracefully illustrated and printed on rich laid paper. Bound in green cloth with silver stamping.

Hill, D: Jayne. Genetic philosophy. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 13+382 p. D. cl., $1.75.

In this volume David Jayne Hill, president of the University of Rochester, author of "Elements of psychology," "Social influence of Christianity," etc., strives to solve the riddle of philosophy from the side of the "knowable," or the genetic method. He attacks in a scientific manner the genesis of matter, life, consciousness, feeling, thought, will, art, morality, religion and science. Several of the chapters were first published in the Philosophical Review and The Popular Science Monthly.

Hill, F: Stanhope. Twenty years at sea; or, leaves from my old log-books. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 7+273 p. D. cl., $1.

A sailor's life fifty years ago is truthfully depicted in the first part of this book called "In the merchant service." The second part, "In the naval service," embraces the veritable experiences of the author in the navy during our Civil War at the capture of New Orleans, chasing blockade-runners, etc.

Hill, Georgiana. A history of English dress: from the Saxon period to the present day. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. 2 v., 16+322; 5+342 p. il. pors. O. cl., $7.50.

The author does not discuss the origin of clothes, which would involve too many principles of psychology. She traces the changes that have occurred in the fashion of the apparel of English people from the days of the Roman occupation. The descriptions involve references to many subjects of general interest, especially in earlier times, when the evolution of costume is best seen by following the course of social life and the development of the arts of civilization.

Hiram Golf's religion; or, the shoemaker by the grace of God. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1892. c. 3–127 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

The minister with whom Hiram had often discussed his sermons and their usefulness summed up his character in these words: "I gave him little, he gave me much. He was a priest without the robes of office, a humble laborer in the vineyard, an honest creature, a true friend. His life was incarnate Christianity. His death—well, my dear boy, such as he never die. He is of the few who enjoy two immortalities—one there, one here." This simple shoemaker's conversations are full of wise thoughts and practical advice.

Hoare, E: N. The Fairhope venture: an emigration story. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 3–379 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The Fairhopes are the children—three sons and a daughter—of an English clergyman. Young Fraser Fairhope emigrates to Canada, and soon after circumstances force the rest of the family to follow him. This "venture," while in many ways unpleasant, tests and proves the true worth of the young people. A murder trial, in which Fraser Fairhope is seriously involved, is the central episode of the story.

Hobbes, J: Oliver, [pseud. for Mrs. Craigie.] A study in temptations. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1893. c. 6+209 p. nar. D. (The unknown lib., no. 23.) cl., 50 c.

The author of "Some emotions and a moral" makes another study of married life, under unusual circumstances. Sophia Jenyns was born in the shadow of a double tragedy. Her mother died in giving birth to her, and her father ended his own life in despair. Sophia is brought up by her father's friend, Tom Wrath, a famous artist. She is impulsive and wayward, and becomes an actress. Tom loves her and makes her his wife; but the marriage is kept secret for two years, that her professional life may not suffer. Temptations beset both during this period, Sophia going to the very edge of the precipice.

Hoff, F. Wallace. Two hundred miles on the Delaware River: a canoe cruise from its headwaters to the Falls at Trenton; with an historical appendix. Columbian ed. Trenton, N. J., [C. L. Traver,] 1893. c. 7+180 p. il. O. cl., net, $1.50.

The first intention of the author was to give a succinct account only of a canoe cruise down the Delaware to enable future voyageurs to estimate the time required for such a trip, and also to present some of the obstacles and pleasures likely to be encountered. But as the trip was crowded with matters of interest relating to local scenery, towns, and characteristic bits, the original plan was departed from, the narrative growing rich with entertaining matter as the cruise advanced. The beautiful scenery of the Delaware valley, the many amusing camp episodes and fishing exploits, receive full justice.

Dr. Percy's great work, "The metallurgy of lead, including desilverization and cupellation," was published in 1870 and has become a standard in several languages. During the past twenty years so much that is new has been introduced in American practice that a book embodying latest improvements is a necessity. The author, who is professor in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, intends his book especially for Americans, and has discussed new European methods chiefly in connection with their applicability to this country. This book is intended for the student, the metallurgist and the investigator.

Intended for a burlesque on the great fuss now made about America's great debt to Columbus. The author pretends to discover Europe with the object of establishing a protectorate and bringing the people now in possession under new rule. He travels around Europe and makes many humorous reflections upon prevailing customs and abuses.

Holt, Emily Sarah. One snowy night. Bost., A. I. Bradley & Co., [1893.] 4–384 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

According to standard historical authorities the people of Oxford, England, were surprised in the year 1159 by the arrival of thirty Germans, who acted in obedience to the wishes of their leader, Gerhardt, who believed it the mission of himself and band to evangelize England. On this remote episode of English history is founded a story that shows the attitude of English Christians toward this German movement, and which introduces several phases of Oxford's religious life, notably the Jewish element.

Hope, Andrée. The Vyvyans; or, the mystery of the Rue Bellechasse. Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1893. c. 217 p. D. (Globe lib., v. 1, no. 179.) pap., 25 c.

In the prologue is pictured the mysterious murder of a Russian prinee in the Rue Belleehasse, Paris. The seene then shifts to England, and the story follows the fortunes of the Vyvyans, a county family of high rank, but impoverished, unserupulous, and "fast." In the tragic love-affair of the youngest daughter, Sylvia, is found the solution of the mystery of the Rue Bellechasse. The scene alternates between England, Rome, and Paris.

Hope, Anthony. Half a hero: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 4+314 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new series, no. 738.) pap., 50 c.

One of England's South Pacific colonies—New Zealand probably—is made the scene under the name of "New Lindsey." At the opening of the story there has been a change in the government, and Mr. Medland, the leader and idol of the labor element, has been made premier. Medland is the hero of the story, which contains equal parts of politics and love. He and his daughter "Daisy" are most interesting figures. Medland is not a faultless character, just falling short of what he might have been, but redeeming the error of his life through his heroic death. The little group of the Government House people are sketched boldly and cleverly, as are indeed all the characters, with but a few strokes of the pen.

Hope, M. J. Joan. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 157 p. D. cl., 60 c.

An English story, tracing the fortunes of three children, two sisters and a brother, abandoned by their father after their mother's death. They are taken to the workhouse and separated for many years, to meet in after life, respected, prosperous, and independent. The story of Joan, the youngest sister, is given special prominence.

Author is professor of physics in the Drexel Institute, Phila. His intention has been to provide a book which should prove useful to the practical man, as well as one which would serve as a basis for a lecture course to students. He has therefore devoted some space to the development of correct elementary ideas of matter and energy.

Hoppin, Emily Howland. From out of the past: the story of a meeting in Touraine. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. c. 5–238 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A slender thread of plot holds together descriptions of pleasant wanderings in Touraine. The successful artist Allan Doane meets his old love Margaret Rivers, recently widowed, and her bewitching daughter Hester. They wander for days among the historic scenes of southern France. The romance is skilfully managed and the climax left in doubt to the very end.

Horace, [Quintus Horatius Flaccus.] Horatian echoes: translations of the odes of Horace, by J: Osborne Sargent; with an introd. by Oliver Wendell Holmes. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 20+240 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Dr. Holmes' characteristic introduction bears testimony to Mr. Sargent's skill as a translator and to his culture and scholarship. He has made translations of eighty-seven of the odes of Horace, which are issued in a handsome volume in white and gold, the binding having been designed by Mrs. Whitman; valuable notes are added to the odes. A biographical sketch of Mr. Sargent prefixed to the odes gives the date of his death—Dec. 28, 1891. He was Dr. Holmes' life-long friend.

Hornung, Ernest W: Tiny Luttrell. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 5+364 p. D. cl., $1.

A carefully conceived and carefully executed character study of a young Australian girl, impetuous and somewhat slangy, intelligent and amusing, and with a warm, loving heart. The scene changes from Australia "in the bush" to England. "Tiny Luttrell's" story entirely concerns her heart history and her struggle as to whether she shall marry the man she loves or the man who loves her. The minor characters are well described.

Prof. Horsford's paper constructs in imagination Leif Ericsson's house, from the remains of it found on or near the Charles River, and gives an account of his investigations; it is accompanied by "a plan of site of Northmen's landing and settlement on Charles River" from a sketch by his daughter, Miss Cornelia Horsford. Miss Horsford's paper, describing her investigations of the remains of Thorfinn's house and of graves of Northmen, also shows the probable movements of the Northmen in this country from the time Leif Ericsson discovered Vineland to the arrival of the Europeans at the end of the fifteenth century.

Intended to give the American student of economics a glance at the rural conditions which have resulted in the terrible calamity of the Russian famine. Treats of the rise of "peasantism," the development of landholding in Russia, community of land, the productive forces of the peasantry, taxation, wages, surplus population, dissolution of patriarchal family, modern agricultural classes, agrarian communism, the famine as a result of agricultural backwardness, the rise of capitalistic agriculture. Appendix of statistical tables. The author is Seligman Fellow in Political Science, Columbia College N. Y.

Houssay, F: The industries of animals. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. 6+258 p. il. D. (Contemporary science ser., no. 23.) cl., $1.25.

Research has raised the study formerly called "natural history" to the rank of "natural science." In the light of the accumulated facts of science the writer has made a study on "the industries of animals." Under this head he describes their methods of hunting, fishing, their wars and expeditions, methods of defence, their harvests and industries, provision for rearing the young, dwellings, defence and sanitation of dwellings, etc.

Hovey, R: Seaward: an elegy on the death of Thomas William Parsons. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1893. c. 4+44+19 p. O. cl., $1.50.

This elegy was originally published in The Independent, Nov. 17, 1892, where it attracted considerable attention. Mr. Hovey has published privately two little volumes of verses under the titles "The laurel" and "Launcelot and Guenevere." This volume is printed on extra quality of parchment paper, with wide margin, and is illuminated throughout with beautifully designed initials, in mediæval red.

Howard, Blanche Willis, [now Mrs. von Teuffel.] No heroes; il. by Jessie McDermott Walcott. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 3+97 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

Dr. Rea's oldest boy, Bob, who mourns the absence of heroes in the prosaic little New England town in which he lives, turns out a real hero himself; he gives up a delightful trip to the West Indies that he has been invited to take with another boy, and upon which his heart is firmly fixed, and volunteers to remain at home and help his father in an epidemic of small-pox. There is a crusty old man in the story, who develops unexpected qualities of heroism.

Twice the author has travelled through Iceland, in 1890 and 1891. He has also consulted twenty-five works of Icelandic travel and many articles in books and magazines. The sketch of the island is complete. There are few countries of such narrow limits in which there are such startling contrasts of scenery and climate. The people have a language and customs of a thousand years ago, and many very interesting details are given of their peculiar institutions.

Howells, W: D. The coast of Bohemia: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1893. 2+340 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The story of Cornelia Saunders, an Ohio girl, who comes to New York to study art; she drifts into a little circle of artists and writers which is not "Bohemia," but very near to it, has a love-story, and interrupts her career to marry the man she loves.

Howells, W: D. Evening dress: farce. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 3+59 p. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c.

A little farce, which has for its subject a tired man's efforts to put on his dress suit and join his wife at a reception; he falls asleep, is awakened by a friend at the last moment, only to discover that his dress suit is missing; the fun comes in in his attempts to borrow a dress suit, and so wasting the evening till his wife returns, urged to do so by the remembrance that she has locked up the dress suit.

In 1850 Mr. Howells' father, who was a Welshman, moved to a property on the Little Miami River in southern Ohio to take charge of a saw- and grist-mill and superintend their transformation into paper-mills. Mr. Howells describes a year of this life in a half-settled country, and tells how perfectly happy he was in his home-life and how intensely he suffered from homesickness when obliged to leave his mother to help earn money for a large family.

Howells, W: D. The unexpected guests: a farce. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 3+54 p. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c.

A slight misunderstanding over a dinner invitation causes some amusing complications, which Mr. Howells has worked up into a capital little play.

Howells, W: D. The world of chance: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 2+375 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A young man who comes from a small New York town of the interior to New York City, and brings with him a ms. of an unpublished novel, hoping through it to obtain fame and fortune, is the hero. His experience with publishers and his descent from the highest pinnacle of hope to the depths of despair are told with all the realism at Mr. Howells' command. His chance acquaintance with a family of Socialists presents a not often described phase of city life.

As its title indicates, this book deals with the scientific aspects of psychic phenomena, with the avowed object of bringing psychology within the domain of the exact sciences. To that end the author formulates a working hypothesis for the systematic study of all psychic phenomena, normal or abnormal. He holds that all such phenomena, whether designated by the name of hypnotism, mesmerism, somnambulism, trance, spiritism, demonology, miracle, psycho-therapeutics, genius, or insanity, are to be referred to some general law which will correlate the whole subject-matter and remove it from the realm of the supernatural.

A detective story. The incidents take place in New York City and along the Hudson above Dobbs Ferry. A celebrated lawyer whose daughter is supposed to be entitled to the Dugdale millions is not satisfied that the direct heir has been sufficiently sought after. He employs his confidential clerk to make investigations into old records, and the result is skilfully kept as a final surprise.

Hueffer, H. Ford. The shifting of the fire. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892 [1893.] 4+322 p. D. (The independent novel ser.) cl., $1.

Clement Hollebone, the senior member of the firm of Hollebone & Clarkson, also a physician and a skilful chemist, betroths himself to Edith Ryland, a professional violinist. Before their marriage is consummated Clement is declared a bankrupt, and Edith breaks her troth and marries a wealthy elderly suitor, who soon resolves into a dissatisfied husband and becomes chief actor in a domestic drama in which a Stradivarius violin and a phial of poison play prominent parts.

Hughes, Rob. M. General Johnston. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 9+353 p. por. D. (Great commanders ser., no. 4.) cl., $1.50.

General Joseph E. Johnston was a graduate of West Point and a friend and classmate of General Robert E. Lee. Like Lee, after the ordinance of secession had passed the Virginia legislature, he resigned from the United States army and offered his services to his native state, Virginia. He had done brilliant service in the Seminole and Mexican wars, which is fully described, together with his dashing career in the Confederate army. It was Gen. Johnston's wish, expressed a year before his death in 1891, that Mr. Hughes should be his biographer, and a more elaborate work already undertaken was superseded by the present volume brought within the limits of this series. Those who may desire to study Gen. Johnston's military career critically, and to learn his side of the differences he had with the Confederate executive, are referred to a brief but interesting list of writings.

Hughes, T: Tom Brown's school-days, by an old boy. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1893.] 4–441 p. por. il. D. cl., $3; large-pap. ed., $6.

The frontispiece is a portrait of Thomas Hughes. Illustrated with twenty-two photogravures of the historic scenes of "Rugby." There is a large-paper edition, limited to 125 numbered copies, with the photogravures on India paper. Neatly bound in black and gold.

Hugo, Victor. Ruy Blas: a drama in five acts; il. with numerous compositions by Adrien Moreau; etched by Champollion. Edition de luxe. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1894 [1893.] 5–167 p. Q. cl., $5.

The translator hides under the initials W. D. S. A. The twelve-syllable metre of rhyming verse has been adopted, as it was desired to render the form as well as the spirit of the drama. The volume is printed throughout on parchment linen drawing-paper, which brings out the fine etchings. Edition limited to 500 numbered copies.

Hulme, F: E: The birth and development of ornament. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. 12+340 p. 12°, cl., $1.25.

Hume, D: Hume's treatise of morals and selections from the "Treatise of the passions;" with an introd. by Ja. H. Hyslop. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1893. c. 3+275 p. D. (Ethical ser.) cl., $1.10.

The initial number of the Ethical series, which will consist of a number of small volumes, each to be devoted to the presentation of a leading system in the history of modern ethics, in selections or extracts from the original works. These selections are accompanied by explanatory and critical notes and introduced by a short bibliography of the author's works, a brief biographical sketch of the writer, a statement of the relation of the system to preceding ethical thought, and a brief explanation of the main features of the system and its influence on subsequent ethical thought. Prepared with special reference to undergraduate instruction and study in colleges.

Hume, Fergus. The chronicles of fairyland: fantastic tales for old and young; il. by M. Dunlop. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. 3–191 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The writer, falling asleep in his chair before the fire, is transported into fairyland; in the Forest of Enchantment he meets Phaucie, the librarian of King Oberon, who shows him the king's books, which he is allowed to read, under the condition that he only remembers seven of the stories to tell to the children of the world. These seven "fantastic tales" are rich in imagination and meaning.

Hume, Fergus. The harlequin opal: a romance. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1893. c. 2–432 p. D. (Rialto ser., no. 52.) hf. mor., $1.50; pap., 50 c.

This novel, from the author of "The mystery of a hansom cab," deals with an extraordinary state of facts in a mythical South American republic. The adventures of four Englishmen in search of the marvellous Harlequin Opal whose rays prophesy peace or war according as they are blue or red, with a vivid description of a modern sea-fight—for which the author is possibly somewhat indebted to the recent Chilean troubles—form the principal features of the story.

Humphrey, Maud, and Tucker, E. S. The book of pets. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1893.] c. unp. col. il. Q. bds., $2.50.

Twenty-four gayly colored pictures of little children and their pets after water-color designs; on some of the pages are appropriate rhymes.

Hunt, Leigh. An answer to the question "What is poetry?" including remarks on versification; ed. by Albert S. Cook. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1893. c. 5+98 p. D. cl., 60 c.

The essay here reprinted is the initial one in Leigh Hunt's "Imagination and fancy," which is among the very best of his prose works. In the preface to that volume he thus describes his object in writing it: "To furnish such an account, in an essay, of the nature and requirements of poetry as may enable readers in general to give an answer on those points to themselves and others."

Hunter, J:, D.D. Devotional services for public worship on the basis of those prepared by J: Hunter, D.D.: adapted to American uses, by Ruen Thomas, D.D. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1893. c. 4+156 p. D. cl., $1.50.

These "services" (based on those prepared by Rev. Dr. John Hunter, of Trinity Church, Glasgow, Scotland) are intended to give variety and richness to that part of the sanctuary service which has too often been made to depend solely on the spiritual mood of the minister. The language used in petition, confession, and adoration is that which has been sanctioned in all ages of the Christian Church as specially adapted thereto.

Huntington, Burton Ames, comp. The coming American civil war: Washington's words of warning, Lincoln's apprehension, and the prophecy of General Grant; the indications of coming conflict abundant and certain. Minneapolis, Minn., published by the author, Burton Ames Huntington, [for sale by The Western War Assoc., St. Paul, Minn., 1013 Pioneer Press Building,] 1893. c. 301 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The book is divided into two parts: the first is a general tirade against the Roman Catholic Church in America, which the author accuses as aiming to gain possession of the government for its own purposes; the second part is devoted exclusively to quotations and reprints from newspapers and books.

Huntington, Mrs. Mary H. The strange envelope; or, twice married: a novel. N. Y., American News Co., [1893.] c. 252 p. S. pap., 25 c.

Judge Vernor, of a proud Florida family, receives an offer for his daughter's hand, which he indignantly refuses. The young people bring him round by means of a deep-laid scheme, and the "strange envelope" reveals the true reason why the judge was not to be married.

Huntington, W: Reed, D.D. Short history of "The book of common prayer," with certain papers illustrative of liturgical revision, 1878–1892. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1893. c. 3+234 p. D. cl., $1.

Contents: A short history of the book of common prayer; Revision of the American common prayer; The book annexed; its critics and its prospects. In appendix are papers on: Permanent and variable characteristics of the prayer-book—a sermon before revision, 1878; The outcome of revision, 1892; and a tabular view of additions made at the successive revisions, 1552-1892.

Huntley, Florence. The dream-child. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 9+229 p. por. O. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Through a dreadful accident Mr. and Mrs. Varien lose a beautiful little girl of a year and a half old. Mrs. Varien's heart is almost broken, but about six months after Stella's death consolation is given her in a remarkable manner. She begins to live her real life in sleep, and for eighteen years takes up her dream just where it ended the night before. In this dream she is always with Stella in the spirit world, and witnesses her gradual development into a beautiful woman, who is finally translated to higher spheres. After this Mrs. Varien has another long dream, and in it finds her "spiritual affinity." She comes back to earth long enough to relate her experience to her husband, and then leaves him "for eternity" for her spirit mate.

Hurlbut, Ella Childs. Mrs. Clift-Crosby's niece. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., 1893. c. 2-178 p. D. cl., $1.

The story opens with the death of a young girl in a New York hospital. Her new-born baby is befriended by the young house physician, who learns that the child's father—a man of good family—is also dead. Through his efforts the little girl is adopted by Mrs. Clift-Crosby, her father's sister, and is reared in comfort and luxury. She makes her début and enters New York society life. Her love-story is a sad one.

Hurlbut, Jesse Lyman. Revised normal lessons. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1893. c. 111 p. D. flex. cl., 40 c.; pap., 25 c.

A revision of "Outline normal lessons," first printed as leaflets, and afterwards, in 1885, gathered into a book; contains a general view of the most important subjects necessary to a knowledge of the Bible and of Sunday-school work.

Hurst, J: Fletcher, D.D. Short history of the Christian church. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. '92. 35+672 p. Maps, O. cl., $3.

Based on the series of five short histories by Bishop Hurst, which appeared in the following order: "The reformation," 1884; "The early church," 1886; "The mediæval church," 1887; "The modern church in Europe" 1888; and "The church in the United States," 1890 The generous reception accorded these smaller works has shown that the treatment of condensation so successfully applied to the secular sciences may be used with equally good results for the popularization of historical theology. That which was done in the smaller histories for each peroid is here done for all the periods taken together, and a survey is presented of the whole of ecclesiastical history, from the founding of the Christian Church and the preaching of the apostles to the latest phases of religious belief in Europe and America.

Hutton, Laurence. Edwin Booth. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 2+59 p. por. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c.

Between Laurence Hutton and Edwin Booth a lifelong friendship existed—hence his sketch of the great actor's life before and behind the curtain is based upon observation and an intimate knowledge of his talents and virtues. From his wandering life with his father as a boy, till death called him at the Players, through his many great successes on the stage, and his disappointments and sorrows off it, the brief narrative traces his picturesque figure with a deep and sincere sympathy.

Specially adapted to pupils who have completed the second book in the author's series entitled "Practical lessons in the use of English." The aim is not to teach the greatest possible number of facts about the English language, but to give the pupil a mastery of the leading grammatical principles as a means towards the right understanding and correct use of English.

Hyde, Rev. T. Alex. Ecce orator! Christ the orator; or, never man spake like this man. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1893. c. 2+212 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

"The records of the life of Jesus are for the most part reports of His sermons and cannot be correctly interpreted unless studied in the light of His oratorical methods. The aim of this book, therefore, is to present Christ in His most fascinating character as a great orator, which He undoubtedly was, and by unfolding some of the dramatic scenes of His life to impress His truths in the most vivid manner upon the mind of the reader."—Preface.

Hyde, W. T. C. How do you spell it? or words as they look: a book for busy people; with an appendix defining many commercial and business terms in every-day use. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 2–342 p. D. cl., $1.

A novel method of fixing upon the vision the correct spelling of troublesome words. The alphabetical list which the book embraces contains practically all of the words, including derivatives in general use and also some of the derivatives which have troublesome primitives; in this list the letters which are ordinarily transposed, misplaced, omitted, or otherwise misused are printed in bold-faced type, thus emphasizing to the eye the picture of the word as correctly spelled. The orthography is Webster's. The work claims to contain the largest compilation of homophonous words (those alike in sound but different in spelling) ever published. These words are first yoked together in the alphabet with their different meanings given—the only cases in which meanings are given—and then repeated separately.

Hyne, C. J. Cutcliffe. The recipe for diamonds. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 6+241 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 129.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

In strolling around Genoa, two Englishmen pick up an old ms. at a bookseller's shop, which turns out to be the diary of Raymond Lully, who lived in the twelfth century, and who claimed to have then discovered the art of making diamonds from common wood charcoal. The recipe for making the diamonds is not in the diary, the reader being directed to one of the prehistoric mounds on the isle of Majorca, where Lully had inscribed it on the walls of the tomb. As a third party becomes the possessor of this information, the interest of the story rests in the struggle of the three men to get first to the island and obtain the recipe.

Solners, the master-builder is an egotist consumed with jealousy of the geniuses that have existed before him and of the rising talent about him. His wife has no sympathy with his ambitions but spends her whole life for duty after the death of her children and the burning of her inherited home. Hilda, a young enthusiast, succeeds in again inspiring Solners to surpass his confrères in his art. She spurs him on to a reckless act in which he loses his life, and she is hysterically glad that he has fallen from the top of a building.

Jackson, G: Anson. The son of a prophet. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 9+394 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The story of Eleazer Ben Shammah—"the son of a prophet"—is the picture of a life during the reign of King Solomon and his immediate successors, with the scenes in Palestine and Egypt. It is an attempt to create the character of the man who wrote the Book of Job, and to trace certain conditions, political, intellectual and spiritual, which compelled this utterance. The story deals with the long and strenuous conflict between the faithful adherents of Jewish worship and the priests of Astarte and Baal.

James, H: Essays in London, and elsewhere. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 4+305 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"London," the opening essay, records Mr. James' impressions of that historic city, when he first made its acquaintance many years ago. The others are chiefly literary studies of French, American, and English writers; they are entitled, James Russell Lowell, Frances Anne Kemble, Gustave Flaubert, Pierre Loti, "The journal of the brothers de Goncourt," "Browning in Westminster Abbey," Henrik Ibsen, Mrs. Humphry Ward, Criticism, and "An animated conversation."

James, H: Picture and text. N. Y., Harper & Bros., 1893. 5+175 p. por. S. (Harper's American essayists ser.) cl., $1.

A number of sketchy essays, chiefly on artists and art subjects. The book includes critical estimates of the leading illustrators of our time, and gives a clear idea of the importance of book illustration to-day. It closes with a drama of unusual charm, entitled "After the play," which will be particularly enjoyed by lovers of art.

James, H: The private life. [Also] Lord Beaupré. [Also] The visits. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 2+232 p. S. cl., $1.

Important members of the English aristocracy, some literary glories, and a great theatrical success meet among the beauties of Switzerland, and between the incidents, small-talk, and gossip of summer vacation existence get glimpses of "the private life" hidden under slight mysteries. Lord Beaupré worries about the fortune-hunters that will follow him when he has come into the title from which he is still separated by two lives, and plans a means of self-defence, which later works against him. In the last story a young girl takes her mother's friend into her confidence and binds her over to keep inviolate the vow made to conceal the cause of her death.

James, H: The real thing, and other tales. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 4+275 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1.

"The real thing," the opening story, relates with delicate humor the perplexities of an artist who accepts as models two elderly society people whose penniless condition drives them to this method of gaining a living. The second story, "Sir Dominick Ferrand," is based upon a package of papers found in an old davenport bought at second-hand by a literary man; its mystery is cleverly managed. The other stories are: "Nona Vincent," "The chaperon" and "Greville Fane." They are all of London life, touching slightly its artistic and literary side.

James, H: The wheel of time; Collaboration; Owen Wingrave. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 3+220 p. S. cl., $1.

Three short stories about English people and having the scenes in England. "The wheel of time" is a society sketch, in which the ingenious match-making plans of certain elderly people in good social standing are followed by unexpected results. "Collaboration" is characterized by a quiet humor that is in marked contrast with the closing sketch, "Owen Wingrave." In the latter a curious psychologic question appears, with a ghost story, which is followed by a tragedy.

Janeway, J. B. H. His love for Helen. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham, 1893. c. 4–314 p. D. pap., 50 c.

A story of the Rocky Mountains and the plains of Colorado and Kansas in the days when the "cowboy" was a mighty man. Shows many scenes which disclosed the true manliness and warm hearts hidden under the rough exterior of the "cowboys."

Janvier, T: A. An embassy to Provence. N. Y., The Century Co., 1893. c. 4+132 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

In 1879 Richard Watson Gilder in travelling through Provence came upon a "nest" of Provençal poets. The embassy, composed of the author and his wife, took a drive through Provence in a one-horse chaise for the sake of visiting these poets so desirous of preserving their own language and local color, and to learn their theories of art and literature. The poets visited were Roumanille, Matthieu, Wyse, Aubanel, Gras, and Mistral, whose portrait makes the frontispiece

Japp, Alex. H. Hours in my garden, and other nature sketches; with il. by W. H. F. Boot, A. W. Cooper, and other artists. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. 6–340 p. D. cl., $1.75.

The author of "The life of De Quincey" here presents personal impressions and observations among English and Scotch scenery and also shares with his reader the results of his wide reading. The latter part of the volume is devoted to out-door life as it is manifested in birds. Mr. Japp is a naturalist and a literary scholar, and combines his many kinds of knowledge to much advantage.

Jarvis, Stinson. Dr. Perdue. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1892 [1893.] c. 3–397 p. il. D. (Library of choice fiction.) pap., 50 c.

"Dr. Perdue" is the name under which a Canadian who has served seven years in prison for embezzlement is known in Paris. After taking to himself a wife a woman comes to Paris who had been betrothed to him in his youth and becomes a member of his household. The story has to do with the revived love of these two people and also with the guilty passion of an Anglican priest for Dr. Perdue's wife.

"These inartistic pieces are written fresh from the author's heart, but they are none the less genuine for that. They have merit, unusual merit, and though they are simply dedicated to Mrs. Johnson's children, and are not intended to make a name for herself, there are many pieces in this little volume which the world will not willingly allow to die. The writer has a tender love for nature, a wonderfully sweet expression and a touch that reaches the soul."—Boston Herald.

Johnson, Catherine F. Progressive lessons in the art and practice of needlework for use in the schools. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1893. c. 12+117 p. il. O. cl., 95 c.

This system of instruction in needlework is the result of many years' study of the subject, and of practical application of the methods in the public schools of Brookline, Mass. By it the pupil not only learns to sew well, but receives excellent training in drawing and English.

Johnson, C: Nelson. The hermit of the Nonquon. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1893. 2-235 p. D. (Rialto ser., no. 55.) pap., 50 c.

The scene of the story is laid in the Canadian backwoods as they exist to-day. It is a fresh love-story with an unconventional heroine.

Johnson, Clifton. The country school in New England: text and il. by Clifton Johnson. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 5+102 p. O. cl., $2.50.

Describes the evolution of country schools from the year 1800 to the present day, the duties and amusements of the scholars, their punishments—in short, the every-day life of the boys and girls of rural New England. The illustrations are full of life and humor. The cover is decorated with a happy-faced scholar coming through the woods, and school books and slates of many kinds.

Johnson, Emory R. Inland waterways, their relation to transportation. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1893.] c. 2-164 p. O. (Supplement to the annals of American Acad., Sept., 1893.) pap., $1.

"What is the present and what may be the future importance of inland waterways?" is the problem considered in this monograph. It aims to show their present condition, how much freight is carried on them and on the railroads, what influence inland waterways exert on railroad tariffs and revenues, and inquires especially under what condition and to what extent canals can compete with railroads in the future. Also considers to what extent the state should construct canals and improve inland waterways, and how far the state ought to leave this work to corporations, and the question of tolls on state railways.

Johnston, Ja., M.D. Reality versus romance in South Central Africa: being an account of a journey across the continent from Benguella on the west, through Bihe, Ganguella, Barotse, the Kalihari desert, Mashonaland, Manica, Gorongoza, Nyasa, the Shire Highlands, to the mouth of the Zambesi on the east coast. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1893.] c. 3-353 p. por. maps, il. O. cl., $5.

The writer fitted out his own expedition—hence was untrammelled in his work, free from time limitations, and at full liberty, as he says, "to tell the truth as he saw it." During a period of twenty months he crossed South Central Africa, travelling four thousand five hundred miles mostly on foot, and alone as far as a white companion is concerned—passing through numerous hostile and savage tribes, traversing areas hitherto reported too pestilential for exploration, and penetrating regions where no white man had ever gone before. In all this long journey he was never called upon to defend himself, nor did he lose one of his native carriers by death. His chief thought in this expedition was the Christianization and civilization of the African savage tribes, and the best methods of achieving them. Contains 51 full-page photogravures taken from photographs made by the author, and a map indicating route traversed.

A satire upon the impracticable schemes of would-be reformers, by the author of "The dancing girl," etc.; the incidents are rather fantastic and belong to the future of Mr. Bellamy rather than to the present, but they serve to present with a mingling of humor and seriousness a number of society types of such as often engage in reform work, through other motives than philanthropy, and others who are hypocrites in the guise of religion, and others again who are sincere and enthusiastic, although aiming at an unattainable ideal.

Count Denissow, a Russian, falls in love with a little obscure girl of Abo, Finland; he places her at a school in Paris, intending to marry her when she is eighteen. The girl has a great gift for music; her devotion to her art, with her passionate, ill-regulated nature, causes the marriage, when finally it occurs, to be a very unhappy one.

Keeling, Elsa d'Esterre. Orchardscroft: the story of an artist. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. '92. 5+310 p. D. cl., $1.

The story opens in a London tenement. A dying woman abandoned by her husband leaves her baby girl to the care of her equally poor neighbors. Moved by jealousy, the woman to whom the child is confided abandons it at the gate of a country house, Orchardscroft. The owners adopt the little girl. Here the rest of the story is played out. The only son of the poor Londoners becomes an artist and his love for the girl whom he thinks so much above himself is gracefully and sympathetically told.

Valerie Melnikoff, the daughter of one of the czar's bravest generals, is led by her sympathetic nature to espouse the cause of nihilism; about this time she arouses the anger of a Cossack soldier and would-be lover by betrothing herself to an American diplomat. The Cossack, through revenge, causes Valerie's exile to Siberia. The hardships of her journey are described, with the horrors of the etapes, the system of the Russian prisons, and the life in the mines of Kara. An account is also given of Valerie's rescue, and the final developments of her romance.

King, Anna Eichberg. Brown's retreat, and other stories. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 303 p. D. cl., $1.

Brown was an escaped burglar; his "retreat" was a little shop in a crooked little English village, and his guardian was an elf-like niece. The remaining stories are entitled: Odelia Blynn; The heart story of Miss Jack; Father; The story of Agee Sang Long; John Sterling's courtship; The professor of Dollingen; A trifle of information; Mr. Carmichael's conversion; Jacinth; A freak of fate; Monsieur Pampalon's repentance; A legend of old New York.

King, C: Foes in ambush. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. '92. 3–263 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"'Foes in ambush' deals largely with that disreputable and cunning set of half-breeds, Mexicans, and worthless Americans who hang about the southwestern and western frontiers, and with army personages, privates and officers, and the story relates the plotting of a lot of ruffians, their ambuscade of and attack upon an army paymaster, the escape of the beleaguered party, after a hot fight, and, finally, a second encounter with Apaches. The interest is sustained throughout the tale, and a touch of romance lends additional strength and consistency."—Phila. Evening Bulletin.

King, E: Joseph Zalmonah: a novel. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893. c. 3+365 p. D. (Good company ser., no. 29.) cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

Joseph Zalmonah leaves Russia to find liberty in America. He exchanges the slavery of inherited power for the slavery of capital and works away his life trying to show his countrymen in New York City their rights and duties. He brings over his wife and child, but finds them almost in the way in his life-work among the tailors ground down by the "sweating" system in the Jew quarter of New York. The end is tragic.

King, Grace. Balcony stories; [il. by Sterner, Blum and others.] N. Y., The Century Co., 1893. c. '92, '93. 5+245 p. D. cl., $1.25.

In the south the summer evenings are chattered away on balconies. These stories are supposed to be told during moonlight nights and describe Louisiana life. The separate titles are: A drama of three; Le grande demoiselle; Mimi's marriage; The miracle chapel; The story of a day; Anne Marie and Jeanne Marie; A crippled hope; One of us; The little convent girl; Grandmother's grandmother; The old lady's restoration; A delicate affair; Pupasse. By the author of "Monsieur Motte."

Kentucky is the scene of the story. A woman, to avenge the death of her husband, endeavors to win the love of the man who in an altercation had killed him in self-defence. The plot she lays for the murderer recoils upon herself. She loses her own heart, and the story ends with a tragedy.

Kinkel, Gottfried. Tanagra: an idyl of Greece: tr. by Frances Hellman; with a memorial sketch of Gottfried Kinkel; il. from photogravures from designs by Edwin H. Blashfield. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 18+78 p. D. cl., $1.75.

Carl Schurz, to whom the translator has dedicated this poem, says he has "always regarded Tanagra as the most beautiful of Kinkel's epic productions." Gottfried Kinkel was born in 1815 in Obercassel on the Rhine, near Bonn. He died in November, 1882. A beautifully gotten-up work, with many photogravures, and an exceedingly rich binding in gold and green.

Kinley, D: The history, organization and influence of the independent treasury of the United States. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1893.] c. 7+329 p. D. (Library of economics and politics, ed. by R: T. Ely, no. 1.) cl., $1.50.

An historical and critical examination of this important institution. The author, who is assistant and fellow in economics in the University of Wisconsin, says in his preface: "This essay was begun with the purpose only of tracing the influence of the independent treasury on business. . . . But in view of the growing importance of the subject, it seemed best to make the study as complete as my opportunities would permit. . . . The essay was begun with a prejudice in favor of the sub-treasury system, because it seemed pre-eminently an institution of the people. But as a result of the investigation I have been forced to change my opinion, and regard the system as injurious to the business interests of the country." The first volume of a new series designed to include works dealing with timely topics in a fresh, interesting, and instructive manner. A list of works consulted covers two pages.

Kinney, Abbot. Tasks by twilight. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 3+211 p. D. cl., $1.

The author defines "education" as "the preparation for living" and says it should begin "at birth." The teachings received in our schools and universities he calls "narrow and incomplete to the last degree." The essentials for a perfect physical and mental training are set forth in unconventional chapters, entitled: "Physique," "Boys," "Manual labor," "Education of girls," "Diet," etc.

Nearly all of these fifteen stories have appeared in various English or American periodicals. The "three guardsmen," Mulvaney, Ortheris and Learoyd, reappear in most of the tales, which relate chiefly to military life in India; one, "The record of Badalia Herodsfoot," is a picture of the lowest London slum life, so realistic as to be repulsive; several of the other tales are purely imaginative. The stories are: The disturber of traffic; A conference of the powers; My lord the elephant; One view of the question; "The finest story in the world;" His private honor; A matter of fact; The lost legion; In the Rukh; "Brugglesmith;" "Love-o-women;" The record of Badalia Herodsfoot: Judson and the empire; The children of the Zodiac.

Kirk, Hyland C. The revolt of the brutes: a fantasy of the Chicago Fair. N. Y., C: T. Dillingham & Co., 1893. c. 3–123 p. O. pap., 50 c.

Records the doings of a convention of brutes at Chicago. The object in calling the convention was to improve the brute creation, rescue it from enslavement and help it attain an independent physical life. The means suggested to gain this is the extermination of the human race. The elephant is made president, and after the reading of his message, in which these points are presented, the members—horses, cats, dogs, birds, fishes, etc.—enter into a very lively and amusing debate, full of good points, cleverly and humorously illustrated with a profusion of excellent pictures of the "brutes" in the excited action the subject calls forth.

Kirkland, Miss E. S. A short history of English literature for young people. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 398 p. pors. D. cl., $1.50.

A companion volume to the "Short history of France" and "Short history of England," by the same writer, with which it forms a series. Gives the leading facts, with accounts of their works, of the writers of England, from Cædmon and the author of "Beowulf" down to Tennyson. Miss Kirkland has thought it best not to go deeply into detail, as "experience teaches us that young people remember more when only a little is given."

by A. S. Barnes & Co., 1893. c. 5+162 p. 1 il. D. cl., 75 c.

These selections were chosen because of their special fitness for teaching reading and not because of their newness, nor for any particularly striking external quality. All have won from good judges the title "classic." They are given in the present order to develop the child's expressive power in natural lines, and lead him up to the point where he may use with advantage the "Evolution of expression" prepared by Dr. Emerson, which this volume is intended to precede.

Knight, Arthur Lee. The cruise of the Cormorant; or, treasure-seekers of the Orient; il. by Walter S. Stacey. N. Y., Ward, Lock & Bowden, Ltd., 1893. 4+252 p. il. D. cl., $1.

A sea-story for boys, full of adventurous incident, perilous situations, and thrilling escapes: it is in a measure a sequel to the story of "The Rajah of Monkey Island," by the same author. The "Cruise of the Cormorant" is made in search of buried treasure existing on "Monkey Island." After many exciting adventures the leaders of the expedition are sold as slaves to a savage African chief: they escape death by a hairbreadth several times, but finally reach home with the treasure safe. Nearly all the characters of the previous book reappear in this story.

Knight, H. B. Finlay. A girl with a temper: a romance of the wills act. N. Y., Harper, 1893. 1–300 p. O. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new ser., no. 731.) pap., 50 c.

After a long life of excesses Sir Arthur Peyto determines to make a will in accordance with the suggestions of his nephew Robert, an expectant heir. The conditions of this document if carried out will seriously affect the financial and matrimonial prospects of his niece Celia, who believes herself his heir. Before Sir Arthur's purpose is legally executed he dies. Robert then uses this invalid document to attain at one stroke a fortune and the girl he loves. Celia, chiefly notable for a hasty temper, attempts to checkmate her cousin; her unconventional way of doing this has sensational consequences which hasten an unexpected crisis.

Knox, Kathleen. Queen Dora: the life and lessons of a little girl. N. Y., Ja. Pott & Co., [1893.] 3–255 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Queen Dora was the sobriquet of Dora Westwood, whose realm was her home, Westwood Manor. The story tells how Dora spent her tenth birthday, how she accepted a reverse of fortune, what influenced her to choose her vocation in life, and finally of a surprise that ushered in her fifteenth birthday.

Knox, T: Lowell, ed. Scenes from every land: over five hundred photographic views; with an introd. by L: Wallace; descriptions of every scene prepared especially for this work by Washington Gladden, D.D., E: Everett Hale, D.D., W: Heth Wittsitt, D.D., [and others.] Springfield, O., Mast, Crowell & Kirkpatrick, 1893. obl. 8°, subs., cl., $3.75; hf. mor., $5; hf. levant, $6.50.

Knox, T: W. The boy travellers in southern Europe: adventures of two youths in a journey through Italy, southern France, and Spain; with visits to Gibraltar and the Islands of Sicily and Malta. N. Y., Harper, 1894 [1893.] c. 14+544 p. il. O. (The boy traveller ser.) cl., $3.

The same characters whose acquaintance was made in previous volumes of the series again appear. The journey begins at Venice and ends at Gibraltar. Great care has been taken to insure historical and geographical accuracy in the narrative. Nearly all the routes described have been personally travelled by the author, and some of them more than once, and nearly every city, town or point of interest described has been visited. Profusely illustrated.

Knox, T: W. John Boyd's adventures; merchant sailor, man-o'-war's-man, privateersman, pirate, and Algerine slave. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 7+303 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Two lads from Connecticut shipped on the brig Sweetheart in New York Harbor on the 1st day of May, 1800; the Sweetheart was bound for Port Royal, Jamaica, and other West Indian ports. The narrative from here out is a succession of exciting adventures, showing the vicissitudes of a sailor's life. They are attacked by a French privateer, sight a wreck and rescue some passengers, are overhauled by a British man-of-war, captured by Algerians and carried to Algiers, are present at the bombardment of Tripoli, etc.

Knox, T: W. The Siberian exiles: a novel; il. by Victor Perard. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, [1893.] c. '92, '93. 4–355 p. il. D. (The choice ser., no. 77.) cl., $2; pap., 50 c.

A novel of European and Asiatic Russia of our own time. It tells of the exile, without trial, of the head of a family, guiltless of any crime or treason, simply upon suspicion. All the exertions of his family and friends are powerless to save him from the terrors of a Siberian exile and the life of a state prisoner in the mines. Col. Knox has travelled in Siberia and visited the mines and prisons, and therefore writes of what he has seen in describing the cruelties of prison life.

Knox, T: W. The talking handkerchief, and other stories; il. by J: Henderson Garnsey. St. Paul, Minn., The Price-McGill Co., [1893.] c. 4–314 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Twenty-two short stories, by the author of "The boy travellers," etc., they are mostly of adventures in China, Borneo, the Orient, Australia, Siberia and Russia, Malay, etc. A few of the titles are: Captured by cannibals; In a shark's mouth; Beset by Chinese pirates; The head-hunters of Borneo; Chased by wolves; Treed by an elephant; Chased by Malay pirates, etc.

Knudsen, A: Triangular surveys from single stations. San Francisco, Cal., [Osborn & Alexander, 401 Market St.,] 1893. c. 32 p. T. bds., 75 c.

"When perched upon some lofty station overlooking a surrounding area which is to be surveyed, all engineers must repeatedly have longed, from their inmost heart, for some method that with equal certainty and despatch, but wider range than any based on micrometric measurements, might enable them to seize at once upon the host of details offered to their view without going through the intricacies of a scheme or the agonies of double stations. Such a method I profess to embody in this little volume."—Preface.

Kufferath, Maurice. The Parsifal of Richard Wagner: from the French. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., 1893. c. '92. 6+300 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The writer traces the legend of Parsifal through the history and poetry of all lands and peoples. He then describes the drama of Parsifal, "nothing else than a magnificent hymn of pity, love, and pardon." The remaining chapters are devoted to the score, the performance, and general remarks about the work in which Richard Wagner "has really attained the supreme grandeur of the dream of man." Both literary and musical readers will realize the great work the author has put into this volume. Dedicated to Anton Seidl in recognition of his efforts to make clear the genius of Richard Wagner.

Contains the true stories of John Tanner, "a boy among the Red Indians:" Casanova's escape; The story of Grace Darling; The Shannon and the Chesapeake; The Spartan three hundred; Prince Charlie's wanderings; The story of Kaspar Hauser; The escapes of Cervantes; Baron Trenck: The escape of Cæsar Borgia; Conquest of Montezuma's empire, etc. Uniform with the blue, red and green fairy-books.

Lang, Celestia Root. Son of man; or, the sequel to evolution. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 7+281 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Discusses the "next step" in the evolution of man. The leading thought is the following: "The idea that every human soul will attain immortality must be given up; for it contradicts both the statements of Scripture and the facts of evolution, philosophy, and Christology. But that every spirit embryo or Christ entity will ultimately come to spirit birth or resurrection, and thus complete its evolution or destiny, cannot be denied by evolutionists."

La Rocheterie, Maxime de. The life of Marie Antoinette; from the French, by Cora Hamilton Bell. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. c. 2 v., 22+354; 11+377 p. pors. O. cl., $7.50; limited pap. ed., $15.

A work crowned by the Académie Française. The writer presents Marie Antoinette as a pure and charming woman, somewhat heedless and frivolous, but always chaste, a queen somewhat too hot-headed and inconsiderate in political actions, but proud and energetic, neither a sinner nor a saint. He draws the line between the systematic aspersion of her enemies and the almost superstitious enthusiasm of her friends. The writer's estimate is based upon a large mass of the correspondence of the Austrian ambassador at the French court, recently discovered. Illustrated with many portraits. A very handsome book in type and binding.

Larrabee, W: The railroad question: a historical and practical treatise on railroads and remedies for their abuses. Chic., Schulte Publishing Co., 1893. c. 488 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author, late governor of Iowa, says the object of this work is "to show that as long as the railroads are permitted to be managed as private property and are used by their managers for speculative purposes or other personal gain, or as long even as they are used with regard only for the interest of stockholders, they are not performing their proper functions; and that they will not serve their real purpose until they become in fact what they are in theory, highways to be controlled by the government. . . ." Contents: History of transportation; History of railroads; History of railroads in the United States; Monopoly in transportation; Railroad abuses; Stock and bond inflation; Combinations; Railroads in politics; Railroad literature; Railroads and railroad legislation in Iowa; The interstate commerce act; The rate question; Remedies. Tables and statistics. A three-page bibliography of the subject.

La Sizeranne, Maurice de. The blind as seen through blind eyes; authorized tr., from the 2d French ed., by F. Park Lewis, M.D. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 16+154 p. D. cl., $1.25.

This work received the commendation of the French Academy in 1889, and has since been translated into Russian. Its aim is to make the public understand that the blind do not constitute a peculiar class, but that when properly educated, intellectually and professionally, they may be enabled to so successfully prosecute their work as to make their livelihood thereby. To accomplish this result, the schools for the blind must afford for their pupils more thorough and serious instruction, and the public must be more fully informed as to the possibilities and capacities of the blind. The author, himself blind, has written many similar works to this, and established many schools and associations in Europe to attain this double purpose.

Composed under the same circumstances as the author's successful and popular "France in the nineteenth century." A résumé of facts gathered in a large measure from contemporary writers of the history of Russia and Turkey from the reign of Alexander I. Includes an account of the Crimean War, the Turkish War of 1877, the assassination of Alexander II., etc. etc. Contains a number of portraits.

Laurie, André. Schoolboy days in Italy; or, Tito, the Florentine; tr. by Laura E. Kendall. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1893.] c. 3–277 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.

Two Italian boys of the people are the heroes, Ciro Casanova, a Roman, and Tito Salviati, the Florentine. The boys attend the Michael Angelo Lycée, of which with other Roman public schools of to-day an excellent idea is given. The boys are very poor; Tito posing, when not in school, for the painters and sculptors in order to earn a little money. Ciro has an equally hard struggle; he is an odd, reticent boy, who finds a study-room in the cellar of Cecilia Metella's tomb on the Appian Way. The story has both humor and sensation, among the latter some stories of Garibaldi, a stolen manuscript, an innocent person suspected, etc.

Lean, Mrs. Francis, [formerly Florence Marryat.] Parson Jones. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 2+357 p. D. cl., $1.

A quiet Welsh village is the scene of Parson Jones' struggle with conscience. Bred up from childhood to the ministry his content in his vocation is at last disturbed by the arguments of a member of a Christian brotherhood known as "Literalists." Later he is beset by another and stronger temptation, which he sets himself to conquer, and at last he finds peace again by casting in his lot with the brotherhood and making, with his family, a new home out of England. The story deals chiefly with English middle-class life.

According to the legend, as told by Uncle Algernon for his niece Silvia's benefit, Joachim Rosengrave was put to sleep alone in a room of Rosengrave Castle, in fulfilment of an old custom of his ancestors, who believed the fairies favored all infants of their family when this observance was carried out. Hence Joachim's possession of the mystical spectacles, which play so important a part in the story.

The Golden Fleece was wrecked on the English coast, near a fishing village. The time was during the French revolution, and two of the persons saved from the wreck were a French nobleman in disguise and his daughter. The marquis carried about him valuable papers and jewels. His murder and the trial of the murderer are two exciting episodes in a book rich in adventure by sea and land written for boys. The young hero is brave and intelligent and a parson's son. His service on the fishing lugger North Star and the dangers he braved are graphically related.

Leland, C: Godfrey, ["Hans Breitmann," pseud.] Memoirs. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 11+439 p. por. O. cl., $2.

This well-known author and traveller, Charles Godfrey Leland, describes about forty years of his life in the present volume. As he saw refined life and met cultivated people in all quarters of the globe, his work has a special interest. It does not, however, complete his life; his travels among the gypsies and his studies in Europe preparatory to introducing the industrial or minor arts as a branch of education in the Philadelphia schools being reserved for another volume. He was born in Philadelphia in 1824; his reminiscences of his boyhood days offering many amusing pictures of quaint customs of the old Quaker city. His school-days in New England, his college life at Princeton; three years spent in Europe at the universities of Heidelberg, Munich and Paris; an account of a barricade experience in the French revolution of Forty-eight; his experience in the Civil War and his recollections of Lincoln are among the many subjects of the volume which make it so rich in interest.

Lemaitre, Jules. Prince Hermann, Regent, (Les rois en 1900;) from the French, by Belle M. Sherman. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 2+340 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 144.) pap., 50 c.

A European kingdom is disguised under the name of Alfaine. In 1900 Christian the 16th, King of Alfaine, on account of age and ill-health abdicates his throne in favor of his eldest son Hermann, a pronounced Liberal, through whom he seeks to effect the reforms for which his subjects clamor. Hermann's reign ends with a tragedy, for which it is not made clear whether love or politics is responsible. His brief career is made wretched through the opposition of his wife to his democratic ideas and the socialistic disturbances of his kingdom. The work is a prophetic one and seems to point to the final abolishment of monarchical government.

The author travelled in a leisurely way through England into Wales, Scotland, Germany, and Switzerland, then into Holland, France, and Russia, and finally into Italy. He shows himself an observer of many things that escape the eyes of conventional travellers.

Leon, Néstor Ponce de, comp. The caravels of Columbus; comp. from original documents. N. Y., N. Ponce de Leon, 40 Broadway, [1893.] c. 4–32 p. il. obl. D. pap., 50 c.

After much research and a comparison of many authorities and old pictures, N. Ponce de Leon has succeeded in obtaining what may be considered a true description and drawing of the ships which composed the fleet of Columbus on his voyage of discovery. The author finds that they were larger and better built vessels than generally supposed, with decks and many conveniences and ample stores.

According to the given statistics, which are said to be taken from United States census reports, the proportion of pauperism and crime is greatest in those of our states where the common-school system is supposed to exist in its greatest perfection. The author, however, does not believe this obvious social defect is due to education, but he finds the cause rather in the present plan of educating. The methods of our high schools and colleges are attacked, and classical studies are considered as useless, and even harmful adjuncts of public education.

The publishers have divided Prof. Hoffmann's well-known "Modern magic" into four parts, so that those interested only in a particular branch of the subject may not have to buy the whole volume. This volume and the one following are both separate sections of the work.

Lewis, G: H. National consolidation of the railways of the United States. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. c. 16+326 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"The purpose of this book is not to find fault with railroad managers and not to stir up animosity of the public against the railroads, but to propose a definite and distinct plan to remove the evils of the present system. This plan is national consolidation through the formation of a great national railway corporation owning and controlling all the railways of the country and governed by an organization representing the state and national governments and the stockholders owning the road."—Introduction.

Lewis, Mrs. Harriet. Guy Tresillian's fate; a sequel to "Tresillian Court;" il. by A. W. Van Deusen. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, [1893.] c. '70, '93. 280 p. il. D. (Ledger library, no. 87.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

This novel deals with the adventurous history of Guy Tresillian after he had been wrecked in Sicilian waters, and robbed of his birthright by Jasper Lowder. In the present story some of the sensational consequences of Jasper's villainy are revealed. The scene is English.

Lewis, Mrs. Harriet. The haunted husband; a novel; il. by Victor Perard. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, [1893.] c. '72, '92. 5–393 p. D. (Choice ser., no. 76.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The Marquis of Chetwynd, formerly the betrothed husband of Sylvia Monk, incurs her displeasure by marrying an unknown girl at St. Kildas. Concealing her hatred of Chetwynd's wife, Sylvia Monk consults an Indian ayah, and the pair concoct a diabolical plot which involves both the life and happiness of Bernice. The counterplotting of Gilbert Monk, Sylvia's step-brother, however, brings about strange issues, notably the supposed spectral visitation on which the interest depends.

Lewis, Mrs. Harriet. Tresillian Court; a novel; il. by A. W. Van Deusen. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, 1893. c. '70, '93. 4–315 p. il. D. (The Ledger lib., no. 86.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A fatal resemblance and the timely assistance which Jaspar Lowder rendered Guy Tresillian led the latter to employ Jaspar as a travelling companion; during a voyage on the Sicilian coast their vessel is wrecked, and the two men survive. Jaspar, however, believing his companion to be dead, steals his papers and determines to usurp his name and fortune; but before executing his plot learns that Guy will live, and that he will be insane. He provides for this complication, and figures thereafter as the heir of Tresilliau Court and the suitor of a young English girl, whose sensational love-story is told.

Leyton, Frank. The shadows of the lake. 4th ed. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1893. 5+143 p. S. cl., $1.25.

"The shadows of the lake" is the opening poem of a collection of poems that have been very generally commended by the English press. They are somewhat sad and pessimistic in tone, but gracefully written and imbued with passion and pathos.

Leyton, Frank. Skeleton leaves. 2d ed. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1893. 4+146 p. D. cl., $2.

A "prologue," "preludes," and an "introduction" lead up to the story, "Leaves from the diary of a suicide," which in musical blank verse tells the pathetic heart experience of a young girl who gives all for love. Frank Leyton also wrote "The shadows of the lake;" his writings have been highly praised by the English press.

Liber scriptorum: the first book of the Authors' Club. N. Y., published by the Authors' Club, 1893. c. 17+590 p. Q. leath., $100. [Edition limited to 250 copies.]

This unique volume was prepared and published with the hope of obtaining from the proceeds of its sale the nucleus of a fund for securing a permanent home for the Authors' Club. One hundred and nine members of the club are represented in it, by as many different contributions in prose and verse written especially for it, every article in every copy of the book being signed by its author with pen and ink. The hand-made paper on which it is printed was manufactured especially for it in Holland, and the binding a richly stamped leather selected after much discussion and comparison. Wide margins, uncut edges, and gilt top add to its beauty and attractiveness.

Little Lady Maria, by the author of "A fellow of Trinity;" il. by Gordon Browne. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., 1893. 2-320 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

"Little Lady Maria" is one of two little girls, dwellers in a squalid London court. The father of "Lady Maria," a scapegrace son of an English baronet, had gone abroad after a mesalliance, leaving his baby girl in care of a trusted servant. The servant's child and the little heiress become "mixed," the person to whom little Lady Maria Ponsonby is entrusted dies, all trace is lost of the father, and the question as to which is Maria Ponsonby and which Maria Berry, the granddaughter of wretched old Mrs. Berry, is a difficult one. The radically different characters of the children lead to hasty conclusions, and the unexpected solution of the problem is the climax of an interesting story.

Lock, Rev. Walter. John Keble: a biography; with a portrait from a painting by George Richmond. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. 5+245 p. D. (Religious leaders.) cl., $1.

It seems eminently fitting that Keble should be included in any list of modern leaders of religion. He shared largely in the great movement of sixty years ago, called the Oxford movement, in which Newman, Froude, Pusey and Maurice were so conspicuous. He influenced the course of religious thought and sentiment by his poems hardly less than by his activity as a clergyman, and "The Christian year" is still one of the most cherished volumes of religious poetry. And the fact that this year is the one hundredth anniversary of his birth makes the volume specially timely. The author, sub-warden of Keble College, Oxford, tells the story of his life and career with warm sympathy. Contains a list of his published writings.

Lord, Alice E. The days of Lamb and Coleridge: a historical romance. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1893. 3+381 p. D. cl., $1.25.

In this historical romance, built upon the lives of Lamb and Coleridge and their intimates, the author is indebted for facts to careful study of the many books—memoirs, correspondences, biographies—that we have on the subject. Though written like a story, the text owes little to the imagination, the lives of these two men being rich in romantic events.

Lord, J:, D.D. Two German giants: Frederic the Great and Bismarck, the founder and the builder of German Empire. [Also] A character sketch of Bismarck, by Bayard Taylor, and Bismarck's great speech on the enlargement of the German army in 1888. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert, 1894 [1893.] c. '85-'93. 2-173 p. pors. D. cl., $1.

Biographies of the warlike Frederic the Great and the Iron Chancellor Bismarck, the founder and the builder of German Empire. The striking personality of these rugged chieftains, their great achievements in war, diplomacy, and statecraft, form a story of real life that surpasses any ideal. An unique autobiographic feature in this volume is the "forty years' tableau"—Bismarck's own witty, wise, and persuasive review of his own career, that carried the Reichstag for national defence. A timely selection from the fourth and sixth volumes of Lord's lectures.

The question discussed is "whether a national union was established by the states, or a confederacy of independent nations formed with the right of each to decide upon the validity of the acts of the general government and leave at its pleasure." Mr. Loring's conclusions, fortified by many quotations from Webster's speeches and other men of national repute, and also from the constitution, are that it was the intent of those who made our government to establish a nation or union that should be indissoluble, that it was their full belief that they had done so, and that, historically, there has been no contention as to this.

The story opens in Provence. The hero is first seen in the procession of the Fête Dieu as one of a trio of angels. Soon after this, in accordance with his own wish, he is entered as a candidate for the naval school; failing in his examination he becomes, in place of what he first aspired to be, a common sailor. His history after this social descent is made up of eventful failures, some adventures and several episodes of love; the story is chiefly interesting as a character study.

These "Conversations on the old poets," were published in 1845, and appeared again in a revised edition in 1846. They also were reprinted in London in 1845, but have been out of print for many years. They relate to "Chaucer," "The old dramatists" and "The plays of Thomas Middleton."

The editor says that in making this selection from the great mass of Mr. Lowell's letters which was in his hands, his attempt has been to secure for it, so far as possible, an autobiographic character. But it is quite certain that the reader will find the poet's self-revelation in these letters more complete, and more completely charming, than the pages of an autobiography would be likely to offer. In the first place, here is a freedom in expression and a naïveté that no conscious narration could have; and, in the second place, Mr. Lowell had the rare and true quality in letter-writing—for he speaks (only with pen in hand) to his correspondents as though they were present friends, informally, impulsively. Among the letters are those to Henry W. Longfellow, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Thomas Hughes, W. D. Howells, C. F. Briggs, Nathaniel Hawthorne, Leslie Stephen, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Mrs. J. T. Fields, J. L. Motley, the editor of the work, and many other life-long friends of the dead poet.

Lummis, C: F. The land of Poco Tiempo. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 9+310 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

New Mexico and its contiguous regions is the land of Poco Tiempo, or "Pretty Soon," of which Mr. Lummis writes. Each chapter is a monograph upon some special subject connected with the romance, history, social customs, and racial types, its ruins, landscape, etc. "Lo, who is not poor," is an interesting account of the Pueblo Indian, who is "not poor from any point of view." "The city in the sky" is a narrative stranger than fiction of Acoma, an ancient town built upon a high cliff, and its strange inhabitants. "The Penitent Brothers" tells of the only order of Penitents who practise self-flagellation existing in the United States, with their other remarkable religious customs. There are other chapters on "The dance of the Chongo," "The wanderings of Cochití," "The Apache warrior," "New Mexican folk-songs," and "Ancient that were forgotten." The illustrations, taken from photographs made by the author, [illegible] fresh views.

Originally published by Carl Schoenhof, 1885, in a volume that contained also a large amount of miscellaneous reading. The seven pieces are now offered by themselves in compact form. They are in French and are designed for a reading-book. They are a mixture of fancy and science.

Luther, Martin. Commentary on the Sermon on the Mount; tr. by C. A. Hay, D.D. Phil., Lutheran Pub. Soc., [1893.] c. '92. 506 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The series of sermons preached by Luther in 1530 on the 5th, 6th, and 7th chapters of Matthew were edited in the form of a commentary by Dr. Irmischer in the Erlangen Edition of Luther's works. The translator has preserved the roughness and fierceness of Luther's speech, presuming that intelligent readers will make due allowance for the style of speech common in his day and almost justified by the aggravating circumstances with which he contended.

Lyall, Sir Alfred. The rise of the British dominion in India. N. Y., C. Scribner's Sons, 1893. 13+288 p. D. cl., net, $1.50.

Not only gives a concise account of the rise of British dominion in India but also explains it by tracing rapidly the causes and convergent influences that brought about so remarkable a conclusion. A sketch is embraced of the preliminary events and predisposing conditions that attracted the maritime nations of Europe into the field of competition for predominance in India.

Lyall, Edna, [pseud. for Ada Ellen Bayly.] To right the wrong: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1894 [1893.] c. 7+510 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The old story of the deadly conflict between Royalists and Puritans in the English civil wars of the seventeenth century is dramatically told by the author of "Donovan," "In the golden days," etc. The stanch patriot John Hampden is the leading figure. With clear logic and fairness the author points out the right and the wrong of both parties, and makes the struggle very real in its influence on the members of one family.

Lys, Christian. The doctor's idol. N. Y., F. Warne & Co., 1893. 5+207 p. S. (The Tavistock lib.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

The doctor is a hard-working, philanthropic man in the Whitechapel district of London. He has an Indian idol as a parlor ornament which is of great interest to his servant, a Hindoo, who has entered his service in mysterious fashion. The doctor's professional duties lead him to see much of human nature, and also lead him to new friends, among whom he finds another "idol."

Lysaght, Sidney Royse. The marplot. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 4+425 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1.

"Connie," a pretty but ignorant little girl whom Dick Malory first notices in the ring of a travelling circus, is the "marplot" not only of his life but of the lives of others. Connie runs away from the circus and leads a checkered life in London, singing and dancing in cheap concert halls, and joining her life finally with that of a poor socialist, with whom she lives without the marriage ceremony. Dick meets her again in London, and without knowing to what depths she has sunk marries her to reform her. Dick Malory and his friends are the best types of young English men and women; the scenes are mostly from English country life.

Lyster, Annette. Twilight: a story of two villages; il. by H. M. Paget. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 2–250 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The first village is a wild, thinly populated hamlet in the north of England, a barbarous, poverty-stricken spot, where little Christie Brent and his child companion, Hessie, pass an unlovely childhood. On his mother's death Christie leaves his savage neighbors and makes his way to the second village, a peaceful country town, where he finds service under a kind master. Later Hessie also comes under religious influences, and finally she and Christie are reunited.

M., C. E. The Blakes of Culveredge; il. by F. Barnard. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 2+253 p. D. cl., $1.

An interesting English story of two refined, educated young women, reduced from wealth to sudden poverty. Their experience of bitter need, their fruitless efforts for work in busy, heartless London, and the means by which they are led into a business that finally assures them substantial comfort, are graphically described, and are said to be founded upon actual experience. An excellent point in the story is that neither of the sisters is extricated from her difficulties by marriage, but only by virtue of hard work and determination.

MacArthur, Arthur. Biography of the English language; with critical remarks upon the works of ancient and modern authors, and some account of their history. [Also] An examination into the present position of English among the languages of the world. Wash., D. C., W. H. Lowdermilk & Co., 1893. c. 9+419 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The subject of this work is the English language, and the object is to furnish an account of its rise and progress from the earliest periods of its history. It gives a plain and popular history of our mother tongue alone, and sets it off with critical remarks and slight biographical sketches of ancient and modern authors who have used it in composing their works. The ordinary reader may thus learn the English history of the English language without being called upon to understand either Greek or Latin, or even any of the modern tongues.

McCarthy, Justin. The Dictator: a novel of politics and society. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 4+362 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The ruler of a South American republic, temporarily deposed by an unlooked-for revolution, comes to London to recruit his fortunes, preparatory to returning to "Gloria" the country from which he has been exiled. The "Dictator" has a pleasing and romantic personality, which soon makes him the centre of attraction in London society. He is loved by an English girl of high rank, and is also the object of the assassin's knife. English politics and English fashionable life are ably described.

McClellan, Mrs. G:, ["Harford Flemming," pseud.] Broken chords crossed by the echo of a false note. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. 373 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A pretty, silly little girl, the daughter of a clergyman, runs away from home and appears as an actress. Two men become infatuated with her. She marries one to save herself from disgrace, and a few months later his death is announced. The other loves another woman, who breaks the engagement on learning his secret, and sends him to make reparation for the wrong he has done. His marriage to the actress, who keeps her former matrimonial venture a secret, leads to many complications and much unhappiness, but the story is worked out to a satisfactory conclusion. A mill village in one of the southern states is the scene.

McClelland, M. G. Broadoaks. St. Paul, Minn., The Price-McGill Co., [1893.] c. 2-268 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The scene is Virginia about eighteen years ago. "Broadoaks," the home of an old Virginia family, shelters the heroine, who wins the love of two men; one is a mining engineer of New England birth, who had been sent South by a New York syndicate to take charge of a mining venture in the mineral belt of Piedmont, Va.; the other is a gallant young southerner. The two men are well contrasted in their aims, opinions, and characters. The love-story, scenes illustrating negro superstition, and the supposed finding of a rich gold vein, make up a very readable volume.

The Kings were an ancient house in Yewle, Southshire, England. In 1870 Geoffrey King died, leaving two sons, Rowan, aged twenty-eight, and Charles, twenty-five. Charles was appointed by his brother to be vicar of Yewle. When his young daughter Agnes was fifteen years old the vicar was accused of forgery and sentenced on circumstantial evidence to five years' penal servitude. On the day of his return his brother is found dead, and the long suffering clergyman is suspected of murder. The details of an excellent picture skilfully worked out, and the solution of the several mysteries is a surprise.

bibliography. Wash., D. C., Government Print. Office, 1893. 3–445 p. O. (Bureau of Education, Circular of information, no. 4, whole no. 195.) pap.

The bibliography of the subject which the volume embraces is much larger than in the author's work entitled "Criminology." It covers over two hundred pages, and is extremely valuable. No such bibliography exists in any language; it will be found of great service by those who desire to make independent study of any phase of the subject. Dr. MacDonald is a specialist in the Bureau of Education.

MacDonald, Arthur. Criminology: with an introd. by Cesare Lombroso. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1893. c. '92. 416 p. D. cl., $2.

An examination of the causes and effects of crime. In three parts. Pt. 1, "General criminology," has chapters on the evolution of crime; the physical side of the criminal; psychology of criminals; intelligence of criminals; associations of criminals; criminal contagion; criminal hypnotism. Pt. 2, "Special criminology," consists of reviews of individual and personal cases of crime studied by the author in penal and reformatory institutions of America. Pt. 3, "Bibliography of crime" offers an extensive and exhaustive bibliography of the best books and articles in English and foreign languages on this subject. It covers 125 pages. There is also a good subject index.

Macdonald, G: Heather and snow. N. Y., Harper, 1893. 6+285 p. D. cl., $1.25.

In Scotland, the land of heather and snow, the incidents of the story are lived by a healthy, happy, poetic girl, her weak-minded brother and her lover, who is the son of an intemperate mother, lady of the manor. All the author's old dreaminess and poetic interpretation of religious doctrines are found in this tale of a good girl's influence on men and women. For a short time the scene is India during the mutiny.

McKendrick, J: Gray, and Snodgrass, W: The physiology of the senses. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. 16+318 p. il. D. (University extension manuals.) cl., net, $1.50.

The aim is to give an account of the functions of the organs of sense as found in man and the higher animals. While neither minuteness of detail in comparative physiology nor extended discussions of a psychological character can be expected in a single manual, the physiology of the senses is discussed as fully as space will allow. Simple experiments are suggested by which any one may test the statements for himself, and the book has been so written as to be readily understood by those who have not made physiology a special study. It will be found a suitable preparation for entering upon the questions that underlie physiological psychology. In the last chapter an attempt is made to throw light upon the physiological basis of sensation, in the hope of contributing to speculative thought on this problem.

It is the fourteen years in Columbus' life which succeeded the discovery that are the subject of this narrative, the material for which was drawn from the writings of Columbus and some of his associates as collected by Navarrete and scattered through the history of Las Casas, the translations being made direct from the originals. The work is an effort to give a true estimate of Columbus' character and to refute the aspersions of his calumniators, who ascribed to him ignoble aims and motives.

McKim, Rev. Randolph Harrison. Christ and modern unbelief. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1893. c. 7+146 p. D. cl., $1.

The arguments offered in these seven sermons by the rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D. C., give in small compass and popular language "sufficient reasons to any candid inquirer for accepting Jesus of Nazareth as the Son of God and the Saviour of the world."

McKinley, W: Speeches and addresses of William McKinley from his election to Congress to the present time. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 5+664 p. por. O. cl., $2.

In this volume are presented sixty-five of the speeches and addresses of Hon. W: McKinley, Governor of Ohio, late representative in Congress, and one of the prominent public men of the country. It has been compiled by Joseph P. Smith, librarian of the Ohio State Library, and revised by Mr. McKinley himself, so far as the opportunities of a busy life would admit. The selections have been made from several hundred speeches, delivered in all parts of the country, and indicate the wide range of topics on which Mr. McKinley has spoken. All his more important tariff speeches are included.

"A volume which appears in 'The Expositor's Bible,' should obviously, first of all, be expository. I have tried to conform to that requirement, and have therefore found it necessary to leave questions of date and authorship all but untouched. They could not be adequately discussed in conjunction with exposition. I venture to think that the deepest and most precious elements in the Psalms are very slightly affected by the answers to these questions, and that expository treatment of the bulk of the Psalter may be separated from critical, without condemning the former to incompleteness. If I have erred in thus restricting the scope of this volume, I have done so after due consideration. . . ."—Author's Preface.

McMillan, W. F. Myra Mordaunt: a story of love and constancy. [3*d ed.*] Chic., Morrill, Higgins & Co., [1893.] c. 2-341 p. il. D. (Idylwild ser., v. 1, no. 23.) pap., 50 c.

In Philadelphia, about the year 1841, Myra Winterfield and Willard Mordaunt were married, much to the chagrin of Archer Burrell, a Virginia planter, who vowed vengeance on his rival. He made no attempt, however, to execute his vow until nearly a year after this event, when the absence of Mordaunt in South America and other circumstances favored a secret interview with Mrs. Mordaunt. After this Burrell's threat is carried out, and the effects are sensational, surprising, and dramatic. The action for the most part occurs during the War of the Rebellion.

President Andrew Jackson in 1837 authorized the Joint Library Committee "to contract for and purchase at the sum of $30,000 the manuscripts of the late Mr. Madison, to be printed and disseminated at public charge." In 1839 a contract was made for the printing of the work, and it appeared in 1840. In this Columbian year it would seem fitting to reprint a work containing such accurate knowledge of the principles of the American government and the circumstances under which they were recommended and embodied in the constitution for adoption by the great convention of 1787. A general and analytical index covering forty-two pages has been added in this edition.

Love with its attending misunderstandings is the theme. In a once handsome English country home, but now neglected and poverty-stricken, the heroine is found. In spite of the fact that Mary Burne's father bad degraded his family name by marrying a gypsy Mary is a noble, beautiful woman. Her beauty is the chief cause of her troubles, as she is loved by men in entirely opposite classes of life, whose jealousy and unreasonableness afford material for many incidents. The other members of the Burne family are amusingly and graphically described.

Marshall, Mrs. Emma. New relations: a story for girls. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., [1893.] 4+363 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is Stoncleigh, England. Randall Barrington's excited announcement of the arrival of his grandfather from India with his wife and daughters is received in the Barrington household with some consternation and a great deal of joy. The cause of these diverse sentiments is explained in a story of romantic consequences.

Marshall, Mrs. Emma. Pat's inheritance. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1893.] 2+152 p. il. S. cl., 75 c.

The only inheritance Pat received from his father was a good name; how he keeps it untarnished amidst poverty and troubles is shown by the story. His life is a strong contrast to a young friend who inherits a large fortune, when Pat loses his father.

Martyn, Carlos. John B. Gough, the apostle of cold water. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1893. c. 4–336 p. por. D. (American reformers ser.) cl., $1.50.

Mr. Martyn here does for Mr. Gough what he has done for Wendell Phillips—shows us the man. The book is full of lively and highly interesting anecdotes, and it gives, incidentally, a history of the temperance movement in America and England during the life of the reformer, 1817–1886. Throughout its pages references are made to many lively facts and incidents with which are linked the names of Charles Dickens, Joseph Parker, C. H. Spurgeon, Daniel Webster, Hogarth the painter, Samuel Johnson, Neal Dow, Dante the poet, William Lloyd Garrison, Clinton B. Fisk, Wm. E. Gladstone, Queen Elizabeth, Henry Ward Beecher, and a host of others of equal celebrity.

Martyn, Mrs. G: A liberal education. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., [1893.] 2+248 p. S. (The Tavistock lib.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

A boy is sent from India to an English school and becomes an utter stranger to his Anglo-Indian parents. His father objects to letting Hector become a soldier and refuses him support unless he studies law. Hector then enters the army as a private soldier, which affords opportunity for descriptions of distinctions of birth in the English army and the old method of buying commissions. A simple love-story brightens the tale.

Masson, D:, and others. In the footsteps of the poets. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1893. 6–381 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Descriptive chapters, largely topographical, of the lives of various English poets, with the reminiscences which cluster around certain places identified with them. Contents: Milton, by D: Masson; Herbert, by J: Brown; Cowper, by the Rev. Canon Benham; Thompson, by Hugh Haliburton; Wordsworth, by H: C. Ewart; Scott, by J: Dennis; Mrs. Browning, by the Bishop of Ripon; Robert Browning, by R. H. Hutton; Tennyson, by W: Canton. Illustrated with portraits and views.

Masterpieces of prose; selected from the works of the greatest English and American writers from Chaucer to Ruskin and Longfellow. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1893. c. 4+360+4 p. il. O. cl., $3.

The extracts are selected rather as specimens than as a completed galaxy, with the idea of grouping into a single volume representative quotations from a whole library of English authors. The American publishers have kindly allowed selections from their most celebrated copyrighted books, and "masterpieces" are fully covered. Gotten up as a large holiday book in gilt covers and profusely illustrated.

Mathers, Helen P., [Mrs. H. Reeves.] Venus victrix: a study of a woman. [Also] The waltz in Faust, by R: Dowling. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1893.] c. '92. 2–164 p. S. (Shandon ser.) pap., 25 c.

"Venus Victrix" was the sobriquet conferred on Sabine Norton by the woman she had outrivalled. A few years after her marriage she was stricken by paralysis, and a strange fatality caused Lyndsay Gray, the woman she had intrigued against, to serve her in the capacity of nurse. When Sabine realizes who Lyndsay is she fears the latter may finally triumph over her, and seeks to avert this through a diabolical plot which is revealed with its sensational consequences in the story.

Mathers, Helen P., [Mrs. H: Reeves.] Wrostella's weird. [Also] The notorious Miss Anstruther, by E. W. Hornung. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1893.] 3–186 p. S. (Shandon ser., no. 4.) pap., 25 c.

The hero of the first and longest story is a wild young Irishman named Terence Fitzgerald, who inherits a lonely, neglected place in Ireland, with a proviso attached to it that the heir makes it his home for four consecutive months of each year. Wrostella Castle possesses a ghost with its many other gruesome peculiarities, and is anything but a cheerful home for Terry's bright young French bride, whom he brings there for the honeymoon. Jealousy and ennui bring about a strange succession of circumstances in which the young couple figure.

Matheson, Rev. G: The distinctive messages of the old religions. [N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1893.] 6+342 p. D. cl., $1.75.

An examination of the fundamental principles and the varied forms of worship of the earlier religions, made for the evident purpose of showing the spiritual motive that impelled their worshippers. Beginning with China, the transition of religious thought is traced in the disciples of Confucius, of Laotze and other religious lights of that empire. In India the religion of a Hindu is discussed in its relation to the subject. And the several messages of Greece and Rome, etc., are conveyed, with a concluding review of Past Christianity.

Mathew, Frank. At the rising of the moon: Irish stories and studies; il. by F: Pegram and A. S. Boyd. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1893.] 8+240 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A score of short sketches of the peasants, priests, and gentry of the west coast of Ireland. Types and traits of Irish character are described with freshness and sympathy. The stories are: The Reverend Peter Flannery; A Connemara miracle; Shane Desmond; "The other country:" By the Devil's Mother; Colonel Hercules Desmond; The white witch of Moher; Their last race; The snipe's luck; At the rising of the moon, etc., etc.

Mathews, Joanna H. Frankie Bradford's bear: the fifth of a series of sequels to "The Bessie books;" il. by St. John Harper. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., [1893.] c. 2–253 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.

A man named Sanderson, living near Newport, owned a bear, which Frankie Bradford coveted, and always called his bear. Through the complaints of Mr. Bradford and neighbors Sanderson was forced to get rid of his troublesome brute, and it was supposed the animal was bought by a circus performer. By some means, however, he escaped into the woods where the "Cheeryble sisters" were picnicking—hence an adventure in which Grace Howard and Lena Neville were heroines.

Intended to "prove a stay to minds which have ever felt bewildered with the seeming conflict between the great principles of reason and faith. The science which teaches men of God should have nothing to fear from any science which teaches fresh truths of his works."

Matson, Henrietta. The Mississippi schoolmaster: with an introd. by M. E. Strieby, D.D. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., 1893. c. 7+219 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The story of two colored youths who left their school in Tennessee to go to Mississippi as teachers for the winter. It begins with their early life and home training, sketches their school-home and its influence upon their minds and characters, and then tells of the hardships and joys of their winter work in Mississippi. A picture of the methods in use to elevate the colored people of the south.

Matthews, Ja. Brander. The decision of the court: a comedy. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 6-60 p. pors. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c.

The scene is Newport late in September. Mrs. Stanyhurst, nee Kitty Van Kortlandt, of New York, has been suing for a divorce from her husband, an Englishman, on the ground of incompatibility, and has been residing in Newport alone for a year, the law making such a residence there requisite. Just as she is expecting "the decision of the court" giving her her divorce, her husband is announced; he comes on the plea of business and a pretty comedy is played between the two, to which there is a most unexpected ending.

Matthews, Ja. Brander. The story of a story, and other stories. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 5+234 p. il. cl., $1.25.

The initial story tells in a graceful and sympathetic manner the history of a short story, its creation, acceptance, publication and the part it played in the lives of some of its readers. The others are: A cameo and a pastel; Two letters; The new member of the club; Etelka Talmeyr, a tale of three cities. All show artistic perception and possess a flavor of satiric humor.

The translator in his introduction says: "Prof. Meitzen's work represents a full statement of theoretical statistics in a small compass. . . . The work covers systematically the whole field of statistical theory. Statistics, as defined by the author, is a method of scientific investigation by means of enumeration of objects and the numerical comparison of the results of such enumeration. They may be applied to any field of knowledge if the necessary conditions present." Two parts, entitled "History of Statistics" and "Theory and Technique of Statistics," heretofore bound separately in paper, are now offered in one volume at a reduced price.

In the annals of the society for November, 1892, appeared a paper on "The standard of deferred payments," by Prof. E: A. Ross, of Cornell University, discussing the subject principally from the standpoint of value. The detection of some errors in his discussion suggested to the present writer the need of a special study of the relation of the theory of final utility to money in general and the standard of deferred payments in particular. In this pamphlet he first presents the results of such a study and then briefly criticises Prof. Ross' article in the light of those results.

Merriman, H: Seton. From one generation to another. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. '92. 4+256 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A strong story of the power of pre-natal influence.

This is illustrated by a well-developed plot, in which a mother's selfish passion so affects her unborn child as to influence that child's life and make him the unconscious avenger of a wrong he never knew. This central idea, though ever present, does not overshadow a pleasant and wholesome love-story. The scene is laid alternately in England and India. By the author of "The slave of the lamp."

Hoping to cure Jack Daring of his fever for a seafaring life, his father, a Dorsetshire rector, sends him to Dr. Lashem's school. Here he and a boy named Riley conspire to play a prank on one of their masters, and are in consequence both expelled. After this both boys seek to follow their natural bent, and finally, through the agency of a Jew and two glasses of shandy-gaff, find themselves stowaways on a Yankee clipper. The incidents of a memorable and exciting voyage are duly given in an adventurous sea-story.

"This study, in which the scenes of the conquest of Canaan are narrated again with such help as modern investigation affords, may thus confirm the wavering faith of some. But my main object has been to bring out the wonderful parallels between the story of this book and the experiences of the church and the individual Christian—parallels so minute and precise as to establish with added force our faith in the Bible as one book, the production of one mind, which 'at sundry times and in divers manners' has spoken to man." —Author's Preface.

Michel, Émile. Rembrandt, his life, his work, and his time; from the French, by Florence Simmonds; ed. by F: Wedmore; with 67 full-p. pl. and 250 text il. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1894 [1893.] 2 v., 24+320; 10+294 p. il. Q. cl., $15.

The editor of the American edition has corrected some errors of the French, and substituted more important illustrations for some indifferent ones of the original edition. The latest authorities were searched by the author for material throwing new light upon some mysteries in Rembrandt's career. The story is a chronological narrative, amply illustrated, of his art life, which was so deeply connected with his private life as scarcely to be separated. His chief works had almost all some connection with his own life. The reproduction of paintings, etchings, etc., by photogravure, offer a wealth of beautiful pictures and designs for study—all of very great value. Many private and public collections were placed at the author's disposal in gathering his illustrations. There is an extended classified catalogue of Rembrandt's works, including pictures, drawings, and etchings, covering sixty pages; a bibliography (2 p.) of principal publications bearing on his life and works, and an index of proper names.

Mines and mining men of Colorado: historical, descriptive and pictorial: an account of the principal producing mines of gold and silver, the bonanza kings and successful prospectors, the picturesque camps and thriving cities of the Rocky Mountain region. Denver, Col., J: G. Canfield, 1893. 3–120 p. il. obl. Q. mor., $2.50; pap., $1.

This book is not intended to be a complete mining directory of Colorado. The publisher has rather aimed to present the salient features only of the mining industry of the "Silver State" as it is in the year 1893. The illustrations, which are on every page, have been prepared with the greatest care and are exact in every case. All historical facts have been based on Frank Hall's "History of Colorado" and Hollister's "Colorado mines."

Minto, W: Logic inductive and deductive; with a few diagrams. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. 8+373 p. D. (University extension manuals.) cl., net, $1.25.

This is the last contribution of Prof. Minto's to the literature of his country; he died before the work went to press; he was professor of logic in the University of Aberdeen, and his book embodies a large part of his teachings in the class-room of his university. His preface says: "In this little treatise two things are attempted that at first might appear incompatible. One of them is to put the study of logical formulæ on a historical basis. . . . The other aim is to increase the power of logic as a practical discipline."

The writer is a New York journalist, and his book is a series of journalistic descriptions of New York City life, connected by a thread of incident, rather than a novel. The slums of the east side, the routine of the police courts, and life in the Tombs and Sing Sing—all "milestones on the road of the rough"—are contrasted with the social pleasures and domestic comforts of "the 400," exemplified in the family of a rich Wall Street speculator.

Moore, Frank Frankfort. From the bush to the breakers; il. by W. H. Overend. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 2-378 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A lad of seventeen is the hero of many exciting adventures. Captured by Australian bushrangers, who attack his father's home, he is carried off to their retreat in the bush and thence to the sea-coast, where, narrowly evading death, he manages to escape in his captors' own boat. He is picked up by a trading vessel, falls in with escaped convicts, takes part in a sea-fight, and finally returns safely with a stirring tale of danger and adventure. Scene and characters are Australian throughout, and the book abounds in scenes of fighting and bloodshed.

Moore, Frank Frankfort. I forbid the banns: the story of a comedy which was played seriously. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 404 p. D. cl.,, $1.

The story begins on a vessel returning to England from Australia. The hero and heroine meet on board and learn to love each other devotedly. The girl does not believe in the rite of marriage and says to her startled lover, "I forbid the banns." After much thinking he finally agrees to take her to his home without any marriage ceremony, religious or legal. She is rich and beautiful. The consequences of this departure from custom make an interesting and instructive story.

Morfill, W. R. The story of Poland. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 12+389 p. por. il. D. (Story of the nations ser., no. 36.) cl., $1.50; hf. leath., $1.75.

Prof. Morfill has written this work on Poland on the same lines as his previous work on Russia in this series. The plan of the work is to give a readable history of the country by bringing into prominence the more stirring episodes and salient characteristics, and putting in the background the details which must prove less interesting. At the same time the thread of the history is never intentionally lost sight of. The work is based entirely upon original and native authorities, no mere compilations having been employed. Gives in detail the chief ethnological elements of the population; and for those who wish to study Polish history more minutely a list has been added of the most important works on the subject. The work has no political bias.

Morgan, Emily Malbone. Madonnas of the smoke; or, our "Mary's meadow." N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1893.] c. 4–38 p. D. pap., 25 c.

A number of girls in a large manufacturing city banded themselves into a working-girls' club. After they were organized a young girl who addressed them one evening presented them with a photograph of one of Raphael's madonnas. This incident led to the girls' calling themselves the Madonnas. Later, one of the girls proposes a project to rent a meadow. The story tells of the cause to which the Madonnas devoted their meadow.

The writer is himself a distinguished illustrator and well-known French littérateur, and came well equipped for the task of writing up the lives and methods of his French contemporaries, who are illustrating with pencil or brush the literary works of all periods. More than sixty artists are represented in this valuable portfolio, the most famous by full-page plates in tints and black and white, the others by text pictures. The pictures presented are the best efforts of the artists, and are reproduced in the best manner of Goupil & Co., of Paris. Such men as Detaille, Delort, Lynch, Marchetti, Le Blaut, Kaemmerer, Giacomelli, and others equally famous are included. Albert Lynch designed a charming female figure for the cover of the portfolio.

There are forty-eight Bible stories cleverly written and entirely undenominational. These stories are illustrated by forty-eight colored plates that are pictorially explanatory. Instruction in the art of toy-making is given in the form of a series of sketches under the general title of the Inglenook stories, and interspersed stories, cleanly and entertainingly written, hold the interest of the child for weeks. Slate studies for reproduction, Bible sketches to develop the desire to study the Bible, etc., are included.

The author has freely made use of the great mass of material in existence in the shape of biographies, memoirs, correspondence, etc., relating to Napoleon. His work is a popular one, and devoted principally to Napoleon's personality, its aim being to form a fair and just estimate of a man who has been the subject of excessive adulation and of excessive detraction beyond any eminent man of modern times.

Morrison, Sarah E. Chilhowee boys. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1893.] c. '92. 5+434 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

This story of a year in the life of the "Chilhowee boys" is essentially true, having been gathered from cherished family records, wherein it is related that, in the year 1811, the "Parson Craig" of the story, with his wife and five sons and infant daughter, together with friends and neighbors, numbering in all a caravan of nearly twenty souls, made a journey of four hundred miles from North Carolina into Tennessee. Parson Craig did noble work as a pioneer minister in the new country, and the boys of the party had many pleasures and adventures.

A little wooden toy, found by Mr. Morse in an antiquarian's collection in Japan, is made the subject of a paper in which it is compared with similar toys found in recent mounds in Egypt, whose contents dated back to the first century of our era. These two specimens with one found in the Ethnological Museum in Berlin, coming from the Yakuts in Siberia, he endeavors to trace back to a common origin.

Morse, J: T., jr. Abraham Lincoln. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 2 v., 5+387; 5+373 p. por. D. (American statesmen ser.) cl., $2.50.

"The time has passed when a biographer of Lincoln can undertake original investigation or research. . . . We doubt if a single new fact about Abraham Lincoln be revealed in this new biography from the hand of the editor of the American statesmen series. It is a contribution to the philosophy of biography which the accomplished author practically makes. Nicolay, Hay, Arnold, Herndon, Lamon, Raymond, Holland and other biographers have done their work so thoroughly that a voluminous Lincoln library has been collected. To this mass of literature, written on varying lines and from diverse points of view, Mr. Morse applies the synthetic method, and brings out of it a composite picture, shaded and toned by the investigators who have been at work before him."—New York Tribune.

Morse, Lucy Gibbons. Rachel Stanwood: a story of the middle of the nineteenth century. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 4+441 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The story relates to the time and scenes of the anti-slavery agitation in New York City, about 1850. It depicts life among the Quakers, the protection of fugitive slaves from their pursuers, the phases of an anti-slavery fair and social divisions produced by philanthropic movements. Garrison, Mrs. Child Ole Bull, Fred Douglass and other famous characters figure in it. The author is a granddaughter of Isaac T. Hopper, and has drawn many of her incidents from memory or from near tradition.

Mr. Mozoomdar is a liberal Hindu, born near Calcutta in 1840; he was interested in his own country in the Brahmo-Somaj, a society, the outgrowth of the advanced religions and social thought of the Orient, and has twice visited America, where his preaching attracted wide attention. His last visit was to attend the Parliament of Religions at Chicago, when he read a paper on "The world's religions debt to Asia." He is the author of the following volumes: "The faith and progress of the Brahmo-Somaj," written and published in India; "Sketches of a tour around the world," "The life and teachings of Keshut Chunder Sen," "The Oriental Christ," and "Aids to moral character." The present is a little volume of meditations—detached religious thoughts bearing evidence of remarkable spiritual elevation.

Beginning with "The poet complains of unreasonable friends," by Antonio Pucci (1875), specimen pieces in prose and poetry are given of Italian humorous writers from the fourteeth century to the present time, thirty writers being represented by seventy selections. The volume is delightful reading and is notably neat and attractive in appearance, with many vignette illustrations. The biographical index to writers is very full and useful. There are interesting chapters of epigrams, proverbs, folk-lore, and traditional anecdotes, and one on newspaper humor.

Munroe, Kirk. The coral ship: a story of the Florida coast. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 261 p. il. D. (Rail and water ser.) cl., $1.25.

A richly laden treasure-ship from Vera Cruz on its way to Spain was wrecked a century ago on the coast of Florida. The only persons who were saved were a negro and a white man who saved him, a titled Englishman held by the Spaniards as a prisoner. The Englishman makes his way back finally to England, but the negro remains and becomes a pirate. A century afterwards two American boys from Maine, one a descendant of the Englishman, are cast away on this same shore, and find there a descendant of the negro pirate, who has a deep veneration for the Englishman who had saved the life of his great-grandfather. He swears to be the slave of the boys and helps them build a house, etc. They finally discover the ancient galleon Aztec and take some of the treasure from it. Many other adventures fill the volume.

Munroe, Kirk. Raftmates: a story of the great river. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 6+341 p. il. D. (Harper's young people [new] ser.) cl., $1.25.

This is the fourth of Mr. Munroe's "Mates" series, and like its predecessors it is a boy's story of adventurous experiences. The "raftmates" make a voyage down the Mississippi River, from Minnesota to Louisiana. They have an exciting experience with a gang of counterfeiters, are wrecked several times, witness the burning of a river steamer, and are actors in other exciting episodes.

Munroe, Kirk. The white conquerors: a tale of Toltec and Aztec; il. by W. S. Stacey. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 5+326 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The cruelty and superstition of the Aztec priests is strongly dwelt upon in this story, many horrible scenes being depicted of their human sacrifices to the gods. The time is in the sixteenth century, the scene in Mexico during the reign of Montezuma; the "white conquerors" were the Spaniards under Hernando Cortes, who set forth from Cuba in 1519 to explore and subjugate, if possible, the great western kingdom. The young Toltec hero, Huetzin, has a most amazing series of adventures, escaping several times from his enemies, the Aztecs, and their cruel tortures.

Murdock, W. N. Third hand high: a novel. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893. c. 254 p. (Good company ser., no. 32.) pap., 50 c.

An American story of a New England farmer's sudden accession to a fortune of a million dollars. The newly made millionaire marries a girl above him in station, whom he loves, but who is moved to consent only because she is dazzled by his wealth. When complications arise that threaten to deprive him of his fortune she learns that she really loves him for himself. These complications are solved by the unexpected interposition of a third person. Hence the title "Third hand high" in whist-player's parlance.

Murray, D: Christie. Time's revenges: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1892 [1893.] c. 2+392 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The story of a young Englishman—a bailiff on a nobleman's estate—who is unjustly accused of attempted murder, and convicted, though innocent, and sent to the colonies for seven years. After serving his sentence, he buys a home in Tasmania, and in twenty years' time is many times a millionaire. The plot is involved, but most skilfully worked out, and is rich in incidents and surprises. Tom Barton, the convict, continues throughout to be the hero, his faithful wife being admirably depicted. The story, however, has its climax in the love of Tom's son for the daughter of the man who had innocently branded him a convict.

Musick, J: R. Braddock: a story of the French and Indian wars; il. by F. A. Carter. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls, 1893. c. 9+470 p. il. D. (Columbian novels, no. 8.) cl., $1.50.

Although the Braddock campaign is the episode especially dealt with, many other incidents of this period (1700-1760) of American history are introduced, notably the founding of the debtor's prison in the colony of Georgia in 1733. Accounts of the boyhood and first love-affair of George Washington are given. The Stevens family is also introduced in the plot.

Musick, J: R. A century too soon: a story of Bacon's rebellion; il. by F. A. Carter. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1893. c. 10+400 p. il. D. (Columbian historical novels, no. 6.) cl, $1.50.

The chief actors in the story are John Stevens and his son Robert, the son and grandson of Philip Stevens, whose story was told in "Pocahontas." It deals chiefly with the rebellion of 1676, led by Roger Bacon against Governor Berkeley and the "king's men" of Virginia. Bacon's rebellion failed on the very eve of victory because of its leader's untimely death. The Stevens, father and son, are actors in these events, and in describing their experiences the political and social conditions of the American colonies are pictured.

Musick, J: R. Independence: a story of the Revolution; il. by F. A. Carter. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1893. c. 14+456 p. D. (Columbian historical novels, v. 9.) cl., $1.50.

This story covers a period of forty years, from the inception of the struggle for American independence to its triumph. Many of the battles of the Revolution are described, together with the generals and other noted men of the time. The romance of the story centres in the life and adventures of Albert Stevens, a lineal descendant of the Hernando Estevan who figured in the first book of this series, and whose descendants have appeared in each successive volume. An historical index is appended.

Musick, J: R. The pilgrims: a story of Massachusetts. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1893. c. 8+368 p. il. D. (Columbian historical novels, no. 5.) cl., $1.50.

Covers the history of New England, in the form of a story, from 1620 to 1644, the period at which the New England colonies formed their first confederation for mutual protection. In order that the reader may have a better idea of the Pilgrims and their peculiar persecutions the story opens with their flight into Holland. Just a glimpse of their life in Leyden is given, and they are hastened on board the Mayflower, a full and accurate account of their memorable voyage being embodied in the narrative.

Musick, J: R. Sustained honor; a story of the war of 1812; il. by F. A. Carter. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1893. c. 11+451 p. il. D. (Columbian historical novels, no. 10.) cl., $1.50.

The historical matter in the volume relates to the period embraced in the administrations of Presidents Jefferson, Madison, and Monroe. The story deals with some of the remote and direct causes of the War of 1812, and derives its title from the victory of the patriotic war party over the partisan peace party. The hero, Fernando Stevens, is a direct descendant of Christopher Estevan, of Cuba, a companion of Pizarro and De Soto, and the son of Hernando Estevan, who went as cabin-boy with Columbus on his first voyage of discovery.

Musick, J: R. The witch of Salem; or, credulity run mad; il. by F. A. Carter. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1893. c. 8+389 p. il. D. (Columbian historical novels, no. 7.) cl., $1.50.

The narrative covers twenty years in the history of the United States, 1680 to 1700, including all the principal features and events of the gruesome yet romantic period which witnessed the last spasmodic throes of dying superstition. Charles Stevens, of Salem, with Cora Waters, an indented slave, whose father was captured at the time of the overthrow of the Duke of Monmouth, are the principal characters. Samuel Parris, the chief actor in the Sa'em tragedy, is a serious study. Cotton Mather and other advocates of witchcraft appear.

Venice in 1580 furnishes the scenic background for the history of the son of Titien, who, endowed with the most brilliant talent, wasted his life in frivolity and dissipation. One woman with whom he carried on an intrigue did her best to fire his ambition and make him work. After painting one portrait, however, he threw away his brushes and never worked again. Croisilles, a jeweller's son, is the hero of a story of the time of Louis XV., giving a good picture of class distinctions in France.

My wickedness: a psychological study. N. Y., The Cleveland Pub. Co., 19 Union Sq., 1893. 2-88 p. D. pap., 35 c.

The story is told in the first person by a criminal lunatic confined in Charentou for murdering a young girl. He gives in detail the events of a life which chiefly consisted of a series of cruelties, and traces his wickedness, for which he has no remorse, to the forces of heredity and an unknown parentage.

Newberry, Fannie E. Comrades. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1893.] c. 4+304 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The comrades are Jack Gurney, a bootblack, and Bert Loveridge, nephew and ward of a wealthy physician. Their friendship begins with the discovery of Jack on the doctor's steps on New Year's morning. After a little, Jack becomes assistant to the doctor, living at his home and sharing Bert's pleasures and privileges. Jack is unjustly accused of stealing, and leaves his home, but his innocence is made clear, and the boys are reunited.

Newberry, Fannie E. The odd one. Bost., A. I. Bradley & Co., 1893. c. 277 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Because Elizabeth Merritt possessed a distinctive personality, and because she differed in characteristics from her four sisters, she was looked upon as the odd member of the family, and finally chosen on that account to accompany an invalid grandfather to California. An event of this trip and her singular course of action after she returns are described in a romantic story.

The scene is New York. John Applegate, a medical specialist and confrère of Dr. Huntington, loves Margaret Huntington, generally supposed to be the doctor's daughter; in an incidental conversation, however, between Drs. Applegate and Huntington, it is revealed that the latter adopted Margaret for the purpose of testing whether education or heredity is strongest in the evolution of human character. The interest is in the final solution of this social problem, and in the unlooked-for developments of the young surgeon's wooing.

Norris, W. E. A deplorable affair. [Also] A deadly dilemma. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1893.] c. '92. 2-163 p. S. (Shandon ser., no. 6.) pap., 25 c.
An old-fashioned bookseller at an English seaside resort tells the story. He makes the acquaintance of the heroine as a protégée of Miss Whitfield's, the great lady of the place. Miss Whitfield's jewels are taken and sold and suspicion rests upon the protégée, who is a successful writer for young people. In spite of this "deplorable affair" Miss Devereux's life is made happy by love and marriage. "The deadly dilemma" comes to a dismissed lover who hesitates for an agonizing minute whether he shall save his girl from death by wrecking a train or let her die before his eyes where she has fallen on the tracks.

In 1877 the writer first saw the land [illegible] Columbus. In 1880 he visited the Lesser Antilles for ornithological exploration and became interested in studies about Columbus. Mr. Ober starts his narrative with the reception of the enterprise in Spain and then follows the discoverer through all his voyages, giving every description from personal observation and [illegible] the historical events merely as a golden thread on which to string the beads of this Columbian rosary. First appeared in Wide Awake. Profusely illustrated.

Oberholtzer, Ellis Paxon. Home rule for our American cities. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1893.] 1+68–95 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 90.) pap , 25 c.

A brief survey is presented of the governments of the eight largest cities in the United States. After pointing out their weak and strong points the author advocates a uniform system of government for the larger cities, which shall largely emancipate them from the state legislature, placing them in the same relation to it as our states stand to the national government.

An investigation into the origin and growth in the United States of that popular governmental principle known in Switzerland as the referendum. Both English and American writers have spoken of the referendum as a principle only in use in Switzerland, but it is shown in this volume that in America we have already had much experience with the referendum, and that, in every state in the Union, in the county, the city, the township, and the school-district, we employ, and in New England have employed since the Revolution, this same popular political principle.

The story of Marie-Celeste, a little Brooklyn girl, who went over to England with her father and mother to make a visit at the house of some cousins. She is an unusually wise and loving little girl, and exercises a remarkable influence upon those with whom she comes in contact. This begins on the steamer going over, where she makes an acquaintance which has much to do with the events of the story. Among other adventures, Marie-Celeste accidentally meets the queen at Windsor, and takes luuch in the palace.

Kypros, the Bible and Homer: oriental civilization, art and religion in ancient times; elucidated by the author's own researches and excavations during twelve years' work in Cyprus. In 2 v. V. 1, Text; V. 2. Plates. N. Y., B. Westermann & Co., 1893. 6+531 p. 7+43 pl. map, il. F. bds., net, $60.

The first volume opens with a list and description (in great part based on the writer's own discoveries) of Cyprian sanctuaries and tombs, amply illustrated with maps, plans, and restorations. Starting from the fact that the holy tree—e.g., the Biblical tree of life and tree of knowledge—holds a very important position in the worship of ancient Oriental people, the author has devoted a large part of the work to tree and grove worship in Cyprus, Mesopotamia, Egypt, Syria, and Judea, adding thereto the worship of post and pillar—Ashera and Masseba—so well known from the Bible. This and the following section on "Worship of divinities and fabulous beings" are largely illustrated from antiquities, hitherto unpublished, and also by the volume of plates, descriptions and explanations of which are given. The subjects of the appendixes are: 1, A comparison of the festivals of Oriental vegetation divinities with those of southern and northern Europe. 2, Gold objects found in Cyprus. Full indexes.

Orpen, Adela E. The chronicles of the Sid; or, the life and travels of Adelia Gates. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1893.] 8-413 p. por. il. O. cl., $2.

The real name of the "Sid" was Adelia Gates, born some sixty years ago in New York State. Her faithful chronicler was also her pupil and friend after the "Sid" went west with her father. A bright narrative tells the events of the "Sid's" early life on a farm, then as a teacher, and a factory girl at Lowell, and her experience for many years in Kansas. The more important parts of the book are the descriptions of her travels in Europe—where she went in 1867—and her unconventional rambles over the great desert of Sahara and through the Holy Land.

The author of "Uncle Remus" discovered in Frederic Ortoli's Les contes de la veillée something strikingly in line with his Brother Rabbit stories. These were the Tar-Baby and Brother Rabbit, but Brother Fox's place was supplied by Brother Billy Goat. They are all more or less actors in a series of delightful fairy tales that include many other characters, which children will hugely enjoy, and grown people also, for their quaint humor and amusing moral.

Ottolengui, Rodrigues. A conflict of evidence. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, [1893.] c. 3+347 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The story opens with the discovery of a mysterious murder in a small New Hampshire village. The victim is an elderly man, wealthy and respected. The niece of the murdered man, her lover, and two other young people fall under suspicion. Two of these suspected persons separately confess to having committed the murder: another is pointed out as the murderer by a convincing chain of circumstance. From this "conflict of evidence" the right clue is disentangled by one of the two detectives on the case—the Mr. Barnes who figured in the author's previous story, "An artist in crime." The identity of the real criminal is a complete surprise.

Overton, Ella Edersheim. A lady born; il. by W. H. Overend. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 2–220 p. il. D. cl., 80 c.

Two English girls, orphans, left by their aunt's death with a small competence, decide upon their future. Both, though in humble circumstances, believe themselves "ladies born" on the mother's side. The elder sister devotes herself to the care of a disreputable old uncle and achieves success as a house decorator. The younger goes to Paris and becomes governess in an English family where her unladylike behavior and silly efforts to prove herself "a lady born" lead to humiliating dismissal. To both sisters the discovery of their mother's real station is an unexpected shock. The contrasting characters of the girls and their different careers point an obvious moral.

"Every man takes care that his neighbor shall not cheat him. But a day comes when he begins to care that he do not cheat his neighbor. Then all goes well." On this text is founded a young man's experience, during which he drifts into mining life, is buried for several days by an accident, and learns many lessons from his fellow sufferers. The heroine appears at sixteen, a bright, happy girl in spite of the nerves and fault-finding of her cousin, in whose house she has found a home and hard work. An American story of east and west.

Parker, Gilbert. The translation of a savage. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 3+184 p. D. cl., 75 c.

The "savage" is an Indian girl, daughter of a chief of one of the tribes of western Canada. She is married by a young Englishman eonnected with the Hudson's Bay Company, who makes her his wife in a fit of anger with his family, intending thus to humiliate his relatives. To carry out this plan he remains in Canada, but sends her to his home in England. The consternation caused by her arrival, and her first hatred of the eonventionalities of eivilized life, are soon followed by the rapid translation of the savage into a well-bred gentlewoman and the consequent failure of her husband's silly and unkind revenge.

The first of a series of brief outline historical sketches in which the author eliminates as much as possible the non-essential facts, presenting to the student a single continuous thread of events which may be easily retained in the memory. In this volume a few vivid strokes portray Germany from the Aryan migrations to William II.

Parr, Mrs. Louisa. Can this be love? N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1893. c. 2+348 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Arthur Maynard was disinherited by his uncle because he refused to marry a girl of his uncle's selection and the uncle's wealth was left to a niece, a little girl named Stella Clarkson, the child of hard-working middle-class people. Stella by the will's provision is educated for a station far above her birth. She wins the love of Vivian Stapleton, the son of the lady in whose charge she is placed, but her family, to whom she clings, are a eonstant souree of disagreements. A famous novelist appears upon the scene, and he and Stella are mutually attracted; he changes the whole tenor of her life, his identity remaining a secret to her till the end.

Parsons, T: W: Poems. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 8+250 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Dr. Parsons had poetic genius which entitles him to a high place among American poets. Hardly any other poet of this country has written poems of finer imaginative quality or of more classic grace. He paid slight attention to what became of them, but now friendly and judicious hands have collected them into a tasteful volume, which all lovers of poetry must value highly.

Parton, Ja. General Jackson. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. 332 p. por. D. (Great commanders ser., no. 3.) cl., $1.50.

The last literary work of James Parton was the preparation of this brief biography of General Jackson. It was completed in August, 1891, two months before his death. It is the successor of many valuable American biographies that we have had from his pen, all popular in character, unconventional and impartial in judgment. Although less ambitious in scope than some of Mr. Parton's previous volumes, it presents a fair estimate of its subject, and is singularly free from what Macaulay calls "the disease of admiration." The editor calls it "a model miniature biography, possessing throughout all the interest of a romance."

Pascoe, C: Eyre. London of to-day: an illustrated handbook; ed. for 1893. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. 12°, cl., $1.50.

Pasquier, Étienne-Denis, (Duc.) A history of my time: memoirs of Chancellor Pasquier; ed. by the Duc D'Audiffret-Pasquier; from the French, by C: E. Roche. In 3 v. V. 1, 1789–1810. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. 19+559 p. pors. O. cl., $2.50.

Étienne-Denis Pasquier was born of a noble French family in 1767 and rose to be chancellor of France, and died a duke in 1862. He witnessed the French Revolution and the rise and fall of Napoleon. In 1810 Napoleon made him prefect of police for Paris, a position which unlocked to him many secret doors, through which he explored many intrigues and important events that have become historical. He gives his version, with great clearness, common sense, and frankness, in these memoirs, of many matters which directly illustrate Napoleon's methods of thought and action. He says little of Napoleon until he became First Consul; he tells of the general opinion regarding the Egyptian expedition and the overthrow of the Directory; of Napoleon's action in the execution of the Duke d'Enghien, in his divorce of Josephine and marriage to Marie Louise, and of his treatment of Talleyrand. With this the present volume ends.

In a recent paper the author contrasted the use of the terms "cost and utility" in the theory of prosperity with their use in the theory of value. He completes his argument in this paper by presenting the subject anew from the present point of view, as he says "the relation of cost to utility cannot be fully understood until the relation of cost to expense is explained."

Paul, Kenneth. The new minister. N. Y., A. S. Barnes & Co., 1893. c. 5+342 p. D. cl., $1.

The hero is called to be the pastor of the First Congregational Church of Weavington just as he is graduated from the Phonoville University. Weavington stands for a rich manufacturing town of New Jersey. Charles Clayton, "the new minister," is handsome and talented, and at once wins the approbation of the daughter of one of the wealthiest men of the place, who determines to win him for her husband. Clayton is fascinated with her, but also admires another girl, who would have made him a better wife. Besides his love and marriage, the story gives an interesting account of the many trials of a new minister in his attempts to carry out his own views, and manage his church according to his best knowledge.

Paull, Mrs. G: A., [Minnie E. Kenney.] Silver bowls. N. Y., American Tract Soc., 1893. c. 428 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A pleasantly writteu story for girls, inculeating lessons of self-denial and eonsideration for others. A silver bowl was the badge of the eirele of "King's Daughters" to whieh Louise Rushton belonged. The aim of the "Silver Bowls" was to cheerfully do the little thiugs of life. Her father's death obliged Louise to earn her living as cashier in a big department store. It was hard work amid unpleasant surroundings; but by patienee, faith, and self-denial Louise elears away her difficulties and lightens the lives of her assoeiates, winning, in the end, an unexpected and delightful reward.

Peary, Mrs. Josephine Diebitsch. My Arctic journal: a year among ice-fields and Eskimos; with an account of The Great White Journey across Greenland, by Rob. E. Peary. N. Y. and Phil., The Contemporary Pub. Co., 1893. c. 2+240 p. il. O. cl., $2.

Mrs. Peary, who was the only woman who accompanied the expedition under Lieut. Peary, sent out in June of 1891 by the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Science to make further explorations towards the Pole, recounts her experience of a full twelvemonth spent on the shores of McCormick Bay, midway between the Arctic Circle and the North Pole. The life in camp is full of interesting details, as is also her own experience in hunting, keeping house, etc., etc. She was brought in contact with a little tribe of Eskimos, completely isolated from the rest of the world, who had never seen a white woman, and some of them had never seen a civilized being. The observations made by Mrs. Peary on their manners and mode of life are very valuable. The many pictures illustrating the book, taken from photographs, are as interesting as the text.

Peeke, Mrs. Margaret B. Zenia, the vestal; or, the problem of vibrations. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1893. c. 355 p. O. cl., $2.

The author is an ardent theosophist, and her intention in this novel is to lead the reader "across the threshold, into the temple, where the seeret laws of life aud oeeult philosophy will be made plain." Zenia, the vestal, is an American girl who falls in with a master in theosophy and learns that she was once a vestal virgin in the Temple of Isis in aneient Egypt and in the Temple of Athene in Greece long afterward. She then dedicates herself anew to vestal service in "the temple of humanity." Mrs. Pecke states that she has been aided in preparing the book by "the Hierophant of the Order Egyptian; the Order of Alcantra of Granada; the School of the Prophets on Mount Hermon; the Illuminati, and the Nameless One."

Pelham, H: F. Outlines of Roman history. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 9+599 p. D. cl., $1.75.

A reprint with many additions and alterations of the article "Roman history," which appeared in the last edition of the "Encyclopædia Britannica." The aim has been to give such a sketch of the general course of Roman history as may enable the reader to follow the main lines of movement and grasp the characteristic features of the different periods. The larger space is devoted to the period which extends from the tribunate of the elder Gracchus to the fall of Nero (133 B C –69 A.D.), as being the period which it is most necessary for a student of Roman history to understand. A list of four pages is given of the principal modern authorities on the subject.

Pendleton, Edmund. A complication of hearts: a novel. N. Y., Home Publishing Co., 1893. c. 244 p. D. pap., 50 c.

An earnest, unsophisticated young Congressman, the "Kid-glove" candidate of a country district, is the chief actor in this novel of Washington life. On his arrival at the capital he falls desperately in love with a beautiful woman, the unloved wife of a wealthy, dissipated French millionaire. The "complication of hearts" that ensues is fraught with danger to both, but is successfully solved. A number of minor characters are concerned in the action.

Percival, H: R. A digest of theology: a brief statement of Christian doctrine according to the consensus of the great theologians of the one holy Catholic and apostolic church; with an appendix containing in English the doctrinal decrees of the œcumenical synods. Phil., J: Jos. McVey, 1893. 14+311 p. D. cl., net, $2.

The writer states that he has followed in the main the order of the Index Systematicus at the end of Denziger's Enchiridion symbolorum et definitionum, and that this work contains in handy form all the decrees of the general councils of the Protestant Episcopal Church, with all the rulings which bind the Roman communion to this day. The author's aim has been to present the old truths of the Gospel in the old familiar way and in the old familiar language, and as far as possible in the language of the scientific theology of the Catholic Church. His object is to set forth what the doctrine of the Anglican communion should be if it acted on the principle accepted by the Episcopal Church east and west. Contains a list of authorities cited (6 p.).

Peyton, J. L: Tom Swindel; or, the adventures of a boomer. Staunton, Va., G: L. Bolen, 1893. c. 136 p. S. pap., 50 c.

Tom Swindel, a Virginia lawyer, resigns his position at the bar, purchases a tract of land, and with some fellow-conspirators attempts to boom a town. His methods and experienees are evidently given to show the dangers attending one who trausgresses the moral or legal rights of a community.

Phelps, C. E. D., and North, Leigh. The bailiff of Tewkesbury. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1893. c. 3+199 p. il. S. cl., $1.

A clever and attractive story of English life in the last half of the sixteenth century, the scene being laid in aud about Tewkesbury and Stratford-on-Avon. Shakespeare as a young man is introduced as one of the characters with mueh skill and with perfect propriety. Will Helpes, identified with that "W. H." who is immortalized in Shakespeare's dedication to his sonnets, and Sir Thomas Lucy, often anathematized by young Shakespearian enthusiasts, are also introduced as characters.

Phelps, Eliz. Stuart. [now Mrs. Herbert D. Ward.] Donald Marcy. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 3+242 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Donald Marcy, a rich, careless student in a New England university, is suspended and rusticated for two terms for having been ringleader in a case of cruel hazing. He is put into the family of a poor Vermont minister, who inspires him with a love of learning. The minister's daughter, also a college graduate, makes a man of him in character and aspiration, and the story leaves her waiting for him to regain his lost fortune.

"This little book gives the results of a search in English literature from 1700 to 1765 for the beginnings of the English romantic movement. The minor poetry from 1725 to 1765, although desperately dull reading, has satisfactorily rewarded my search. I have reached no startling eonclusions, but there is some matter in the book that may fairly be called new, and a number of points suggested by previous study have been more fuly developed."—Preface.

Philips, F. C. One never knows. N. Y., Cleveland Publishing Co., 1893. c. 262 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The unhappy results of a mésalliance between a burlesque actress of the Hilarity Theatre, London, and the younger son of a duke, are traced through many sensational seenes, some of which take place in the theatre, some in "Bohemia," and some at Cape Town, Afriea, where the wife returns again to the stage to help her extravagant husband. Though a good, true woman, she is the victim of her husband's selfishness and unscrupulousness—the public being made to think she is eriminal while the husband is pitied. By the author of "As in a looking-glass."

Piatt, Donn. Poems and plays. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1893. c. 3–360 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Contains the following dramas and comedies: Lost and won; A hunt for an heiress; A king's love; Emotional insanity. Also a collection of Donn Piatt's best poems.

Piatt, Donn. The Reverend Melancthon Poundex: a novel; il. by Edgar M. Ward. Chic., Belford Publishing Co.,] for sale by Western News Co., 206 Madison St.,] 1893. c. 4–366 p. por. D. (Valentia ser., no. 1.) pap., 50 c.

"The Reverend Melancthon Poundex," an eminent divine, is reminded of an episode in his early life by reading the death notice of its heroine. This leads him to look up some old letters, which, being interrupted while reading them, he hastily secretes in an old mattress. These letters are the indirect means of bringing about the interesting situations in a novel in which an erring minister, a woman suffragist, a disciple of free love, a talented artist, and an ingenuous heroine have important parts. The scene is in Pokohasset and New York City; scenes and characters seem to recall those of the celebrated Beecher trial.

Piatt. Donn. Sunday meditations and selected prose sketches. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1893. c. 448 p. D. cl , $1.50.

Contains a number of miscellaneous essays, and some critical sketches of the celebrated public men here given: Washington McLean; Robert Cummins Schenck; Henry Ward Beecher; Roscoe Conkling; Charles Stewart Parnell; James A. Garfield.

Piatt, Donn. General George H. Thomas: a critical biography; with concluding chapters by H. V. Boynton. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1893. c. 5–658 p. por. O. cl., $3.

At the time of Colonel Piatt's death he had completed his life of Thomas up to the opening of the Atlanta campaign. This portion of the work comprises nineteen chapters. While closely following the campaigns in which General Thomas took part, and noting his uniform success, it presents at every step the contemporaneous movements of other armies. Thus the work is, to a great extent, a history of the war. At the request of Mrs. Piatt, General H. V. Boynton has furnished concluding chapters presenting the salient points of General Thomas' participation in the Atlanta and Nashville campaigns, and a history more complete than any yet undertaken of the wonderful cavalry expedition of Gen. James H. Wilson, sent by General Thomas against Selma and Montgomery after the destruction of Hood's army. These closing chapters, twelve in number also present an outline of General Thomas' career after the war, and up to his tragic death in San Francisco. The circumstances of his death, which General Boynton treats as falling little short of assassination, are set forth in detail.

Pictorial New York and Brooklyn: a guide to the same and vicinity. N. Y., Smith, Bleakley & Co., 853 Broadway, [1893.] 5+175 p. maps, il. Q. pap., 50 c.

Aims to place the cities of New York and Brooklyn before the reader as they are now rather than as they were of old. This is done through a bright and graphic text, which also includes all the usual information of the guide-book, and is from the pens of Charles Lotin Hildredth and Frederic Lyster, and a profusion of unusually good pictures. The sectional maps have been carefully prepared, are accurate and up to date, as is the whole work.

On a large quarto-page are grouped five and six pictures taken from photographs of the most beautiful places and views in Berkshire Co., Mass. The text that surrounds them is descriptive and imaginative and from the pens of our most celebrated writers. The work is in two parts—one devoted to the north and the other to the south part of the county, Pittsfield and towns in and about its latitude marking the dividing line. Nearly 1200 reproductions of photographs are contained in the two volumes, the photographer, R. Lionel De Lisser, having spent an entire summer and fall of 1892 in making an exhaustive study of southern Berkshire, while Clifton Johnson did the same work for the northern part. Each part is preceded by a frontispiece of original design. Elbridge Kingsley contributes a new view of old Greylock Mountain and De Lisser a view of "The dome."

This book, published in Paris in 1886, was first brought to the notice of Americans in 1888 by the Presbyterian Quarterly. The author is a clergyman of the Reformed Church at Strassburg; the translator is professor in Boston University; he has prepared complete indexes, which were lacking in the original. The author does not believe in the infallibility of the Bible. He thinks the intelligent study of the Bible will not endanger true faith, but merely be a blow to "Jewish rabbinism and Christian dogmatism."

Pierce, E: L. Memoir and letters of Charles Sumner. In 4 v. V. 3, 1845–1860. V. 4, 1860–1874. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 3+621; 7+658 p. pors. O. cl., $6; hf. cf., $10.

The first two volumes of this work were published in 1877. See notice in P. W., Nov. 10, 1877, p. 564. Mr. Pierce, as it is well known, was designated in Mr. Sumner's will as one of his literary executors. As a man extremely conscientious writer and an [illegible] of Mr. Sumner, he spared no pains in preparing [illegible] work, and read all the 40,000 letters which Mr. Sumner left in his library. V. 3 deals with society in Boston at the period between 1845 and 1860, and the events of Mr. Sumner's own public and private life during this time, his active interest in various social reforms, and his career in Congress, with the different measures upon which his voice was heard, such as "The fugitive slave law," "The Missouri compromise," etc., ending with the assault made upon him in the Senate Chamber by Preston S. Brooks. V. 4 opens with the Secession movement of 1860, and includes all the eventful history which followed down to March 11, 1874, when Sumner died. George William Curtis, who read the entire manuscript of the work some months before he died, wrote to Mr. Pierce: "Your patient diligence and complete research are without example in such work, and I think often of your remark to me that it had taken your life to write Sumner's."

Contains instruction in both the corresponding and reporting styles, with copious lists of phrases, exercises, business letters, and specimens of legal forms; designed to furnish, within the compass of a volume of handy size, a complete presentation of phonography. Every part of the system is explained in the simplest and clearest manner possible; each principle is illustrated by exercises, and the student's knowledge is tested at succeeding stages by questions. In addition to leading the student by easy steps to the briefest style of phonography, a large amount of matter is included which will familiarize him with a wide range of shorthand work. A chapter entitled "Practical hints in legal work," from the pen of Mr. W. L. Mason, is a prominent feature of the book. Special attention has been given to the selection of law and general phrases; also Latin and French quotations, which are presented in both shorthand and longhand.

In an appendix are treated his metre and versification and spurious and doubtful works.

Pollard, Alice, comp. True stories from Roman history. [N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1893.] 3+312 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A pleasantly written history of Rome, from its foundation to the end of the republic and the rise of the Cæsars; told in a colloquial manner, to interest young people, and supplied with many illustrations.

Pollock, Walter Herries. King Zub. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1893.] c. '92. 285 p. D. cl., $1.25; pap , 50 c.

Nine short stories founded on incidents of stage history, and episodes in the career of divers members of the theatrical professi n. These are entitled, King Zub; The last act; A fleeting show; A phantom fish; Stage fright; The last droschky; Sir Jocelyn's cap; Three meetings; Mated by magic. King Zub tells how a performing dog of that name was lost after a performance in Madrid and restored to his owner through a clever trick perpetrated on a stranger in London.

Polly's pets. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., [1893.] unp. nar. F. pap., 30 c.

Polk, W: M., M.D. Leonidas Polk, bishop and general. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1893. c. 2 v., 7+349; 5+442 p. pors. D. cl., $4.

The subject of this biography was born at Raleigh on the 10th of April, 1806; he died in 1864. He came from military ancestors, and was entered at West Point, as it was supposed he would make the army his career. But after his graduation he chose to enter the ministry; was for some years missionary-bishop of the southwest, and in 1841 became bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the diocese of Louisiana; in 1861 he resigned his charge and entered the service of the Southern Confederacy, with the rank of lieutenant-general. He was killed by a cannon-ball at Pine Mountain in 1864. His biography shows a man rich in noble traits and lovable qualities.

Pomeroy, J: Norton. Remedies and remedial rights, by civil action according to the reformed American procedure: a treatise adapted to use in all the states and territories where that system prevails; 3d. ed., by J: Norton Pomeroy, Jr. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1894 [1893.] 86+909 p. Pomeroy, J: Norton. A treatise on the law of water rights as the same is formulated and applied in the Pacific states, including the doctrine of appropriation and the statutes and decisions relating to irrigation; being a rev. and enl. ed. of "Pomeroy on riparian rights" with several additional chapters by H: Campbell Black, M.A. St. Paul, Minn., West Pub. Co., 1893. c. 36+592 p. O. shp., $5.25.

Pomona; by the author of "Miss Toosey's mission;" il. by Rob. Barnes. Bost., Roberts Bros, 1894 [1893.] c. 296 p. S. cl., $1.

She was called Pomona because the apple trees were in full bloom the day she was born. Her young mother died at her birth, and her father, not yet having learned to love her, and yearning to get away from the scene of his sorrow, gave his little girl to a Lady Lester, a friend of his dead wife. He goes to America, and it is twenty years afterwards before Pomona and her father meet again. Many complications arise, and many scenes from English home life, with a pretty love-story, make up a very pretty romance.

Pond, S: W. Two volunteer missionaries among the Dakotas; or, the story of the labors of S: W. and G. H. Pond. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Publishing Soc., [1893.] c. 12+8-278 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The mission to the Dakota Indians is one of the most interesting, as it has been one of the most successful missionary endeavors of our time. This volume deals with its origin, relating how two brothers, Samuel W. and Gideon H. Pond, went out from Connecticut, at their own charges, to labor among the Indians of Minnesota.

Pool, Maria Louise. Katharine North: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. '92. 4+312 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Another New England character study, in line with "Roweny in Boston" and "Mrs. Keats Bradford." Katharine North is an inexperienced country girl who is persuaded by her strong-minded mother to become the fourth wife of Deacon Grove. She runs away from her husband directly after the marriage ceremony, and with another girl goes to "South Shore," a summer resort on Massachusetts Bay, and becomes a waiter in a restaurant. Here she first meets her aunt, a lecturer on woman's wrongs, who strongly influences her life. Her father furnishes the tragic element of the story, in a sudden attempt he makes to rid his unhappy daughter of her uncongenial husband.

Pool, Maria Louise. The two Salomes: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 4+372 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author of "Roweny in Boston" and other studies of the New England girl offers a new type in Salome Gerry, who is shown to be the victim of an "invincible heredity," which leads her to commit a crime and to remain totally indifferent to her deed as long as she remains under a southern sky. Salome and her mother spend a winter in St Augustine, for the benefit of the former's health, thus affording the author an opportunity for some bright sketches of southern life and character.

Poole, Eva Travers Evered. Good-night thoughts about God; or, evening readings for the young. Cin., O., Cranston & Curts, 1893. 4-137 p. D. cl., 35 c.

Discourses on Bible texts for thirty one days; also readings for Christmas and New Year's, Good Friday and Easter evening.

Poole, W: F., and Fletcher, W: I. Poole's index to periodical literature: the second supplement; from January 1, 1887, to January 1, 1892; by W: I. Fletcher with the co-operation of the American Library Association. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 13+476 p. O. cl., net, $8; shp., net, $10; hf. mor., net, $12.

To Mr Fletcher, Mr. Poole's associate in the work from its beginning, belongs, with his collaborators, the sole credit of the present supplement. Dr Poole says he has been too busy with other work to take any part in it. It furnishes a key to the periodical literature of the past five years, an unusually prolific [illegible] magazine we have. In all 118 periodicals are covered; 67 are continued from the Index of 1887, [illegible] included in the first supplement, and 41 are now first introdueed, six of whieh are old periodicals not before indexed. Most promment among these six sets is the Journal of the Society of Arts (London), the entire thirty-nine volumes of which are now first indexed. The articles of this journal are of great importance, espeeially in the department of applied science. Another addition is Meliora (London), the twelve volumes of which, published from 1858 to 1869, are replete with valuable papers on a multitude of sociological topies. The number of Mr. Fletcher's collaborators in the present supplement is sixty-three, two more than in the previous one, the eo-operative method working as suceessfully as at first.

Poor, Agnes Blake, ["Dorothy Prescott," pseud.] Brothers and strangers. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 4–321 p. D. cl., $1.

A realistic novel dealing with every-day people, but well written and full of interest. The scene is laid in and near Boston and in New York State. The hero is a self-made man, who in appearanee and education is a strong contrast to the rest of his family, who feel that his suceess should be continually taxed for their shiftlessness. His family trials and his love-story are quite true to life.

Popular Science Monthly. Index to the Popular Science Monthly, from 1872–1892, including v. 1–40 and the twenty-one numbers of the Supplement; comp. by F: A. Fernald, (an author-and-class index in one alphabet.) N. Y., Appleton, 1893. 5+271 p. O. cl., interleaved, $2.50.

To place the great store of information contained in the past volumes of the Popular Science Monthly fully at the command of intelligent readers this index has been planned and compiled more with reference to practical usefulness than mere logical accuracy in classification. It groups the articles so that any one looking up, for instance, Anthropology, Evolution, Manual Training, Social Science, or Vivisection, can find what has appeared in the monthly on the subject in question under that head. As the Monthly is a popular magazine, popular names have been preferred to technical ones as names of classes. The number of pages and illustrations in each article is given in its subject-entry.

A Russian sub-deacon, aged twenty-eight, is the husband of a nervous, dying wife and the father of six ragged, healthy, noisy children. His efforts to increase his salary by becoming a priest are narrated. The Russian church decrees that a widower cannot be made a priest before the age of forty. The dying wife sends the deacon from her death-bed to be made priest before it is too late. "An occasional holiday" also tells a harrowing story of poverty and human misery in Russia.

Two articles reprinted from The Metal Worker on the method of joint-wiping, an operation that requires perhaps more manual skil than anything else that a plumber is called upon to do; both articles were written by a practical plumber.

Practical shorthand: a complete and systematic exposition of phonography: based on the Pitmanic alphabet for use in schools and colleges. [Cleveland, O., The Practical Text-Book Co.,] 1894 [1893.] 244 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Prang, L:, Hicks, Mary Dana, and Clark, J: S. Color instruction: suggestions for a course of instruction in color for public schools. Bost., The Prang Educational Co., 1893. c. 9+187 p. il. D. cl., $1.

This book presents to teachers in a simple and systematic manner the educational principles involved in the right teaching of color. It bases the instruction on the actual condition of the color sense in children, as ascertained by careful experiment, and leads up from this beginning to the development of the pupil's power to appreciate that wider range of colors which constitutes the ideal color unit of nature and art, and power to recognize and demonstrate in individual work the underlying principles of color harmony. The methods it advocates are those of self-activity on the part of the pupil—self-activity both in the observation of color effects and the use of color materials. It suggests a sequence of practical exercises for class-room work in different grades.

Preyer, W. Mental development in the child; from the German, by H. W. Brown. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 26+170 p. D. (International education ser., no. 24.) cl., $1.

The special object of this book, as announced by Dr. Preyer in his preface, is to initiate mothers into the complicated science of psychogenesis. Accordingly he has taken unusual pains to present the more important points upon which the development of the child's mind depends in a form easy of assimilation. He desires to evoke a widespread interest in the development of the infant mind, and lead to a multitude of special investigations into the phenomena of the first five years of the child's life. Dr. Preyer is also the author of "The mind of the child," published in two parts in this series as "The senses and the will" and "The development of the intellect."

A sketch of the "beginnings of literary property"—that is, an outline of the gradual evolution of the idea that the producer of a literary work is entitled to secure from the community not only such laurel crown of fame as may be adjudged to his work, but also some material compensation proportioned as nearly as may be practicable to the extent of the service rendered by him. Prefixed to the study of literary and publishing undertakings in Athens, Alexandria, and Rome, in which cities definite relations between authors and their public can first be traced, some preliminary sketches concerning the beginnings of literature in Chaldea, Egypt, India, Persia, China, and Japan. A bibliography of the principal works referred to as authorities covers five pages.

While the amusing mistakes of "Uncle Jeremiah and family" chiefly take up the narrative, a very good description is offered of the salient features of the Columbian Exposition at Chicago. It is intended to present the Exposition as a well-to-do country family would see it, and give at the same an interesting romance from real life.

Rathborne, St. George. Major Matterson of Kentucky: a novel. St. Paul, Minn., The Price-McGill Co., [1893.] 4–365 p. D. (Idle moments ser., no. 21.) pap., 50 c.

Major Matterson of Kentucky, while sojourning in Teheran, Persia, learns of a plot against his nephew Max, and succeeds in saving him from a ghastly death at the hands of the Parsees; on this incident and an adventure in Russia is founded a sensational novel.

Rathborne, St. George. The man from Wall St.: a novel. Chic., Morrill, Higgins & Co., [1893.] c. '92. 2–324 p. il. D. (Idylwild ser., v. 1, no. 29.) pap., 50 c.

"The man from Wall Street" is an American stockbroker who has sensational adventures in Venice, Trinidad, and Seville. The story, which has an American heroine and a sufficiency of villainous or scheming foreigners, comes to an orthodox conclusion, the final scene being the Plaza de los Toros, Seville, where the man from Wall Street wins honor in a bull fight.

Rathborne, St. George. Mynheer Joe: a novel; il. by H. M. Eaton and H. C. Edwards. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, 1893. c. 5–289 p. S. (Ledger lib., no. 88.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

"Mynheer Joe" was the sobriquet of Joe Milne, General Gordon's messenger. He tells to a few Americans in Cairo of the storming of Khartoum and the fate that befell the brave general. He is likewise hero of the love story interwoven with the historical episode on which the novel is founded.

"This book is the result of an endeavor to trace to their sources in mind or matter the methods employed in the composition of the art forms. As an incidental, yet as it seemed necessary step to the accomplishment of this endeavor, the action of the mind in these methods has been identified with its action in scientific classification; the methods have been arranged according to the logical order of their development; they have had added to them, so as to render the whole presentation complete, a number hitherto recognized, if at all, only indirectly; and their character and effects have been shown to be exemplified not alone in painting, sculpture or architecture, to which it has been customary to confine consideration in essays of this kind, but equally in all the arts." Fully illustrated with copies of celebrated pictures and sculptures. Mr. Raymond is professor of oratory and æsthetic criticism, Princeton College.

Twenty-nine short stories about the west and southwest, by the author of "A Kentucky colonel."

Read, Opie P., ["Arkansaw traveller," pseud.] A Tennessee judge: a novel. Chic., Laird & Lee, [1893.] c. 2–325 p. il. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Robert Hawley's decreasing health warning him that he needed rest, he decided to act in accordance with his doctor's advice—namely, to relinquish the cares of his business in Chicago and give his entire time to the gratification of some whim. Hence he buys the Iugleview Place, an old homestead in Tennessee. The consequences of this act are described in a story of sensational and romantic interest, which deals also with a southern phase of life that is nearly extinct.

Reade, C: The cloister and the hearth; or, maid, wife, and widow: a matter-of-fact romance; il. from drawings by W: Martin Johnson. N. Y., Harper, 1894 [1893.] c. 2 v., 2+608; 2+609–1233 p. por. il. O. silk, $8.

Though published as far back as 1861, this novel still holds a first place in the world's literature. It is a romance of the 15th century, the story of the leading characters being based upon the strange history of the parents of the reformer Erasmus, who is introduced in the concluding chapters of the story. This is an elegant holiday edition, bound in silk, and illustrated by the illustrator of the Garfield edition of "Ben-Hur," and somewhat in the same style, by a profusion of marginal cuts.

With minds and hearts rightly directed, the author thinks, the voice of God, the Holy Spirit, speaks to man to-day as in ages past. He traces through the Old and New Testaments the various times that God has spoken, and even thinks that in all our errors and superstitions we can hear the words of spiritual meaning that should teach the same lesson to every listener.

Reeve, C. H. Preventive legislation in relation to crime. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1893.] 95–106 p. O. (Publications of the Society, no. 68.) pap., 15 c.

Crime, the writer believes, can only be diminished and controlled by removing the causes which lead to it, and not simply by punishing the criminal. Prolific sources of crime, he says further, are class legislation, creating inequality in social and political conditions and unrestricted and unrestrained marriages. For the public safety laws should be made regarding the latter, making it a crime for the diseased, the poor, the criminal and the insane to marry or to become parents, either with or without the marriage ceremony.

Reeves, Mrs. S. K. Donald Patterson's daughter. Phil., American S. S. Union, 1893. c. '92. 3–254 p. D. cl., $1.10.

Donald Patterson's first and only church was a very humble one in the western wilds fifty miles from a railroad. Here he brought his bride, and here his daughter Helen was born. The story is a simple record of the good work accomplished, and of Helen's development in spite of her poor surroundings into a beautiful woman.

Reichhard, Mrs. J. F. My official husband; or, the mystery of Hilliard Hall. N. Y., J. S Ogilvie. [1893.] c. 2–208 p. D. (Sunnyside ser., no. 71.) pap., 25 c.

After a stormy interview in the library of Hilliard Hall, Ryle Hilliard's father forbids him to marry a girl apparently his social inferior. This is followed by a quarrel with Letton, the supposed father of the girl, and Ryle leaves for Mexico. At this stage the intervention of an adventuress, whose motives are revenge, brings about complications in the lives of both father and son, which are explained in a romantic story.

Renton, W: Outlines of English literature. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 10+248 p. D. (University extension manuals.) cl., net, $1.

English national literature is divided into two main periods, the first covering from 600–1600, the second from 1600–1900. Each of these periods is subdivided into four ages. The specialties of the writers of every age are brought before the reader by an ingenious system of diagrams and their rank in literature indicated by large and small type. American literature is considered as an integral part of English literature; but an appendix gives a summary of its history and general characteristics with a conspectus of Scotch and American poetry in relation to English.

Riddle, A. G. Ansel's cave: a story of early life in the Western Reserve. Cleveland, O., The Burrows Bros. Co., 1893. c. 7+249 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A real cavern some twenty miles east of Cleveland gives title to the story. The story opens in 1835, when, though the lands of the Western Reserve were largely occupied by the pioneers, they were still largely covered by the grand forest, and communication between Newbury and Cleveland was difficult and through a nearly unbroken wilderness to the Chagrin River. Mr. Riddle is already known favorably by his first novel, "Bart Ridgely." This story is founded on facts—romantic and sensational—the characters bearing their proper names, as the author knew them many years ago.

Rives, Amélie, [now Mrs. J: Armstrong Chanler.] Athelwold. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 5+118 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.

The play has its scene laid in Anglo-Saxon England, some time during the ninth century. The leading characters are Edgar, King of England, Athelwold, Thane of Edgar, Oswald, a priest, and Elfreda, daughter of the Earl of Devonshire. Elfreda, loved both by the King and Athelwold, is the motive for a thrilling tragedy. The author shows exquisite powers of description and characterization. Finely printed on wide margined linen paper.

Rives, Amélie, [now Mrs. J: Armstrong Chanler.] Tanis, the sang-digger. N. Y., Town Topics Pub. Co., 1893. c. 5-187 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Tanis, the sang-digger, is a poor girl of Virginia, who lives pretty much like a savage in the mountains, and eks out an existence by digging the ginseng root. She is loved by a young giant of her own class, a mammoth brute, who exercises an almost irresistible spell over her. Her battle against the passion and tyranny of this man is the motive of the story. The story is mostly told in dialect.

Roberts, Ellen. One of earth's daughters.

Bost., Arena Publishing Co., 1893. c. 316 p. D. (Arena lib. ser., no. 16.) pap., 50 c.

Josephine Hilton's sole object in life is the pursuit of her own happiness regardless of the cost to others. She leaves her first husband, a plain mechanic, because her life with him is monotonous, and goes to Boston, where she tries to earn some money as a book-keeper to enable her to see the world. A rich old judge falls in love with her, and she obtains a divorce from her husband and marries him. In her brief life with the judge she again plans her time for her own pursuits and pleasure. His sudden death releases her, just as she is wearying of him. After a year she marries a third time, a young man of wealth and position, fancying herself sincerely in love. In him she finds her Nemesis.

Roberts, J. W. Looking within; the misleading tendencies of "Looking backward" made manifest. N. Y., A. S. Barnes & Co., 1893. c. 3+279 p. D. cl., $1.

In 1875, the story opens with a description of the unrest of the world, and the varied plans for improving the world, among which paternalism as dreamed by Bellamy in "Looking backward" seemed most feasible. The hero and his fiancée drink some chemical preparation and awake to find that this paternalism is a failure. They take another sleep of longer duration and awake in the year 2000, when the fact has been realized that the only solution for the pain of the world is "to love thy brother as thyself."

Roberts, R. D. The earth's history: an introduction to modern geology. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. 20+270 p. maps, il. D. (University extension manuals.) cl., $1.50.

A sketch of the methods and chief results of geological inquiry such as a reader interested in the subject for its own sake would desire to obtain. The work is not intended to be a text-book of geology, nor is it designed with a view to the requirements of any examination. Much of the material had been used in courses of university extension lectures, by Prof. Roberts, who is university lecturer on geology in the University of Cambridge.

Robinson, F. W. The fate of Sister Jessica. [Also] Mr. Sharshaw's shadows. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1893.] c. '91. 2–181 p. D. (Shandon ser., no. 5.) pap., 25 c.

A rich woman, fretted by the demands of a dissipated son, lies ill in a Welsh village and sends to London for a trained nurse. The nurse, Sister Jessica, dies suddenly while attending her patient, and the sick woman, knowing that her own death will financially benefit her son, whom she dearly loves, changes places with the dead nurse and becomes "Sister Jessica." Her identity is finally unexpectedly revealed. A short story, "Mr. Sharshaw's shadows," follows.

Robinson, F. W. The wrong that was done. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1893.] c. '91. 2–467 p. D. (The Belmore ser., no. 16.) pap., 50 c.

Baby Deborah had been sent home from Australia to her uncle and aunt Reisdale, purporting to come from a good-hearted scamp of a brother whose girl-wife had succumbed to the rough life of the bush. When she is seventeen her supposed father arrives and denies his fatherhood. The story then traces the true father through a complicated plot full of detailed detective work. The wild life of Australia and South America is depicted in strong contrast to the settled habits of middle-class Liverpool life.

Robinson, H. N. Robinson's new practical arithmetic for common schools and academies. N. Y., American Book Co., [1893.] 416 p. D. hf. leath., 65 c.

Nothing of value or merit in the old "Practical arithmetic" has been discarded in this revision, the scheme of which is one rather of judicious addition than of omission. The book in its present shape meets the requirements of all the standard examinations prescribed for admission to academic grade or for preparation for the best scientific schools of the country.

Robinson, Ja. Harvey. Sidgwick's "Elements of politics." Phil., American Academy of Political and Social Science, [1893.] 83–94 p. O. (Publications of the Society, no. 67.) pap., 15 c.

A criticism of Prof. Sidgwick's work, published in this country in September, 1891, by Macmillan & Co. The weakness of the book is found to be in a "want of acquaintance with everything beyond England and the United States," and the suggestion is made that the book "might therefore be more correctly entitled 'The elements of English and American politics.' Literature in this field can only be corrected by thorough and intimate knowledge of other systems than our own."

A volume full of interesting gossip on sport. Mr. Roosevelt describes the American wilderness and the heroes of frontier life—Boone, Crockett, Henry, Carson. He then pictures life on a ranch and the ways of cattle-raising. The volume is beautifully illustrated with drawings by A. B. Frost, Henry Sandham, A. Carter Beard, and Frederick Remington, and contains also some reproductions of photographs. The value of many of the illustrations is enhanced by the fact that they are not ideal pictures, but are studies from life and mainly actually killed by the author.

American big-game hunting: the book of the Boone and Crockett Club. N. Y., The Forest and Stream Pub. Co., 1893. c. 345 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

The objects of the Boone and Crockett Club are to "promote manly sport with the rifle among the large game of the wilderness," to encourage travel and exploration, and to work for game and forest preservation by the state. This volume is devoted to big-game hunting in this country and to questions of forest reservation, different papers having been contributed by various members of the club. Three of the articles have been reprinted from Scribner's Magazine and Forest and Stream. An appendix gives a short account of "The literature of American big-game hunting," a list of forest reservations, and the constitution, by-laws, and list of members of the club.

The task the author set himself in preparing this volume was to collect and co-ordinate in a spirit of impartiality the mass of facts in existence from many writers and authorities about the campaign of Waterloo, the narrative and discussions being confined to purely military affairs. Napoleon is the central figure. As the author says, "The campaign was his campaign, planned and executed by him, frustrated by his opponents;" hence the endeavor has been to get at "his intentions, his expectations, his views from day to-day of the facts of the case." The general method adopted by Mr. Ropes is that of Colonel Chesney in his "Waterloo lectures;" that is, the chapters first contain a statement or narrative and afterwards notes in which are examined most of the controversies concerning the campaign. A partial list of works relating to the campaign is included; it covers ten pages; also maps of the theatre of war in Belgium, and of the field of Waterloo.

"Special assessments" is considered in the introductory chapter under six heads—Benefit as a factor in finance and as employed in France, Belgium, Germany, the United Kingdom, and in the United States. The other chapters are devoted to: History of special assessments in the United States; Special assessments in practical operation; The law and theory of special assessments Bibliography of subject covering two pages.

Ross, Albert, [pseud. for Linn Boyd Porter.] An original sinner. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1893. c. '89. 4–348 p. D. (The Albatross novels.) pap., 50 c.

An account of the struggles of a young man, designed by his guardian for the ministry, to combat the tendencies which draw him toward quite another sort of life.

Ross, Albert. [pseud. for Linn Boyd Porter.] Thy neighbor's wife. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1892 [1893.] c '89 4-316 p. D. (Albatross novels.) pap., 50 c.

Most of the action is laid in Spain. The heroine is a dancing girl. Young Redfield, her lover, is an impetuous boy, who with all his faults deserves the affection bestowed upon him. The story is highly sensational. The heroine is contrasted with a typical American girl.

Ross, Clinton. Two soldiers and a politician. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 2+139 p. Tt. cl., 75 c.

Clinton Ross says: "The persons and personages who figure in this little volume are as I suppose them to have been. Two of the persons individualized are characters entirely imaginary, and the others are in that twilight land of the fancy where fact and romance meet." The chapters are entitled: On imaginary portraits; Wolfe; The first Lord Fenwold; Talleyrand.

A review of Seligman's "Shifting and incidence of taxation."

Ross, E: Alsworth. The standard of deferred payments. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, 1893. 37–49 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 70.) pap., 15 c.

The object of this paper is to examine the arguments of the monometallists and the bimetallists, and to inquire what standard of deferred payment will insure justice to both debtor and creditor. The writer finds the argument of the first "wholly unsound"—but does not find the bimetallist argument "entirely" right.

Contents: The money of the world; A monetary clearing house—a solution of the great problem; Amount of gold required to establish bimetallism; The essential conditions for permanent bimetallism; The possibility of maintaining the ratio adopted; The effects of the sudden demonetization of silver; Monetary and banking systems of Europe and British India; The world's production of gold and silver; The coinages of nations; Chronology of the gold and silver industry.

Rougemont, A. de. Manuel de la littérature Française. N. Y., W: R. Jenkins, 1893. c. 2+403 p. D. hf. leath., $1.25.

The plan of the compilation is to combine sufficient information about the life and works of authors, critical appreciations from the English point of view, brief, yet full, notes on points requiring explanations, suggested by actual experience in the class-room, and questions which may serve to test the work of the student, and also for examinations and practice in the language. The compiler is a professor at Chautauqua.

Rouse, Lydia L. Only Judith. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1893. c. 3–231 p. il. D. cl., 85 c.

Judith Melville, overhearing an uncle's carelessly expressed and unwise reference to herself, is led to compare the treatment of her sister and herself by her parents, and to form a rather unjust conclusion, in consequence of which she becomes a child with a grievance. The story tells how she was brought to consider things in a less morbid way, and how her mother was brought to a realization of her unfulfilled obligations. There is a moral for both parents and children.

Rousseau, Jean-Jacques. Rousseau's Émile; or, treatise on education: abridged, tr. and annotated by W: H. Payne. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. '92. 45+355 p. D. (International education ser., no. 20.) cl., $1.50.

Rousseau's "Émile" may be regarded as the source of social, political, and educational ideas that advocate a return to nature. It is the most radical work of the kind ever written, and not only gave the primary impulse to Pestalozzi and Basedow, but set on fire all Europe, and probably did more than any other book to bring about the French Revolution. No book is more helpful than this to provoke original thought in regard to the grounds of educational theories.

Rousseau, Jean-Jacques. The social contract; or, principles of political law. Also, A project for a perpetual peace; from the original French. N. Y., P: Eckler, [1893.] c. 4+238 p. por. O. cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

Rousseau, Jean-Jacques. The social contract; or, the principles of political rights; tr. by Rose M. Harrington; with introd. and notes by E: L. Walter. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1893. c. 53+227 p. S. cl., $1.25.

The Contract Social was published in 1762. It is, as its title implies, an endeavor to base all government on the consent, direct or implied, of the governed. The interest in it now is chiefly historical, as its independent anti-monarchical views—thought to be daringly liberal at the time—had a strong influence in creating the dissatisfaction which resulted in the French Revolution. Our own fathers of the American Revolution were also thought to have been deeply influenced by the work.

Rowbotham, J: F: The private life of the great composers. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1893. 3+340 p. pors. O. cl., $2.

Fifteen great musical composers are the subjects of as many papers. They are: Beethoven, Mozart, Haydn, Bach, Handel, Gluck, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Schubert, Liszt, Rossini, Schumann, Donizetti, Meyerbeer, and Wagner. Each paper is followed by a synopsis of the subject's life and a list of his works. These bibliographies are entirely of musical works, and are full and exact, having been taken from James D. Brown's "Dictionary of musicians."

Russell, A. P. Sub-cœlum: a sky-built human world. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. 3–267 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A picture of an ideal society, a Utopia, which is neither visionary nor fantastic. The ideal society has become gradually what it is, not by legislation nor by mere improvement in modes of living, but by individual development of intellect and heart, guided and promoted by the controlling influences of the community. The highest regard is shown not to wealth but to goodness, not to material success but to brotherly kindness and unselfish devotion to the common weal. Education is very thorough but eminently practical, and the universities have professors of common sense. Physicians, lawyers, and ministers work in harmony to repress all that is ignoble and to foster every capacity and impulse for excellence. Cooks rank among savants, and both cooking and eating are fine arts. The religion of this community consists in a life of love, fruitful of those exalted graces which characterized the life of Christ.

Russell, Edmund. Readings from California poets. San Francisco, Cal., W: Doxey, [1893.] 4–124 p. por. D. (Sunset ser., no. 2.) pap., 25 c.

Thirty-eight poets claimed by California are represented in this compilation. Among the names are those of John Vance Cheney, Capt. Jack Crawford, Ella Sterling Cummins, Bret Harte, Idah Isaacs Menken, Joaquin Miller, Edward Rowland Sill, and Charles Warren Stoddard. Each person is represented by one, two, or sometimes four selections, Joaquin Miller by ten.

Russell, H. Rutherford. Poor Lady Massey. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892 [1893.] 3+212 p. D. (The independent novel ser.) cl., $1.

"Poor Lady Massey" is a mixture of intrigues and unrealities. Faithfully working to gain her daughter a fortune she betrays her true character and loses her daughter's love and respect. The English penniless younger sons play important parts; also English heirs that marry beneath them secretly. A pretty English country parish is the scene.

Russell, Raymond, (pseud.) Asleep and awake. Chic., C: H. Kerr & Co., 1893. c. 2–199 p. O. cl., $1.

The hero finds the heroine as yet asleep to [illegible] aspirations. She awakes, becomes disgusted with her surroundings, and goes to a large city to develop according to ideas gained from a course of [illegible] reading. Later she again meets her ideal, who also suffers from the mental and moral dyspepsia of unassimilated reading. Aimed to disprove the "Kreutzer Sonata," which is dragged in on several occasions.

Russell, W. Clark. List, ye landsmen! a romance of incident. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1893. c. '92. 5+408 p. D. cl., $1.

An old-fashioned sea-story full of privateers, treasures, press-gangs, remarkable sea phenomena, sailors of all nationalities, and scenes of love and fights in the years 1814 and 1815. In the course of plans to hide untold treasures the Black-Watch reaches Manhattan Island. The old privateersman stipulates that some of his treasure shall go to build a church, which gives the novelist an opening for some telling remarks on church and state.

Ryley; with a summary of Free Church progress and finance, 1843–1893, by J: M. McCandlish, F.R.S.E., late president of the Faculty of Actuaries. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1893.] 14+392 p. por. il. D. cl., net, $2.50.

In 1843 four hundred and seventy ministers "separated from and abandoned the present Ecclesiastical Establishment in Scotland, and renounced all rights and emoluments pertaining to them in virtue thereof." This was the beginning of the Free Church as it exists to-day in Scotland; a church recognizing no headship but Jesus Christ and bitterly opposed to civil coercion in spiritual matters. Gives the history of the English Church since its foundation and biographies and portraits of the leading spirits of its Scottish branch.

A somewhat gloomy story of Hungary. The scene is chiefly in an old castle in the Carpathians. Seraph, a young man almost miraculously skilful with his pistol, is incited to kill his father by his mother's desire for revenge. He does not kill him, however, but marries his father's ward, and reconciles his long separated parents.

With this volume we have the last of the three volumes devoted to the Duchess of Berry, in the "Famous women of the French court." Her brilliant career closes with the abdication and flight of Charles x. from St. Cloud, and the embarkation of the royal family at Cherbourg for England. The dramatic revolution by which Louis Philippe, Duke of Orleans, reached the throne is forcibly described.

Saint-Amand, Imbert de. Last years of Louis xv.; tr. by Elizabeth Gilbert Martin. N. Y., C: Scribner's Son's, 1893. c. 5+220 p. il. D. (Famous women of the French court.) cl., $1.25.

In two parts. Pt. 1 describes the court and the city at the end of the reign of Louis xv., in chapters headed the king, the nobility, the clergy, the magistracy, the middle classes, the people, political women, love, the famous salons, and the philosophers. Pt. 2 is devoted to the women of Versailles at the end of the reign of Louis xv.—the Du Barry, Madame Louise of France, Marie Antoinette, and others.

Saint-Amand, Imbert de. Women of the Valois court; tr. by Eliz. Gilbert Martin. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 5+356 p. pors. D. (Famous women of the French court.) cl., $1.25.

Fifteen volumes of Saint-Amand's historical biographies having proved so successful, a new series of four more is begun with this volume. It goes back a century and deals with Marguerite of Angoulême, Catherine de Medici, Diane de Poitiers, Marie Stuart when Dauphiness of France, Elizabeth of France, Jeanne D'Albert, and their contemporaries in the most romantic period of royalty in history. Three more volumes will deal with the courts of Louis xiv. and Louis xv.

Saint-Amand, Imbert de. Women of Versailles, the court of Louis xiv.; tr. by Eliz. Gilbert Martin. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 5+266 p. pors. D. (Famous women of the French court.) cl., $1.25.

The subjects of the various chapters are: Queen Marie Thérèse, Madame de Montespan, Madame de Maintenon, "the Bavarian Dauphiness," the Marquise de Caylus, the Duchess of Orleans, the Duchess of Burgundy, and the daughters of Louis xiv.

Saint-Amand, Imbert de. Women of Versailles, the court of Louis xv.; tr. by Eliz. Gilbert Martin. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 5+285 p. por. D. (Famous women of the French court.) cl., $1.25.

The women described are the Infanta Marie Anne Victoire of Spain, betrothed to Louis xv. when only three years old—the engagement being broken in after years, as the king wearied of waiting for his betrothed to grow up; Marie Leczinska of Poland, who became his queen and reigned for forty-three years; and the women who amused him and became notorious as his mistresses, namely: the Countess de Mailly, the Countess de Vintimille, the Duchess de Châteauroux, and the Marquise de Pompadour.

St. Aubyn, Alan, (pseud.) The master of St. Benedict's. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1893. 4–349 p. D. (Globe lib., v. 1, no. 177.) pap., 25 c.

The scene is in Cambridge, at St. Benedict's. The heroine, Lucy Rae, the grandniece of the old master of that college, having an ambition to try for a Tripos, becomes a student of Newnham. A description of her life as a student and a strange and sensational episode which occurs in St Benedict's make up the interests of a novel which illustrates the force of hereditary traits and taints.

The duplicity of a Fifth Avenue wife towards her husband easily earns for her the title of "Madam Sapphira" bestowed upon her by the author. Fond of life and pleasure, and tiring of her husband, she cleverly conceives and executes a heartless and unprincipled plot against him to obtain a divorce. Contemporary society life in New York City gives the setting to the story.

"The material for this work has been derived from the copious biographical papers left by Mr Alcott, or furnished by his daughter, Mrs. Pratt, from sources in her possession. An important addition has been made, through the kindness of Mr. Edward Waldo Emerson, from his father's papers not hitherto published; and something also has been drawn from the papers left behind by Mr. Thoreau, and those in possession of William Ellery Channing, of Concord, and Mr. B. M. Watson, of Plymouth. The pages of this book portray our friend as he lived—in youth, in middle life, and in serene old age."—From the Introduction.

Sanborn, Kate. A truthful woman in southern California. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 3+192 p. S. cl., 75 c.

After a bad attack of "grip," which left bronchitis, tonsilitis, and other ills in its train, Miss Sanborn deserted her "Abandoned farm," at "Gooseville," Mass., and started for California. This little book epitomizes her experience there, at various resorts, namely, Coronado Beach, San Diego, Los Angeles, Pasadena, and Santa Barbara. She has neither idealized nor harshly criticised what she saw, but told her story with humor and sincere appreciation. Much practical information is embodied in the narrative. Pasadena she pronounces "as near Eden as can be found by mortal man."

Schouler, Ja. Thomas Jefferson. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. c. 252 p. por. D. (Makers of America ser.) cl., $1.

The author's introductory note covers the scope of this volume; it is as follows: "For materials to illustrate the present brief sketch, little is available which has not already been presented in the three large volumes of Mr. Randall's faithful biography, and the extensive array of Jefferson's writings long ago officially published. But there still remains opportunity to present the services and character of our illustrious and many-sided statesman in a somewhat new aspect. With this latter object chiefly in view, I have used freely the ampler materials of my 'History of the United States' in sketching his later political career, so long the object of bitter controversy."

Schreiber, Ellis. Life of Augustus Henry Law, priest of the Society of Jesus. N. Y., Benziger Bros., 1893. 12°, (Quarterly ser.) cl., net, $1.50.

Schreiner, Olive, ["Ralph Iron," pseud.] Dream life and real life: a little African story. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. 4–91 p. S. hf. cl., 60 c.

Three characteristic stories, by the author of "The story of an African farm." The title-story, "Dream life and real life," is a painful little tragedy of South Africa, and one of the author's earliest efforts, written for a school magazine. "The woman's rose" and "The policy in favor of protection" are two little sketches illustrating two women's magnanimity, and are told with some pathos and power.

Schubin, Ossip, [pseud. for Lola Kirschner.] A leafless spring; after the German, by Mary J. Safford. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. 295 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A young Englishman reduced to living on £300 a year considers himself ruined. He goes to Paris to study painting as a means of living. He meets a beautiful Italian model, who behaves mysteriously and mars his life. He marries a sedate, respectable, rich English cousin, and on his wedding tour again meets his fate. The end is sensational and tragic. The descriptions of English women and middle-class conventionality show keen observation and humor.

Schultz, E. Impartial investigation into the reasonableness of the doctrines of Christianity. Phil., published for the author by the Lutheran Pub. Soc., [1893.] c. '92. 264 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"Writing this book I have had three objects in view. The first is to represent to my own mind the reasons that can justly be said to support or to bear against the fundamental doctrines of Christianity. The second is a desire, innate in every sympathetic human heart, to have others share the convictions of my own mind. The third is to leave, as the fruit of my own life, labor, and experience, something that may be called a permanent gain to truth in its highest sense." —Preface.

Schupphaus, Otto F: The plutocrat: a drama in five acts. N. Y., A. Lovell & Co., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 103 p. D. cl., $1.

Written in blank verse. West, a rich manufacturer, utterly heartless and unscrupulous, Henry, his humane superintendent, Ida Field, a widow, Alice, her daughter, and several workingmen and servants, are the characters. Based on the greatest struggle of modern times, the struggle between capital and labor. West, the plutocrat, perishes in a fire, and Mrs. Field, who inherits his wealth, joins heartily in raising and helping the men who make her money.

Scidmore, Eliza Ruhamah. Appleton's guide-book to Alaska and the northwest coast; including the shores of Washington, British Columbia, southeastern Alaska, the Aleutian and Seal islands, the Bering and Arctic coasts N. Y., Appleton, 1893. 7+156 p. il. maps, D. cl., $1.

Miss Scidmore's work should be an authority on the subject, as she has already written a work on Alaska, and spent much time there. She first describes the Puget Sound country, and then takes the tourist to Vancouver's Island and the coast of British Columbia on his way to the wonderful scenery and curious aboriginal life of Alaska. The many summer excursions made to Alaska make this volume timely. There is a four-page list of books of reference at the end, embracing the most easily accessible books concerning Alaska and the northwest coast.

Scollard, Clinton. On sunny shores; il. by Margaret Landers Randolph. N. Y., C. L. Webster & Co., 1893. c. 8–237 p. D. cl., $1.

A companion volume to "Under summer skies," being a further description of Prof. Scollard's poetical pilgrimages. The reader is carried in a jaunty way along the Wye River, to "Ambleside," down the Neckar, through the Tyrol, over the Splügen, and tarries for a season at Bellagio and Veroua before proceeding to alluring scenes in Greece and Syria. Mrs. Randolph again throws light upon the text with her imaginative illustrations, and, as in "Under summer skies," a number of Professor Scollard's fanciful poems, inspired by the events of the journey, are scattered through the volume.

Scott, Mary Monica Maxwell. Abbotsford: the personal relics and antiquarian treasures of Sir Walter Scott; il. by W: Gibb. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. 66 p. 12°, cl., $25.

Scott, Sir Walter. The abbot. N. Y., American Book Co., 1893. c. 536 p. 1 il. D. (English classics for schools.) bds., 60 c.

Scott, Sir Walter. Familiar letters. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1894 [1893.] c. 2 v., por. 18+445; 16+442 p. il. O. cl., $6.

David Douglas, the editor of this work, carefully examined a large number of letters by Sir Walter Scott, and from these selected enough to fill two volumes like those in which Scott's journal recently appeared. The first volume ends with 1814, the date of the publication of "Waverley;" the second with 1826, when the journal begins. Like everything from the author of the Waverley novels, the letters are full of interest, and reveal a singularly manly and chivalrous nature, while the fact that they are written to friends lends them a familiar tone and a playfulness altogether delightful.

Scott, Sir Walter. Ivanhoe; ed. by Andrew Lang. Illustrated holiday ed. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1893.] c. 2 v., 55+321; 2+361 p. il. O. cl., $6; hf. mor., $12; limited parchment ed., $15.

The text is printed on fine paper, in a small page, new and large type, with ample margins. Of the twenty illustrations in etching and photogravure, twelve are original etchings drawn and engraved in Paris by Ad. Lalauze, printed on imperial Japan paper. The binding is stamped in gold and colors A parchment edition, limited to 150 copies, is printed on Enfield handmade paper, with impressions of the illustrations in India proof.

Scott, W: A. The repudiation of state debts: a study in the financial history of Mississippi, Florida, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Louisiana, Arkansas, Tennessee, Minnesota, Michigan and Virginia. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., 1893. c. 6+325 p. D. (Library of economics and politics, no. 2.) cl., $1.50.

By "repudiation" Dr. Scott means not merely the absolute avoidance of the obligation to pay just debts but also the "scaling" of debts and the refusal to settle bonds which were not valid from either a moral or legal standpoint. Under this broad general use of the term Dr. Scott presents in a succinct and scholarly style a digest of the constitutional law, state and national, in so far as it bears on the subject of repudiation, and comes to the conclusion that the holder of repudiated bonds has no effic ent means for enforcing the payment of his dues. He describes in detail the various acts of repudiation passed by twelve states. He gives a careful scientific explanation of the facts presented, and, finally, in the last chapter, discusses various remedies for those evils of defalcation and dishonesty which have brought such heavy penalties upon the states thus compromised.

Scraps from German literature: a selection of proverbs, quotations, anecdotes, humorous and other pieces. No. 1. N. Y., E. Steiger & Co., 1893. c. 2+48 p. O. (Steiger's German scr.) pap., 30 c.

Intended to afford students an agreeable diversion from ordinary German reading. The material has been carefully selected; the diction is, in general, plain and presents few grammatical difficulties, and the frequent occurrence of dialogues and idiomatic phrases will assist the students in familiarizing themselves with conversational German.

Scudder, S: Hubbard. Brief guide to the commoner butterflies of the northern United States and Canada; being an introduction to a knowledge of their life histories. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1893. c. 10+206 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Less than a hundred butterflies—and these [illegible] met with by any industrious collector in the course of a year's or two years' work in the more [illegible] eastern states and in Canada—have been described by the writer and treated as if they were the [illegible] there. He has omitted many species [illegible]

mon enough in certain restricted localities (such, for instance, as our White Mountain butterfly) and included only those which are common over wide areas. A short introduction to the study of butterflies in general, with special application to our own, is prefixed to the body of the work, and is followed by a brief section showing where the principal literature upon the subject is to be found.

Scudder, S: Hubbard. The life of a butterfly: a chapter in natural history for the general reader. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1893. c. 4–186 p. S. el., $1.

The author presents in untechnical language the story of the life of one of our most conspicuous American butterflies. At the same time, by introducing into the account of its anatomy, development, distribution, enemies, and seasonal changes some comparisons with the more or less dissimilar structure and life of other butterflies, and particularly of our native forms, he has given, in brief space, a general account of the lives of the whole tribe.

Seabury, W: Jones, D.D. Lectures on apostolical succession in the Church of England: being an exposition and application of the teaching of the late Rev. Arthur West Haddan, D.D., in his treatise on that subject. (Rivingtons, 1869.) N. Y., Crothers & Korth, 246 Fourth Ave., 1893. c. 115 p. S. cl., net, 75 c.

Arthur West Haddan was born in 1816 and died in 1873. He was deeply affected by the Oxford movement and did much work for the Anglo-Catholic Library. A second edition of his treatise was published in 1879 and one in 1883. It has for many years been a text-book in the General Theological Seminary in New York, in the department of ecclesiastical polity and law, in which Dr. Seabury is professor. It is hard now to procure the book, and to make its contents known to students these lectures were delivered. Dr. Seabury has not aimed to improve it, but for practical purposes teaches in an affirmative way, while the author's style is to a great extent negative and defensive. Haddan was a firm believer in the Apostolic Church.

Searchfield, Emilie. Jacob Winterton's inheritance. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1893. 4–159 p. il. D. cl., 70 c.

Jacob Winterton was impelled, after consideration of his brother Ralph's future prospects, to sign a deed which cut off the entail of his heritage, Croft Farm. Some of the incidents that follow this heroic act give moral purpose to the story. The scene is English.

Seawell, Molly Elliot. Children of destiny. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 2+341 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 113.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Fifty years ago the romantic and mysterious played important parts at Deerchase, on the lovely coast of Virginia. Richard Skelton, a pessimist writing a new philosophy, had been born with a golden spoon in his mouth. As a boy he loved Sylvia Shapleigh; fifteen years later he made Sylvia love him. Through a young protégé Skelton meets his fate. An involved plot brings out several strong characters and gives a fascinating picture of luxurious living in the south many years ago.

Seawell, Molly Elliot. Paul Jones. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 8+166 p. il. sq. D. (Young heroes of our navy ser.) cl., $1.

Paul Jones, the captain who sailed around the British Isles and bade defiance to the entire British fleet, is perhaps the most heroic figure in the naval history of the Revolution, and readers old and young will welcome this thrilling story of his exploits.

Seawell, Molly Elliot. Through thick and thin. [Also] The midshipman's mess: a soldier's story and a sailor's story; il. by H. G. Laskey and C: Meute. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1893. c. 5+215 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Two stories for boys, both having for the leading incident acts of heroism which really occurred—one in the American army, the other in the navy. The first story follows the career of two boys of different worldly positions—one a Virginian, the other a "Yankee"—who both show equal bravery and other high qualities when put to the test. The story opens in Virginia after the war, and culminates in an Indian raid on the plains. The second tale tells of a young American midshipman who bore silently for months the ostracism of all his brother officers rather than be a tale-bearer.

This work, like its predecessor, the "Story of Columbus," by the same author, is intended to introduce the general reader and especially the young reader to what is most interesting and delightful in the history of its subject. The present account of Washington, while giving careful attention to his military and administrative acts, has spared no pains to record as far as possible those details of his life and those personal anecdotes that preserve to us the living man. Profusely illustrated with portraits, views, etc., etc.

Bishop Seymour's part is an exposition of the spiritual relations of the feast, and a vindication, through them, of the church's wisdom in keeping to the traditional date in the latter half of the Christian year. He shows how the transfiguration was a revelation or anticipation of the heavenly glory of our Lord's humanity, as it was to be after the ascension, and, therefore, that it is the natural climax of the festivity of our Lord, requiring in proper sequence the course of the Christian year through all the seasons from Advent to the Ascension, to precede it. Dr. Egar's contribution is an inquiry into the history of the observance of the festival, both in the east and in the west. It gathers together and makes accessible material bearing upon this subject which is not otherwise within easy reach.

Sharpless, I: The relation of the state to education in England and America. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1893.] 22 p. O. (Publications of the society, no. 87.) pap., 25 c.

The author is professor in Haverford College, Pennsylvania. He discusses the divergencies in the systems of American and English state education and presents as subjects of contrast: 1, The guarantees which the state receives that its money is properly expended by the schools; 2, The provision which it makes for education from the age of fourteen to the age of nineteen; 3, The enforcement of education on unwilling parents and children; 4, The attitude towards religious and Biblical teaching.

Shaw, W. Hudson. Introductory lectures on the Oxford reformers. Colet, Erasmus and More, delivered in Philadelphia in 1893 under the auspices of the American Soc. for the Extension of University Teaching. Phil., American Soc. for the Extension of University Teaching, 1883. c. 83 p. O. pap., 50 c.

The successive stages of the great Protestant Reformation are faithfully portrayed in connection with the character sketches of the three men who are the best types of their respective times. "Colet struck the keynote of a mode of religious thought as strongly in contrast with that of the later Reformation as that of Catholicism itself." In Erasmus is summed up the classical revival of Germany; while in Sir Thomas More we find the third of the great Oxford reformers who, in a real sense, prepared the way for Luther; and though believing in methods very different from his, were after all the precursors of the Reformation.

Shedd, W: G. T., D.D. Calvinism: pure and mixed: a defence of the Westminster Standards. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 8+164 p. D. cl., $1.

"The aim of the author is twofold: first, to explain some of the more difficult points in Calvinism, and thereby promote the reaffirmation of the Westminster Standards pure and simple, precisely as they were adopted by both schools in the reunion of 1870, instead of the revision of them as now proposed, and secondly, to justify and defend before the human understanding that intellectual and powerful system of theology which had its origin in the Biblical studies and personal experiences of the two most comprehensive and scientific theologians of Christendom, Aurelius Augustine and John Calvin."—Preface.

Shedd, W: G. T., D.D. Orthodoxy and heterodoxy: a miscellany. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 10+297 p. D. cl., $2.

The author says: "Orthodoxy defines Christianity to be an exclusive religion, distinct from all others, and intended to convert them; heterodoxy explains it to be a conglomerate of all religions, and destined to be merged and lost in them." The volume aims to defend the historical faith and to attack the contrary. It points out the danger of orthodoxy weakening, tolerating, and yielding, and calls upon Christians to fight for their doctrines. Three articles have political tendencies.

Sheldon, Rev. C: M. Robert Hardy's seven days: a dream and its consequences. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1893.] c. 238 p. D. cl., 90 c.

Previous to its publication in the Advance, where it first appeared as a serial, this story was read by the author, who is pastor of the Central Church, Topeka, Kansas, at consecutive Sunday evening services. Robert Hardy, belonging to the type often called fair-weather Christians, returning from a rare attendance at evening service, falls asleep and dreams he has only one week to live. His subsequent course of action is given, seemingly for the purpose of presenting individual views about the Sunday evening service question.

Sheldon, Rev. C: M. The twentieth door. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., 1893. 5+357 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The "twentieth door" is the twentieth century, so called in the commencement oration of Paul Sidney, the hero of the story. This young man is introduced to the reader on a western farm, and the way is traced out by which he found opportunity to fulfil his ambition to go to college. The sturdy and conscientious manliness with which Paul decided all questions, his true and helpful friendship with his school and college room-mate, together with the story of the home life of his mother, brother and sister, make a story of great interest.

Mrs. French-Sheldon is distinguished as the first woman who has led a caravan through Africa, entering from the east coast and penetrating as far as the Kilimanjaro district, the scene of the late Masai raids. Armed with a passport from the Sultan of Zanzibar, she left Mombasa April 4, 1891, with her porters on her journey of adventure. Her tact and intelligence made her entire journey one of triumph. Everywhere she met with kindness and consideration, and left with each tribe articles of our civilized life, with the knowledge of using them, which evoked enthusiastic gratitude. Her personal adventures and her descriptions of the tribes, their habits, etc., are richly interesting. The volume is generously illustrated with pictures made by her own kodak.

Shelley, Percy Bysshe. Prometheus unbound: a lyrical drama; ed. by Vida D. Scudder. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 58+169 p. D. (Heath's English classics.) cl., 65 c.

According to the Preface, "the aim is to supply a good critical apparatus for the study of the drama as a work of art and as an historic product." Hence, an introduction which discusses the different aspects of the drama, and notes which offer suggestions for comparative study, with extracts from the best criticisms on the poem. The text is for the most part that of Forman's edition.

Shepard, Elizabeth G. A guide-book to Norumbega and Vineland; or, the archæological treasures along Charles River. Bost., Damrell & Upham, 1893. c. 48 p. il. maps, D. cl., 75 c.

An interesting account, with illustrations, of the remains of houses, towers, and terraces still to be seen along the Charles River, Mass., which were originally built by Leif and Thorvald Ericsson and other voyagers and discoverers from Greenland in the year 1000 and later.

Professes to be the real experience of a woman born of Roman Catholic parents who was betrayed by a priest, and who after many sensational and discreditable occurences entered a convent. The story of convent life is a succession of vulgar, revolting episodes. The woman left the convent, became a member of the Salvation Army and finally a lecturer against Romanism.

Sheppard, Eliz. S., ["E. Berger," pseud.] Counterparts; or, the cross of love; with an introd. and notes by G: P. Upton. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1893. c. 2 v., 4–371; 3–380 p. il. D. cl., $2.50.

Miss Sheppard made her reputation under the pseudonym of "E. Berger," which appeared on the title-page of the original edition of "Charles Auchester," published in England in 1853. "Counterparts" was published the following year, and the two works soon won a distinct place in literature. Miss Sheppard was a protégée of the Disraelis, the present work being dedicated to Mrs. Disraeli. Mr. Upton says in his introduction. "'Counterparts' may be best characterized as a romance of temperaments. . . . The problems involved—auimal magnetism, metempsychosis, views of marriage, medicine aud hygiene, the counterparts of physical nature, mental influences, the occult sciences of this world and speculations on the future life—were deep subjects for the consideration of a girl not yet out of her teens; but she has discussed them with remarkable meutal grasp."

Sheppard, Eliz. S., ["E. Berger," pseud.] Rumour; with an introd. and notes by Harriet Prescott Spofford. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1893. c. '92. 2 v., 5–344; 2–346 p. pors. D. cl., $2.50.

The "Introductory note," by Mrs. Spofford, covers thirteen pages. and is a warm, sympathetic sketch of Miss Sheppard's unique personality and writings. As in "Charles Auchester" she bid "Mendelssohn" live again, so in "Rumour" she re-creates the characters of "Beethoven" and "Louis Napoleon." Like all her other novels, this bears witness to her intense love and apprcciation of music, and her extensive information and culture.

"The aim of the present manual is simply to remedy, so far as may be, the seeming defects in the teaching of literature. . . . It is in no sense a substitute for the various text-books on the subject now in use. Its purpose, most particularly, is not only to render somewhat of the higher interpretation of literature possible to such as have little normal bent towards letters, but likewise to enable the better gifted to understand more definitely and confidently their own processes. It essays to make criticism begin on less vague and more exact foundations."—Preface.

Sienkiewicz, H: Pan Michael: an historical novel of Poland, the Ukraine, and Turkey: a sequel to "With fire and sword" and "The deluge;" from the Polish, by Jeremiah Curtin. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1893. 11+527 p. O. cl., $2.

"The great struggle begun by the Cossacks, and, after the victory at Korsun, continued by them and the Russian population of the Commonwealth, is described in 'With fire and sword' from the ambush on the Omelnik to the battle of Berestechko. In 'The deluge' the Swedish invasion is the argument, and a mere reference is made to the war in which Moscow and the Ukraine are on one side and the Commonwealth on the other. In 'Pan Michael,' the present volume and closing work of the trilogy, the invader is the Turk, whose forces, though victorious at Kameuzets, are defeated at Hotin."—Introduction.

Sienkiewicz, H: Without dogma: a novel of modern Poland: from the Polish, by Iza Young. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1893. c. 12+423 p. D. cl., $1.50.

In contrast to the author's former historical novels, "Fire and sword," and "The deluge," full of action, incidents, and characters, the present work is almost wholly devoid of action and deals merely with half a dozen characters. It is a psychological study, in the form of autobiography, of a man born above all want, and suffering all through life from a melancholy disposition, lack of positive beliefs, and what he terms l'improductivité Slave, the characteristic of the Polish nature. It is a remarkable study of love in man and woman, with reflections on art, literature, life, faith, society, etc., in these last days of this analytical, questioning century.

Sienkiewicz, H: Yanko, the musician, and other stories; from the Polish, by Jeremiah Curtin: with drawings by Edmund H. Garrett. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1893. c. 3+281 p. S. cl., $1.25.

Contains besides the title-story: The lighthouse-keeper of Aspinwall; From the diary of a tutor in Poznan; Comedy of errors: a sketch of American life; Bartek, the victor. These stories introduce many characters not familiar to American readers. The German schoolmaster among the Poles takes the place of the missionary of old times; the generals and the inciters of animosity against the government are all brilliantly described.

The introduction gives a brief historical sketch of the art of swimming in ancient and modern times. This is followed by a thorough and comprehensive exposition of the principles and details of the art, treated under the following chapter-headings: The teaching of swimming; The art of swimming; Diving, plunging, and floating; Scientific swimming; Bathing in the open; Life-saving; Water-polo; The government of swimming; The universities and public schools; Management of swimming meetings; Training; Public baths. The appendix contains information in regard to the amateur championship of England and America, and a 7-page "bibliography of swimming." Full index.

Sinclair, Brevard D. The crowning sin of the age: the perversion of marriage. Bost., H. L. Hastings, [1893.] c. '92. 2–94 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The prevention of offspring is what the author calls "the crowning sin of the age" and "pre-eminently the sin of New England." His views were first expressed in a sermon which aroused wide-spread discussion. Following the sermon which gives title to this volume are chapters on "The reviewers reviewed," "The decay of New England," "The voice of the church," "Small families," and a collection of commendatory letters from clergymen of all faiths.

Sinnet, C: N. The Norsk gopher: a story of the northwest. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, [1893.] 3–262 p. il. D. cl., $1.

When Edna Parker was nearing her new home, a ranch in North Dakota, she saw her brother's Norsk herd-boy coming through the prairie grass and likened him to a "gopher." This little Norwegian is the hero of a story which pictures life on the prairies, and tells of the brave efforts of a Massachusetts boy and girl in behalf of the young people of the west.

Smart, Hawley. Vanity's daughter. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., [1893.] 2–131 p. D. (Mayflower lib., no. 10.) pap., 30 c.

Vanity's daughter is on trial for murder when the story opens in England. Twenty years before a young flower-girl from Florence had appeared in the streets of London. A rich young Londoner broke his engagement and married her. About a year after she left him to save him from a former lover. A strong prison scene between the murderers and the deserted fiancée of former years tells a sad story of vanity, misplaced love and cold-blooded revenge.

Smith, Goldwin. The United States: an outline of political history, 1492–1871. N. Y.,

Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 8+312 p. map, O. cl., $2.

A rapid and unbiassed narrative of the political events of American history from the landing of the Mayflower to the reconstruction period. It is divided under five headings: The colonies; Revolution, independence and union; Republic; Democracy and slavery; Rupture and reconstruction. Although the sketch is intended for English rather than American readers, the latter will also find it a most acceptable and comprehensive statement of our political history. It will probably be followed by a companion volume treating the recent history of parties and the questions of the present day.

Smith, G: G. Mr. Hall and his family, especially Susie: a story of southern life. Nashville, Tenn., Pub. House of the M. E. Church, South, Barbee & Smith. Agts., 1892 [1893.] c. '92. 176 p. D. cl., 50 c.

Mr. Hall, when the story opens in 1817, was filling a book-keeper's position in Wilmington, North Carolina, and acting as a local preacher in the African meeting-house in that place. His convictions prompting, he soon becomes what the Southern Methodists call a "supply;" when he is sent by the conference on a circuit his experiences and their results take up most of a story, which was written for the dual purpose of portraying the south of about 60 years ago and the Methodist of that day.

Smith, H: Preserved. Inspiration and inerrancy: a history and a defence; containing the original papers on Biblical scholarship and inspiration. Cin., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1893. 374 p. O. cl., $1.50.

Prof. Smith prepared this volume so that he might state his case more fully than it was possible in his trial for heresy before the Presbytery of Cincinnati. The volume throws light upon the relation of critical study of the Scriptures to established creed tests, and to sundry assumptions of systematic theology. Incidentally it discusses the question of doctrinal subscription and the enforcement of such subscription by ecclesiastical process. The true Protestant position concerning the Scriptures is explained and defended, and the nature of historical study of the Scriptures is set forth.

Within a few days before the termination of his last illness Mr. Spurgeon was busily occupied writing his commentary on Matthew's Gospel. A great part of his leisure time, during two previous winters in the south of France, had been devoted to this work. Throughout his long illness his enjoyable task had to be set aside, but as soon as he recovered sufficiently to journey to Mentone he returned to it. To all preachers, teachers and students this commentary will be invaluable; and as the last literary work of the lamented author, it will receive a special welcome.

Squire (The) of Bratton; by the author of "The Dean's little daughter;" il. by F. Barnard. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 215 p. il. D. cl., 80 c.
The story of a little girl who, after a serious illness, goes to the seashore to regain her strength. She and the squire's little son get up a great friendship for each other, and influence the rough squire strongly for good.

Stables, Gordon, M.D. Children of the mountains: a story of life in Scottish wilds; il. by F. Barnard. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 566 p. il. D. cl., $2.
The scene alternates between Glenawe Castle, the home of Ellen and Rory McBain, the child of a Highland chief, and Glen Aura, the home of Frank and Theodora Edwards, the son and daughter of a wealthy American merchant. Besides giving the adventures of these four young mountaineers, the story gives the details of a feud between two powerful Highland clans.

Stables, Gordon, M.D. Hearts of oak: a story of Nelson and the navy. Bost., A. I. Bradley & Co., 1893. 9–374 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.
Introduces some of the most important events of naval warfare from 1793 to 1805 when the brilliant young hero, Tom Bure, saw his idol Nelson shot. Tom comes of a long line of sailors, and the story is full of the delights of life on the ocean wave. Includes several well-known poems, "Battle of the Baltic," "Casabianca," etc., and quotations from many more dear to the hearts of sailors.

Stanley, H: M. My dark companions and their strange stories. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 7+319 p. il. O. cl., $2.
These legends are the choicest and most curious of those that were related to Stanley during seventeen years by his African followers as they gathered at night around the camp-fire, and have not been hitherto unpublished in any of his books of travel. "The creation of man," the legend which opens the book, is a quaint account of the Africans' idea of the creation and garden of Eden. "The goat, the lion, and the serpent," and other animal stories have a flavor of Æsop. Others are fairy tales, but the majority are stories of animals who speak. The book is interesting as African folk-lore, and also as an imaginative work to please young readers.

Half a dozen short stories picturing native life in India, its poverty, patience, superstitions, and hardships. The English side of Indian life is wholly untouched. The stories are: Gunesh Chund; The blue monkey; Shah Sujah's mouse; Suttee; At a girl's school; In a citron grove. Six poems are also included, four of them being translations of "Songs of the people," viz.: Plough song; Sowing song; Harvest song; Cotton-picking song.

Steel, Mrs. F. A. Miss Stuart's legacy. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 2+460 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1.

The author of "From the five rivers," which pictured native life in India, here gives the English side of Indian life. Miss Stuart, after receiving her education in England, goes out to rejoin her father, an Indian colonel, who in the meantime has married a widow with children. Miss Stuart meets good men, who smooth her unknown path, and finally enable her to give the legacy received, as the plot makes clear, to the founding of a home for incurable children. Full of wars and excitements.

Stevenson, Rob. L: David Balfour: being memoirs of his adventures at home and abroad, written by himself and now set forth by Robert Louis Stevenson. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 9+406 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Stevenson, Rob. L: Island nights' entertainments. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. '92, '93. 6+220 p. il. D. cl., $1 25.

Under the title "Island nights' entertainments" are comprised three stories with scenes laid in the Samoan and Sandwich Islands, entitled "The beach of Falesá," "The bottle imp" and "The Isle of Voices." They are odd, whimsical stories, and actual studies of the scenes and characters they photograph, dealing largely with the superstitions of the South Sea Islanders. The first is told by an English trader who marries a native woman; his story, a somewhat gruesome one, is realistic in the extreme. The second story is fantastic, having a similar motive to Balzac's La peau de chagrin. The third is a story of Hawaiian sorcery.

Stillé, C: J. Major-General Anthony Wayne, and the Pennsylvania line in the Continental army. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. 10+441 p. por. O. cl., $3.

The achievements of one of the most brilliant and picturesque figures in the Revolutionary army—the hero of Stony Point—are related in this volume. It is explained that the sobriquet of "Mad Anthony," by which he was generally known after his death, did not arise from any recklessness or untrustworthiness on his part. He was among the ablest of Washington's generals. Mr. Stillé prepared his biography as he did that of another illustrious Pennsylvanian—John Dickinson—in the interests of students of history, believing that no adequate account has ever been written of the part taken by Pennsylvania in the Revolutionary struggle, or of the influence of her statesmen and soldiers in moulding the national policy. He has made liberal use of the abundant and valuable papers deposited by Gen. Wayne's family in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. These papers embrace copies of the letters written by Wayne during his campaigns, letters received by him from the most eminent personages of the Revolution and many documents illustrating his life. The letters are allowed to tell their own story, being connected, when it seems necessary, with an account of the events of the time.

Stirling, Amelia Hutchison. Torch-bearers of history: a connected series of historical sketches. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1893. 5-166 p. il. D. cl., 80 c.

"The object of the following series of historical sketches is to give young readers some idea of the way in which the torch of history has been handed on in Europe from age to age and from nation to nation, beginning in ancient Greece and coming down to modern Germany, where, with Luther, modern history may be said to begin. With this object the writer has selected out of such of the great epochs some representative man or woman whose life was capable of forming an interesting story, taking care to connect the different sketches as far as possible without introducing too much detail."—Preface.

Stoddard, W: O. Guert Ten Eyck: a hero story: il. by F. T. Merrill. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1893. c. 2+258 p. D. cl., $1.50.

A story of Revolutionary days, the scene being laid chiefly in New York City. The story opens with the New York "tea party" in 1774, when the cargo of tea on the ship London was thrown overboard into New York harbor. Guert Ten Eyck, a sturdy fourteen year old lad, takes an active part in this as in the other stirring incidents of the times. Burr, Hamilton, Paul Revere, Washington, Nathan Hale, and other famous personages are introduced, and Hale's capture and death form the climax of the story.

Stoddard, W: O. Men of business. N. Y., C:

Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 317 p. pors. il. O. (Men of achievement ser.) cl., net, $2.

The author points out the business qualities typified by sixteen characters: John Jacob Astor—romance; Cornelius Vanderbilt—competition; Charles Louis Tiffany—taste: John Roach—genius: Levi Parsons Morton—development: Edwin Denison Morgan—variety; Cyrus West Field—tenacity: Chauncey Mitchell Depew—growth; Alexander Turney Stewart—perception; Philip Danforth Armour—organization; Horace Brigham Claflin—liberality; Marshal Owen Roberts—dash; George Mortimer Pullman—originality; Peter Cooper—invention; Marshall Field—business principles; Leland Stanford—councillor.

In this thrilling story Mr. Stoddard describes the vicissitudes of the settlers in western New York, which was the frontier of the last century, the homely yet adventurous existence at Plum Hollow Fort, the plottings of the Iroquois, their assemblage in the great Council House, and their final desperate raid. A boy is the hero of the book.

Stoddard, W: O. Tom and the Money King; il. by C: E: Boutwood. St. Paul, The Price-McGill Co., [1893.] c. 269 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is New York City. The hero is Tom Tracy, the son of a janitor of a large building in the business centre of New York. Tom, by rendering a service to a noted physician, gains not only Dr. Harbeck's patronage, but that of Angus, the money king, and on this account is sent on a notable sea voyage. The cruise of the Rover is described and the remarkable incidents in the career of a self-made boy are introduced.

Stoddard, W: O. The white cave. N. Y., The Century Co., 1893. c. '92, '93. 5+254 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

An English family lost in the Australian bush, and an ex-convict hiding himself and his gold from his pursuers, all find shelter finally in the "white cave," a natural formation of the earth; the various colored and white gangs of men who are following the trail of these various people, with the many thrilling escapes, and the concluding scenes in the cave, in which some interesting family history is divulged, make a most enjoyable book for boys.

See notice of first volume in "Annual Catalogue," 1891. The latter portion of the Book of the Acts is discussed more briefly than its earlier chapters. These cover a period of upwards of thirty years, while the latter chapters discuss the work of Paul during a comparatively brief period. The author's object is exposition, and the supply of material suitable for expository purposes, and he avoids the endless theories supplied by German ingenuity. The two volumes offer the author's conception of the manner in which the Church of God was founded upon earth.

Stone, Mary E. A riddle of luck. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. 316 p. D. cl., $1.25.

In a lonely habitation on the cross-road of the open country in New England, Richard Dartmouth, who by unsuccessful writing has become a tramp, strikes a bargain with a literary ghost. For the use of the starving author's body every alternate six months the ghost undertakes to dictate to him novels and essays that publishers will compete for, pay for, and publish. While his body is inhabited by the ghost his lady-love almost abandons him. This story of miracle is aimed against too prolific authorship.

Sullivan, T. R. Tom Sylvester: a novel. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 5+428 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The hero is a young American who, after a short business experience in this country, is offered a position in a firm of American bankers in Paris. Tom Sylvester had never known his father, and only learned after he had grown up that a series of forgeries committed when Tom was a boy had made his father an exile from his native land. The story is one of quiet incident, contrasting life here and in France, with the exception of the episodes in which Tom is described as meeting his father in Paris.

[1893.] 9+370 p. D. (Contemporary science ser., no. 22.) cl., $1.25.

The author is medical officer of health for St. Pancras, London. His work is divided into four parts: 1, Internal and external influences upon health. 2, Communicable diseases 3, Defensive measures against communicable diseases. 4, The urban dwelling. It is "an attempt to bring to a focus some of the essential points in evolution, environment, parasitism, prophylaxis, and sanitation bearing upon the preservation of public health. The scope of the subject is necessarily wide, but the central point around which its treatment has gathered is the aspect presented to a health officer in reviewing the influences operating around him."

Tarducci, Francesco. John and Sebastian Cabot: biographical notice with documents; from the Italian, by H: F. Brownson. Detroit, Mich., H: F. Brownson, 33 and 35 Congress St., 1893. c. 10+409+8 p. por. map, O. cl., $2.50.

Prof. Tarducci is already known to English readers through Mr. Brownson's translation of his "Life of Columbus." His estimate of the Cabots, whom he considers, next to Columbus, the greatest of the discoverers of the New World, differs from that of previous biographers in some essential points. Through his untiring industry in the examination of the records and documents he has been enabled to fix the date of the discovery of the American continent by John Cabot and his sons as June 24, 1494; he has also established the Venetian nationality of both John and Sebastian and the discovery by Sebastian of Hudson Strait, Hudson Bay, and Fox Channel. He successfully defends Sebastian Cabot from the only serious charge ever brought against him, showing in the faithful portrait he gives of him as a leader that he was always just and fair, deficient only at times in severity. He claims that to Sebastian Cabot is due the commercial greatness of England.

Ten Brink, Bernhard. History of English literature, (Wyclif, Chaucer, earliest drama, Renaissance;) from the German, by W: Clarke Robinson, translation rev. by the author. V. 2, Pt. 1. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1893. c. '92. 10+339 p. O. cl., $2.

The first volume of this work appeared in English ten years ago; it reviewed the history of English literature from the earliest times of the ancient hymnic poetry and the old Teutonic deities up to the close of "Piers Plowman's vision." The proposed second volume apparently outgrew its contemplated limits, and the author published the portion here given as volume 2, part 1, without waiting to complete the portion he had designed as volume 2. Part 2 of volume 2 is to continue the history up to the accession of Queen Elizabeth. It had not gone through the press when the author's death occurred in January, 1892. In the present volume the author puts forth all his strength and compresses the results of his life-long study of Chaucer. By the side of Chaucer are placed Wyclif, the early religious drama and the Renaissance.

Terry, Milton S. The prophecies of Daniel expounded. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1893. c. 136 p. D. cl., 75 c.

Consists rather of a series of exegetical essays on the apocalyptical parts of the book, than of a commentary. The purpose of the work is to correct to some extent the unsound method of interpretation from which, it is believed, this series of prophecies has greatly suffered. The English text on which this exposition is based is, with the exception of slight modifications, that of the Anglo-American revision of 1885. There are a bibliography and subject index included.

Terry, Milton S. The song of songs: an inspired melodrama: analyzed, translated and explained. Cin., O., Cranston & Curts, 1893. c. 64 p. sq. S. leatherette, 25 c.

A dramatization of Solomon's "Song of songs." The view the author takes in his exposition is: "that the heroine of this poetic drama is to be understood as a fair young maiden of northern Palestine, whom King Solomon is supposed to have sought in vain to win. She resists all his blandishments, rejects all his offers, and remains true to her shepherd lover, to whom she is at last restored."

Prof. Thayer, who is professor of New Testament criticism and interpretation in the Divinity School of Harvard University, is generally recognized as one of the foremost New Testament scholars in America. His paper on books and their use is wise and helpful, and the list which he offers of books for students of the New Testament is a comprehensive and carefully selected bibliography (48 p.) of great value.

Thayer, W: M. The true woman: elements of character drawn from the life of Mary Lyon and others: a book for girls. New rev. ed. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., 1893. 18+330 p. il. por. D. cl., $1.25.

First published in 1878 under the title of "The good girl and true woman." The book has met with so much favor that the author has been led to rewrite it, revise and enlarge it, and send it forth under a new and better title. The design is to show girls how to succeed in life, and Mary Lyon, the founder of Mt. Holyoke Female Seminary, is the leading character, around which are grouped a large number of incidents from the lives of other distinguished women, both to illustrate certain elements of female character and to make the book attractive to the young.

Thayer, W: Roscoe. The dawn of Italian independence: Italy from the Congress of Vienna, 1814 to the fall of Venice, 1849. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 92. 2 v., 2+453; 3+446 p. maps. D. cl., $4.

A period in Italian history that heretofore had not been the subject of much study or research is treated with sympathy and intelligence. Introductory to it we are given in book 1, in a series of chapters entitled "The inheritance," the story of Rome from the first to the end of the eighteenth century, when she was in a state of almost mediæval ignorance and priestly servitude. Book 2, "The doom of tyranny," covers the period from the Congress of Vienna, 1815, to the revolution of 1831. The three following books narrate in a rapid, brilliant style the many thrilling events that prepared the way for the final unification of Italy. Mazzini, Garibaldi, and Charles Albert of Savoy figure in these scenes, a potent factor in their history being Mazzini's secret society of "Young Italy," with its avowed purposes of education and revolution; the Carbonari plottings, the many unsuccessful revolutions in many parts of Italy, the flight of Pope Pius the Ninth from Rome, the siege of Rome, and also the siege and capitulation of Venice, belong to this period.

Theuriet, André. L'Abbé Daniel: il. by De Jeannot. N. Y., Amblard & Meyer Bros., 1893. 3+161 p. T. (Collection Lemerre illustré.) pap., 60 c.

Disappointed in love, Daniel becomes an abbé. He is a man of warm affections and intense interests, and the dull routine of a country parish produces a sense of loneliness and weariness most artistically described. Finally he adopts a boy, and sunshine comes into his life. The boy becomes a soldier, and the Abbé Daniel schemes and plots to have him gain the affections of the daughter of the one love of his own secluded life.

Thierry, Gilbert Augustine. Mysteries of the Court of Napoleon III., from the French, by E: I. R. and M. A. B. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1892. c. 5–319 p. D. (Library of choice fiction, no. 56.) pap., 50 c.

An Italian street-singer, whose father had been shot by French soldiers in the time of the first Napoleon, devotes her life to vengeance and is the heroine of a sensational story of intrigue and crime, said to be based on fact. The principal characters have very little to do with "the court of Napoleon III."

Thierry, Gilbert Augustine. The palimpsest. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co, [1893.] c. 3+170 p. nar. D. (The unknown lib., no. 24.) cl., 50 c.

A palimpsest is a manuscript on which the original writing has been scratched out and a new work written. By chemicals the old writing can be made to appear. This palimpsest was supposed to be one of the lost tales of Melitus, and over this had been written the psalms used in the burial service. A French bibliophile tracks this treasure to Russia, where he finds it in the possession of a man who had obtained it by murder. The plot is involved; the end tragic.

Thomas, Annie, [Mrs. Pender Cudlip.] Utterly mistaken. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 4+300 p. D. cl., $1.

The central figure is Ella Poynter, an impulsive, vindictive and emotional girl. She cherishes intense dislike and jealousy of her widowed step-mother, and when she sees her about to marry again determines to wreck her happiness by revealing what she believes to be a shameful secret of her step-mother's life. Her suspicions are "utterly mistaken," and the results of her action recoil upon herself alone. The happiness and heart histories of half a dozen other persons besides Ella and her mother are interwoven in a story of constant misunderstanding and complication. Scene and characters are English.

Thompson, Annie. A moral dilemma: a novel. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1893. c. '92. 312 p. D. cl., $1.

On board the Curlew, bound for Santa Cruz, Alan Twiss of Glasgow confides his past history to John Cayford, and solemnly enjoins him just before his death, in sight of the harbor, to convey his last messages with papers refuting former evil charges, to Mary Forester. John's efforts to fulfil Alan's dying wish place him in "a moral dilemma." He is forced to decide whether he will deliberately disregard his vows to the dead and see the woman he loves marry a man whose life is shadowed by an early crime, or reveal his weighty secret. The interests of the story are dependent on his action.

"This handbook does not pretend to give more than an outline of the very large subject of Greek and Latin palæography. It must be regarded as an introduction to the study of the subject, indicating the different branches into which it is divided and suggesting the lines to be followed, rather than attempting full instruction. It in no way supersedes the use of such works as the collections of fac-similes issued by the Palæographical Society and by other societies and scholars at home and abroad; but it is hoped that it will serve as an aid to the more intelligent and profitable study of them."—Preface. These lectures are by the well-known poet and critic of the literary staff of The Independent. They discuss with freedom and an earnest Christian energy the current question of the moral influence of literary works, especially fiction, and the general relation of literature to Christian civilization. The excesses of "the realistic school" are handled with vigor, and the claims of a true Christian idealism strongly upheld.

"'The city of dreadful night' is a poem of pessimism," says Mrs. Cavazza, "which, neither widely read nor popular, has, however, a twofold value as a document of humanity and as an extraordinarily thorough and vivid representation of a sole, overmastering mood, undesirable but undeniable." It is a work whose unique and sinister beauty has called forth the praise of such artists as Swinburne, Rossetti, Philip Bourke Marston, Longfellow, and Emerson. This, the first American edition, is a small, limited one, very choicely made, and contains, besides the title-poem, "To our ladies of Death" and "Insomnia." The bibliography of Mr. Thomson's writings by Bertram Dobell is full and valuable.

A story that was published originally in The Inter-Ocean. It is a vivid picture of the time of Columbus—its society and parties, religion and literature. The hero is a young Englishman, who goes to Spain, through a difference he has with his father; he has a strong spirit of adventure, and after some novel experiences in the Moorish war enlists with Columbus under an assumed name, and goes with him on his first voyage of discovery. The Cabots are also introduced.

The author is a missionary of the American Board stationed at Marsovan, in Turkey. He does not aim to give a connected, logical account of the planting and growth of missions in his field, but, as the title indicates, a series of informal talks on such topics as those who support missions like to know about. He imagines his readers as a little audience upon his own veranda in the east, and speaks to them in a happy, conversational way, telling about the Gospel in the mountains, the Gospel in the town, the Gospel in the school, the Gospel in the wagon, etc.

F. V. Du Mond. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1894 [1893.] c. 7+55 p. O. cl., $2.50

The legend upon which Mr. Trumbull has based his epic poem is as follows: Long before the solitudes of western New York were disturbed by the advent of the white man, it was the custom of the Indian tribes to assemble occasionally at Niagara, and offer sacrifice to the Spirit of the Falls. This sacrifice consisted of a white birch-bark canoe, which was sent over the terrible cliff, filled with ripe fruits and blooming flowers, and bearing the fairest girl in the tribe who had just attained the age of womanhood. It will be seen the legend affords materials for a romantic story, of which both author and artist have taken advantage, Tucker, B: R. Instead of a book, by a man too busy to write one: a fragmentary exposition of philosophical anarchism, culled from the writings of B: R. Tucker. N. Y., B: R. Tucker, 1893. 8+512 p. por. O. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Short papers that were originally published in the journal called Liberty published by Mr. Tucker in Boston. "The volume opens with a paper on 'State socialism and anarchism,' which conveys in a summary way the scope of the work. Following is the main section, 'The individual, society and the state,' dealing with the fundamental principles of human association. In the third and fourth sections application of these principles is made to the two great economic factors, money and land. In these two sections, moreover, as well as in the fifth and sixth, the various authoritarian social solutions which go counter to these principles are dealt with—namely, greenbackism, the single tax, state socialism, and so-called 'communistic anarchism.' The seventh section treats of the methods by which these principles can be realized."—Preface. The elaborate index is the work of Francis D. Tandy and Henry Cohen.

Tucker, Mrs. Charlotte, ["A. L. O. E.," pseud.] The forlorn hope. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1893. 5–265 p. D. cl., $1.

The time is 1835–1879. Incidents preceding and succeeding the struggle for abolition are introduced in a story which has for its hero William Lloyd Garrison, named as the leader of "the forlorn hope." The heroine, a supposed contemporary of Garrison, is interesting chiefly because of her association with the latter, although her sad love-affair is a minor interest of the book. The action is mostly in Virginia. The attitude of Mary Parker and that of other noted Abolitionists is seen.

Tuckerman, Bayard. William Jay and the constitutional movement for the abolition of slavery; with a preface by John Jay. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. c. 23+185 p. pors. O. cl., $2.50.

This memoir is devoted chiefly to the part borne by Judge Jay in the anti-slavery work, to which his time and thoughts were so long given. "In this connection," his son says in his preface, "the memoir develops his personal characteristics, with the constitutional principles and national policy advocated by him in that historic contest; while of necessity it touches but lightly on his home life, his varied correspondence and his judicial charges, one of which assisted to avert the passage of a pro-slavery legislative act infringing the liberty of speech and of the press; and the scope of the volume forbids its dwelling on his writings on other topics, some of which are still subjects of discussion." Contains a bibliography of four pages.

Peter Stuyvesant's name is indissolubly connected with the settlement of Manhattan Island. His vigorous and impetuous character is well drawn and his many qualities as leader, his despotism and his inordinate vanity, dispassionately and fairly pointed out. The book is a concise history of New York City especially. Founded chiefly on records preserved in the City Hall in New York City.

Tuckley, H: The latter-day Eden: treating of wedlock and the home. Cin., O., Cranston & Curts, 1893. c. 251 p. D. cl., 90 c.

Turk, Milton Haight, ed. The legal code of Ælfred the Great; ed. with introd. by Milton Haight Turk. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1893. 6+147 p. O. bds., $1.05.

The preparation of a separate edition of Ælfred's legal code is due to the conviction that the nature of this work rendered desirable its consideration from a literary point of view. Philologically also its existence in one very old manuscript gives it among Anglo-Saxon law-books a peculiar value. But its chief claim to special consideration rests upon its author's great significance in Anglo-Saxon literature. King Ælfred's literary tastes and occupations strongly color this word, indeed in the introduction the man of letters supplants the lawgiver. Hence the object of the present edition is to establish for the "Legal code" a standing among Ælfred's literary works. Includes bibliography and note giving key to the arrangement and selection of text.

Turnbull, Mrs. Lawrence. Val Maria: a romance of the time of Napoleon I. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. 200 p. il. D. hf. cl., $1.25.

Val Maria was a little valley of France, named for a statue of the Virgin which brought worshippers from every part of France. The young hero was a delicate child with a genius for sculpture. His father was a member of the French senate when the first Napoleon was director. The father's praise of Napoleon inspired the child to make a bust which was viewed by the emperor when the boy lay on his death-bed. By the author of "A catholic man."

Thomas Twining was one of the energetic Englishmen who laid the foundations of the Indian Empire. His visit to the United States, almost at the beginning of our national existence, was an episode in his Indian career, occurring in the course of his return to England between two terms of residence in India. His little diary is full of interesting details of Philadelphia and Washington life and of the great statesmen of the notable period of 1795.

Under King Constantine. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1893.] c. 129 p. O. cl., $1.50.

King Constantine belonged to the post-Arthurian days of English chivalry; of his court were the three noble knights, "Sanpeur," "Kathanal," and "Christalan," of whose heroic deeds and exalted thoughts and impulses a new poet sings in three charming idyls bearing these names. Two of the idyls illustrate the strength and beauty of a pure, unselfish love; the third tells how the knightly boy, "Christalan," being crippled and so deprived of knighthood, saved the life of King Constantine to his own deadly hurt, and dying was made a knight "valiant and true." The author's style is graceful and refined and polished. The book is printed on fine linen paper, with wide margins, and bound in white vellum cloth.

Shows the beginnings and growth of American literature down to a comparatively recent period; will be completed in two volumes. The first series has an historical introduction, serving also as a general survey. The body of the work consists of biographical and critical notices of eminent authors, beginning with Jonathan Edwards, and ending with those born previous to 1826, of which the last happens to be Richard Henry Stoddard, the poet. At the close is an interesting chapter upon "Some mostly forgotten poets."

Underwood, Francis H. The poet and the man: recollections and appreciations of James Russell Lowell. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893. c. 4+138 p. por. D. cl., $1.

The aim is to furnish in compact form the important facts in the poet's life, a brief account of his works, and some personal impressions and reminiscences. The author first met Lowell in 1853, and for some years was one of a circle of half a dozen friends which met frequently at Elmwood and elsewhere. His opportunities for knowing the poet in his brightest days were exceptional. A bibliography of his writings for the assistance of readers and students is appended, covering 5 pages.

Unveiling a parallel: a romance; by two women of the west. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1893. c. 2–269 p. D. (Arena lib. ser., no. 17.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A satire on modern civilization and a plea for justice to women, presented under the semblance of a picture of social life on the planet Mars. The emigrant from earth visits Thursia and Caskia, two of the chief cities of Mars. In both the same code of manners and morals apply to both sexes. In Thursia the women vote, legislate, engage in every kind of business, offer themselves in marriage, and indulge in all the vices and amusements commonly reserved for men. In Caskia, while the same equality prevails, life is upon a high and ideally altruistic plane.

Count Oswald Kopa, a younger scion of a German noble family, is for a time estranged from his brother because of profligate habits. In this interim he becomes a student of the Latin Quarter of Paris, and forms a questionable alliance with a governess. Later, when Count Oswald is restored to favor, Fraulein Lorm reminds him that although he owes no social obligations to her he is bound to her by the "honor of the heart." How he fulfilled this bond the novel narrates.

Valera, Juan. Commander Mendoza; [from the Spanish,] by Mary J. Serrano. N. Y., Appleton, 1893. c. 2+291 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 111.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

After a life of hardship and adventure, largely spent in the service of the Spanish navy in the early years of the century, Commander Mendoza returns in his fiftieth year to his native town of Villabermeja, hoping there to spend his remaining days in peace and quietness. A sin of his youth, long forgotten, confronts him in the person of an illegitimate daughter. The mother of this girl is a society woman, who hopes to expiate her sin by making her daughter either marry the real heir of her husband's wealth or retire to a convent. The commander's interference in this plan and his own love-story form interesting episodes.

Vallings, Harold. The transgression of Terence Clancy: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1893. 1+325 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new ser., no. 741.) pap., 50 c.

Terence Clancy, a young Irish doctor, handsome, witty, and fascinating, is helped by Simon Secretan, the son of the rich man of Chillington, an English town, to a lucrative practice. Terence is weak, and, although meaning to do right, steals his friend's sweetheart and makes her his wife. A young woman that Terence had previous to this wronged commits suicide, and the sin of her life and death is laid to Simon Secretan's door, who suffers the calumny in silence. Many other dramatic events transpire before the story is concluded.

Vanamee, Mrs. Lida Ostrom. An Adirondack idyl. N. Y., C: T. Dillingham & Co., [1893.] c. 3–152 p. S. cl., 75 c.

As the title indicates the scene is laid in the Adirondacks, but the "idyl" deals not with the "natives," but with the lives and loves of those who spend their summers in the mountains—men and women of the world.

Van Anderson, Helen. The right knock: a story. 5th ed. Chic., New Era Pub. Co., [Arena Pub. Co.,] 1892 [1893.] c. '89. 2–317 p. sq. D. cl., $1.25.

Mrs. Hayden, fast falling into chronic invalidism, learns incidentally of the religion of Christian science, and determines to make it a study and apply it to her own needs. After telling her experience, she concludes by saying she obeyed the command in the Bible which says, "Knock, and it shall be opened," until she found the right knock. This edition includes a supplementary chapter giving later thoughts of the author on the subject.

Van Brunt, H: Greek lines, and other architectural essays. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 7+274 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Contents: Greek lines and their influence on modern architecture; The growth of conscience in modern decorative art; Historical architecture, and the influence of the personal element upon it; The royal château of Blois; The present state of architecture; Architecture and poetry. Essays written at intervals during an active professional career of more than thirty years.

Van Daell, Alphonse N. An introduction to the French language: being a practical grammar with exercises. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1893. c. 25+76+229 p. D. (International modern language ser.) cl., $1.10.

The first part is composed of practical lessons. Each lesson begins with a few French sentences, or an extract from some French author, on which the lesson is based. Then follow questions in French to be answered orally or in writing, as the teacher may prefer. The second part is a plain exposition of what Prof Van Daell considers to be the essentials of French grammar for English-speaking students. This is given for the pupil to refer to while studying the first part.

Van Dyke, H: The Christ-child in art: a study of interpretation. N. Y., Harper, 1894 [1893.] c. 13+236 p. il. O. cl., $4.

The first comprehensive study of the influence of Christ's birth and childhood upon human thought and feeling as expressed in the great works of painting and sculpture. It follows the subject from the earliest to the latest times, and brings it into close relations with modern life and the future of art. The illustrations are carefully chosen to illuminate the theme, and include unfamiliar as well as famous pictures. The book has a permanent value in addition to its beauty and appropriateness to the Christmas season.

Van Dyke, H:, D.D. Straight sermons to young men and other human beings preached before the Universities of Yale, Harvard and Princeton. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 10+233 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Of these ten sermons Dr. Van Dyke says: "Their real aim is nothing else than to help people to be good, which is the hardest and the finest thing in the world. Their gospel is simply this: that the sure way to be good is to trust and follow Jesus Christ, the Son of God."

Van Dyke, J: C. Art for art's sake: seven university lectures on the technical beauties of painting. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 12+249 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The drift of these lectures is not towards teaching one how to paint a picture, but rather toward giving one some idea of how to appreciate a picture after it has been painted. With this object in view the writer has explained and illustrated such pictorial motives as color, tone, atmosphere, values, perspective. He calls attention to certain well-known pictures, pointing out their good and bad qualities, and making his remarks apply as much as possible to modern art.

Van Ness, T: The coming religion. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893. c. '92. 228 p. S. cl., $1.

The writer is among those of liberal thought who perceive the defects of conventional Christianity as it is practised to-day, and who look forward to a time when a more enlightened faith, "the coming religion," shall transform the world. The religion of Jesus or the gospel of love; the religion of science or the gospel of evolution; the religion of humanity or the gospel of socialism, the three religions now battling for supremacy, are examined critically. The author concludes: "Each religion, when it contributes its best helps, makes the universal religion which is slowly struggling into form and which is destined to be the religion of the civilized world.

The author begins with an examination of the character and functions of government, and the various theories of Henry George, Bellamy, Karl Marx, and Proudhon; his conclusions are that all governments—popular or otherwise—have been and are failures; that the laws resulting from them have oppressed and injured man; his remedy is to abolish all law and government, not to punish crime, the only marriages to be natural selection, and the world and its riches to be all men's alike.

Dr. Vincent says he has tried to do for New Testament students in this little book what he wishes some one had done for him many years ago—that is, give him beforehand a sort of bird's-eye view of the field of study. The first division of the book, "The field of New Testament study," contains a compact statement of the topics of study and of the best sources of information. The second part consists of a catalogue of the best helps to the critical exegesis of the text. Treatises on subjects incidental to the text are, for the most part, classified in the first division.

"The aim of the author has been to select the best-established theories of European tactical authorities, to illustrate them by a reference to events in our military history, and to apply to them the touchstone of American practice in war." Contents: Introduction; The advance guard; Outposts; Reconnaissance; The cavalry screen; Rear guards; Spies; Orientation and map reading; Indian scouting; Questions for general review.

Wagner, C: Youth; from the French, by Ernest Redwood. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. c. 2+291 p. D. cl., $1.25.
The author has written a dedication to the youth of America. He calls upon the young, in this age of materialism, subdivision, weariness, and wear and tear, to hold fast to ideals and aspirations, and not sacrifice to short-lived comfort all that is truly worth living for. The author's hopefulness and impassioned moral sense make his words stirring and effective.

Wait, S. P. The law of laws. Rev. ed. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1893. c. 6–256 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.
"In this work no theory is offered, but attention is invited to the operation of certain principles that are as fixed, orderly, and enduring as the laws of any science. The overshadowing power of God is set forth as the law of laws, the involuntary principle which is the cause of all phenomena of so-called natural evolution, thus supplying the missing link, which makes science religious and religion scientific. The progressive creation of man is pointed out, as exemplified in the universal history of the race and in the travail of each individual soul. An orderly method is demonstrated for the development and manifestation of the latent mental powers possessed by each one, which were so fully expressed in the life of Jesus, the Christ, the type of perfected humanity. There is thus set forth the way by which the highest ideas of health, wisdom, and virtue are to be brought within the reach of realization."

Dr. Walker is a professor in Hartford Theological Seminary. This volume has grown out of the experiences of the class-room. In his endeavors to teach the story of Congregationalism the writer says he "has been hindered at all points by the inaccessibility of much of the material which must be before the student or the minister if a knowledge of denominational history is to be more than second-hand." He has therefore collected the more important Congregational creeds and platforms, and has illustrated them as far as he is able by such historic notes and comments as may serve to make the circumstances of their composition and their meaning plain.

"The Prince of India" is a mysterious "Wandering Jew." This wanderer, after roaming through the world until the fifteenth century, seeks out those in power to impress upon them the faith he has been taught by careful study of human nature and systems of belief. He teaches: "In nature and every quality the God of the Jew, the Christian, and the Moslem is the same. Titles may remain—Jew, Moslem, Christian, Buddhist—but all mankind are to be brethren in unity in God." The historical background is the conquest of Constantinople by the Mohammedans. Political intrigue, romantic passion, schism and conspiracy, military life, debates on creeds and state politics all find place in this book, for which General Wallace has made studies since he was made minister to Turkey, thirteen years ago.

Six short stories which skilfully and humorously point out the weak spots in our boasted American strength and mechanical progress. The "Republic without a president" and its continuation, "Colonel Odmiuton," show the weakness of our coast defences; "The lost city" deals with the dangers of electricity; "A terrible evening" makes clear the dangers of alcoholism fostered by club-life; "Scud" tells of the wrongs of fishermen, and "The romance of a mortgage" shows up legal quibbles in real-estate transactions.

Develops the main argument of the author's "Dynamic sociology," published in 1883. [See P. W., June 9, '83, 594.] Maintains that whereas the environment transforms the animal, man transforms the environment. Life is an art the rules for which are not to be discerned in the direct operations of nature, but in the modification, or reversal, of those operations by conscious intelligence. Life can take on a new breadth and dignity when the wastes and burdens of competition are banished by a wise co-operation social and national. Denies the validity of current economic maxims, and attacks the individualism of Herbert Spencer. An original, stimulating book.

The Hoad-Bleans, an impoverished aristocratic English family, rent their home—the Priory—to the Rhadegunds, the "terribly family," moving into a more modest house a short distance away. The Rhadegunds cousisted of the father, who dropped his "hs" and had accumulated an immense fortune in America, and his four handsome, unconventional, but well-educated sons. Society, led by Lady Constantia Fitzjocelyn, attempts to ostracize the Rhadegunds; but their wealth and intrinsic worth make them many friends, especially in the family of the Hoad-Bleans, which consisted chiefly of girls—the one exception being the doting mother's dissipated son, who finally becomes a lunatic after several attempted murders.

Warren, B. C. Arsareth: a tale of the Luray caverns. N. Y., A. Lovell & Co., 1893. c. 273 p. D. cl., $1.

Arsareth, referred to in the 13th chapter, 45th verse, of the Apocryphal book of Esdras, is, according to the text, the land where the lost tribes of Israel found refuge. It is claimed that the older New England theologians believed this passage to be a reference to the discovery of America. Similar views agitating Eldridge Davis, an occultist, who is supposed to have lived in Virginia in 1830, he brings his mesmeric powers to bear upon his daughter Alice, who, while clairvoyant, solves this problem to her father's satisfaction. A love-story is an issue of a novel which introduces spiritualistic phenomena.

The "odd situation" is obtained through David Long, who owns adjoining farms, one on eaeh side of the Canadian border. When he attempts to haul dutiable produce from one of his farms to the other a malicious neighbor denounces him as a smuggler, and he comes in conflict with the United States government officials. The arguments, set in a homely story, are in favor of free trade with Canada and annexation.

Watson, Augusta Campbell. Dorothy the Puritan: the story of a strange delusion. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1893. c. 3+341 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The events of this romance occurred in the historical old town of Salem, Mass. The realistie pictures of life among the early settlers, with a vivid and accurate deseription of the witeheraft delusiou which pervaded New England during the latter part of the seventeenth eentury, are graphieally interwoven with romantie scenes of the story. Dorothy, the heroine, is a lovable, womanly eharaeter, and her pathetie story, with its baekground of tragie history, appeals deeply to the heart of the reader. By the author of "The old harbor town."

Watson, W: The cloping angels: a caprice. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 5+29 p. S. cl., 75 c.

Mr. Watson's verse has always true poetie merit, and "The cloping angels" is no exception. It is a poem of twenty-nine stanzas relating the experiences of two angels who, dis-atisfied with "their selfish heaven of unearned joy," exchange "the dulness of entire felicity" for life on earth, where they remain immortal and find true happiness. The style is finished and graeeful; the poem abounds in delicate satirical humor. Finely printed on linen paper with wide margins and uncut edges.

Weaver, Emily. Prince Rupert's namesake; or, after the restoration. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1893.] c. 2–394 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A story of the time of the restoration of Charles II. and the great plague in London. Rupert Staynor and his Aunt Margery, two years older than himself, live with the sturdy old royalist, Squire Staynor, on what remains of the Staynor estate. Every endeavor is made to recover enough property to make life easy, but the attempt is futile. In this quest Rupert goes to London with his friend Harold Clive, and is in the city during the plague. Both escape, and Rupert returns home, soon to be arrested for treason in attending a Puritan conventicle. His grandfather is arrested at the same time, and the two are barely rescued from the great fire of London. Finally the whole family embark for America.

Mr. Webb is an American who, after six years of study abroad of Oriental religions, became so impressed with the truth of Islam that he has returned to this country for the purpose of teaching its doctrines. He believes there is a general ignorance of the real life and teachings of Mohammed, and these he will endeavor to supply through his writings. This little book gives a short biography of the author, and "a brief but accurate and reliable deseription of the character and purpose of Mohammed, and a general outline of the Islamie system."

This book is the result of twenty years' experience in teaching English to foreigners in evening schools. The method adopted is that of Gouin. This scholar develops the subject in such a logical order that the pupil is enabled from the first action stated, without understanding the words spoken, to divine their meaning by the logical necessity of the action that has to follow. The lessons refer to the household, the body, food, daily life and surroundings, industries and professions, government, animal and plant life. Geographical readings about the United States, a map of the United States, and a brief history of the country, a copy of the constitution and a number of patriotic songs close the book.

West, Mary. A born player. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. '92. 7+293 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1.

The son of a dissenting minister, who is being brought up to follow in his father's footsteps, has an inborn passion for the stage, which he cannot conquer; he steals away from his guardian's house one night and witnesses "King Lear" with Edmund Kean in the leading part; although he repents this escapade for a time his heart goes back to the profession, and when sent up to London to finish his studies for the ministry adopts the stage as a career, and becomes a great actor. His love-story and sad ending are very pathetic.

West, Max. The inheritance tax. N. Y., [Prof. Edwin R. A. Seligman, Columbia College,] 1893. 3–140 p. O. (Columbia College studies, v. 4, no. 2.) pap., 75 c.

"The growing importance of the inheritance tax in America is shown by its adoption within a few years by a number of commonwealths, and by the consideration of the question in some form during the past winter by fully a dozen legislatures. As yet there has been no American work on the subject, treating it from other than a legal standpoint. Such being the case, an historical and economic examination of the subject may not be inappropriate at this time."—Preface. Contains a bibliography of seven pages.

A tale of adventure in the stirring times just before Henry of Navarre became King of France. Gaston de Marsac, a gentleman of France, somewhat out of favor with fortune, accepts a commission from Navarre to abduct a lady of rank, and carry her to Blois. The story of the abduction is rich in dangers and romance, and delightfully told. The novel is full of historical interest, and abounds in plots, love, and intrigue. By the author of "The house of the wolf."

Wheatley, Louise Knight. Ashes of roses. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1893.] c. 3+206 p. S. cl., $1.

A pathetic, rather sentimental little story of unfulfilled hopes. A man cruelly jilted by his fiancée meets later the daughter of his faithless love. The daughter is a charming little ingénue, who worships the memory of her dear mother. She tells the story, artlessly describing the way in which she bewitches the silent, white-haired colonel, who at the last finds his hope of happiness to be again but "ashes of roses."

Wheeler, W: W. Life: a novel. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1893. c. '90. 287 p. D. cl., $1.

The story opens in Meriden, Conn. A prosperous business man, seized with a cataleptic trance, had been pronounced dead by local physicians, but for two weeks his sister had refused to consent to the burial. Finally he is resuscitated by means of hypnotism. The book is chiefly devoted to his explanations of the mysteries of life, death, and nature, from knowledge gained during his visit to the spirit-world.

Whishaw, F: J. Out of doors in Tsarland: a record of the seeings and doings of a wanderer in Russia. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1893. 4+380 p. il. D. cl., $2.

A book about Russia in which nothing is said about the Eastern question or nihilism or the horrors of Siberia. Gives realistic pictures of a typical Russian village and takes us sight seeing in the streets of St. Petersburg. The greater part of the book describes hunting adventures, from the shooting of woodcock and snipe to the pursuit of elk and bear and a wolf battue. Angling in Russian waters forms the subject of a long chapter.

It is rather difficult to determine whether Agnes Trevor or her sister Elspeth is the heroine. Both are members of a big family of careless, idle, "tomboy" young people, with an improvident father and a worn, anxious mother. Neither Agnes nor her sister has much "suntime" in her youth—Agnes because she marries a rich, selfish, middle-aged man; Elspeth because after her father's death she is weighed down by poverty and care. Both girls have love stories, and to both time and patience bring happiness at last. English home life is excellently described and the story is an April mixture of tears and smiles. By the author of "The awakening of Mary Fenwick."

White, Caroline Earle. A modern Agrippa. [Also] Patience Barker: a tale of old Nantucket. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893. c. 3–285 p. D. cl., $1.

The time of the first story is 1878. Edith Merton becomes possessed in a very remarkable way of a small mirror, which instead of reflecting the evil thoughts and desires of those who approached it, as did Agrippa's, reflects only her own shortcomings. This wonderful glass plays a most important part in the romance of a New York belle. The second story tells of the seven years' wooing of Captain Barker's daughter.

The first authorized editiou printed in America. Tells the religious experience of Mark Rutherford, a Dissenting minister, who breaks the bonds of a creed which neither appeals to his heart nor his intellect. The hard, narrow lines of his boy-life are strongly though simply described, as are also his love experience and his seemingly hopeless struggles after peace and happiness.

White, W: Hale, ["Mark Rutherford," pseud.] Mark Rutherford's deliverance: ed. by his friend Reuben Shapcott. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1893. 5+179 p. D. cl., $1.

The "Autobiography of Mark Rutherford" left him after giving up his career as Independent minister. This volume finds him a reporter in the House of Commons. His "deliverance" is worked out in a psychological study that is strangely up to date in its handling of the conditions of society, and completes this strong story of personal suffering and religious struggles. Contains also "Notes on the book of Job," "Principles" and "A mysterious picture."

Wiggin, Mrs. Kate Douglas. A cathedral courtship. [Also] Penelope's English experiences; il. by Clifford Carleton. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 5+164 p. D. cl., $1.

According to a preconceived plan, Miss Celia Van Tyck and Miss Catherine Schuyler begin their tour of English cathedral towns. In Winchester, the first on the list, Catherine accidentally meets a young architect, who later extricates her from a rather humiliating dilemma. The natural sequence of this, with humorous commentary of the hero and heroine, is brought out in their individual note-books. In the second story one of a trio of American girls recounts in a characteristic and witty way the main incidents of a visit to England, with the details of her quaint wooing.

Wilkins, Miss Mary E. Giles Corey, yeoman: a play. N. Y., Harper, 1893. c. 2+108 p. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c.

A play founded on the persecution of the Salem witches in 1692. In the conversation of about a dozen characters Miss Wilkins sets vividly before her readers the superstitions and the high religious feeling of the old days she describes. A quaint love-story brightens the gloom. A young child learning to be a witch furnishes an element of ghastly humor.

Aim is made through a practical discourse to show students how to prepare designs for execution. The subject is considered under the headings: Ventilation; Heating; Hot-water heating; Overhead method; Hot-water heating—usual method; Heating by steam—low-pressure steam—gravity return—one-pipe method; Hot-air furnace heating; To find the area of the grate. Besides the tables and illustrations of heating apparatus contained in the text, folding-plates showing methods of construction are given.

Willey, Mary B. Tending upward. Phil., American S. S. Union, 1893. c. '92. 3–257 p. D. cl., $1.10.

A helpful story for young people. The incidents are located both in the east and west, showing pioneer life in a new country. Good ways of helping others through the King's Daughters, flower missions, etc., are depicted.

Williams, Alfred M. Sam Houston and the war of independence in Texas. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893. c. 8–405 p. por. map, O. cl., $2.

The career of Sam Houston is one of the most romantic in the annals of American political leaders. He was a strong and striking figure, whether fighting at Horseshoe Bend, or as governor of Tennessee, or president of Texas, or as U. S. senator from Texas from 1846 to 1861. Mr. Williams has given many years of study and research to Houston's career and to the history of Texas so far as he had a share in it. He was personally acquainted with Houston, and also gained information from those who knew him intimately. A sketch is given of the early history of Texas, and the several phases of its development from a Mexican province until it became a member of the Southern Confederacy. Contains a list of books (4 p.) relating to Houston and the history of Texas.

A collection of some twenty-six sketches of various aspects of London life; about half of them, and the most interesting half, are studies taken from life of the desperately poor and vicious inhabitants of the eastern quarter of London, in which region the author was for some time a magistrate. The other sketches describe places, phases of life, or are historical reminiscences, or relate to the numerous scandals of the past ten years in so-called high society—matrimonial, gambling, turf, and other—that the press has brought before the public. The sketches originally appeared in Household Words.

This, the third and concluding volume of the Epochs of American history, brings down the narrative to the end of President Cleveland's first administration, 1889. As but an outline sketch has been attempted, in this, as in the other volumes, ample bibliographies for reference have been prefixed to the several chapters. The volume opens with a list of reference-books for teachers (3 p.); the other references prefixed to chapters consist of lists of bibliographies, historical maps, general accounts, special histories, and contemporary accounts.

Wilson, Woodrow. An old master, and other political essays. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893. c. 4+181 p. D. cl., $1.

Four of these five essays are reprinted from the Atlantic Monthly and the New Princeton Review. "An old master," the first paper, is a sympathetic study of Adam Smith, the father of political economy. The others are: The study of politics; Political sovereignty; Character of democracy in the United States; Government under the constitution. The writer is professor of jurisprudence in Princeton University, and has written several political works, notably "Division and reunion," published early in the present year.

Winter, Mrs. Eliz. Campbell, ["Isabella Castelar," pseud.] The Spanish treasure: a novel; il. by Warren B. Davis. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, 1893. c. '92, '93. 5–335 p. il. D. (The choice ser., no. 78.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The writer is the wife of William Winter. Although the story opens in New York at the present time, it relates to a treasure buried in the far west among the Indians by a descendant of one of Columbus' crew, a Spanish outlaw named Pedro Mendoza. In a singular manner the surviving heirs of the Mendozas, a young American girl and an English nobleman, meet in New York, learn of the buried treasure and its history and of the "curse" that guards it, etc. The attempt to find it is rich in thrilling adventures and apparently supernatural occurrences.

Winter, J: Strange, [pseud. for Mrs. H. E. V. Stannard.] Aunt Johnnie: a novel. Phil., J: B. Lippincott Co., 1893. 4+312 p. D. (Lippincott's ser. of select novels, no. 148.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Aunt Johnnie is a widow, fifty years old, and the grandmother of eight children. She smooths the pathway of her favorite niece, heals a family quarrel of many years' standing, makes all around her happy, and at last is found young enough to make a happy home for only one of all the devoted men who have done her bidding and adored her. The characters are all well-to-do.

Winter, J: Strange, [pseud. for Mrs. H. E. V. Stannard.] The soul of the bishop. N. Y., J. Selwin Tait & Sons, [1893.] 8—310 p. por. D. cl., $1.

The newly appointed Bishop of Blankhampton falls in love with Cecil Constable, a rich squire's only daughter. After their engagement Cecil finds she cannot truly believe all the bishop holds necessary to salvation, and that if he is to save his own soul according to his confessed doctrine he must give her up. The book is a plea for liberality and a plain rewording of articles of faith to truly realize their meaning and live up to them or give them up.

Winter, W: George William Curtis: a eulogy delivered before the people of Staten Island, at the Castleton, St. George, February 24, 1893. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 3+113 p. por. D. cl., 75 c.

Winter, W: Life and art of Edwin Booth. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 14+308 p. por. il. D. cl., $2.25.

As one of Edwin Booth's nearest and dearest friends of a lifetime, Mr. Winter seems eminently fitted to write his biography. It covers his life to the end, and gives many new facts, especially relative to his career in New York as a manager. Following the biography are lengthy and appreciative criticisms of Booth as Hamlet, Macbeth, Lear, Iago, Othello, and other favorite characters. There are also twelve full-page portraits of Booth in character, portraits of his first wife and his brothers, old playbills and other interesting illustrations. An appendix contains many family records, letters, theatrical routes, memorials from friends, etc., etc.

Winter, W: Shadows of the stage. 2d ser. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 4–367 p. T. cl., 75 c.

Jamieson; Life and genius of Cushman; William Wheatley; John Edmond Owens; Jean Davenport Lander; Ada Rehan as Rosalind; Clara Morris in several characters; On the acting of Lawrence Barrett; "Woolfert's Roost" and Raymond; Ada Rehan's acting; The story of Adelaide Neilson; Henry Irving and Ellen Terry in "Macbeth;" Irving and Coquelin; Adelaide Ristori; Sarah Bernhardt in several characters; Coquelin as Tartuffe; Helena Modjeska.

Winter, W: Shakespeare's England. New ed. rev., with illustrations. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. '92. 3+254 p. por. il. D. cl., $2.

These papers commemorate two visits made by Mr. Winter to England—the first in 1877, the second in 1882. The first American edition of this work consisted of two volumes called "The trip to England" and "English rambles," published in 1879-84. The title of "Shakespeare's England," which seems most appropriate, was chosen for the reason that "the book relates largely to Warwickshire and because it depicts not so much the England of fact as the England created and hallowed by the spirit of her poetry of which Shakespeare is the soul." The text for the present reprint is carefully revised. The illustrations are charming additions.

The correspondence of the first governor of Massachusetts and his wife, during his many absences on legal business, is a record of domesticity and affection in the atmosphere of religion. The earliest publication of any portion of it was in 1825, when twenty-seven letters were printed in the appendix to the first volume of "Governor Winthrop's Journal," edited by James Savage. Gives a vivid picture of Puritan home-life. Bound in "home-spun" cloth, with spinning-wheel decoration.

First published in 1884. This new edition is a complete reprint of the original work, with the addition of eleven plates, some of which appeared in "Freshwater algæ;" others represent still later discoveries. The sixty-four plates are all tinted by hand in imitation of nature. The work consists of a brief account of algæ in general; a fuller one of desmids in particular—directions how to find, collect, preserve, and examine them.

Wood, Beech. Plucky Jim; or, the gang of thieves; il. by J. Nash. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1893.] 222 p. il. D. cl., 80 c.

Ned and Will Sunderland, while trying to sell their father's favorite mare at Draybridge Fair, are taken advantage of through the foolishness of Will and the ehicanery of a horse-dealer. Jim the cowboy, on hearing the description of the dealer, starts out in quest of the mare. The story tells of the perils he encountered while trying to recover Bonnie Bell, and how his brave deed affected his after life.

By the author of "God's image in man." Mr. Wood, who is an independent investigator, belongs to no "school" or party, and has given several years of conservative study to the philosophy and demonstrations of the science of mental healing in order to interpret its laws and possibilities. Part 1 of this work is a study of the laws of "mental healing," and part 2 embodies them in a restorative system, formulated and arranged for home and private use. Visionary and impracticable aspects of the subject are eliminated and a scientific basis found.

N. Y., F. Warne & Co., 1893. 6+658 p. O. cl., $2.50.

The material is gathered mostly from modern writings, and has never before probably been collected into a single volume. The arrangement is alphabetical and follows the order of the initial letters of the initial word or words. A copious topical index is the key to this alphabet.

Wood, J: Seymour. A coign of vantage. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1893. c. 2+264 p. D. cl., $1.

A rich young couple from New York, travelling in Switzerland, indulge a fancy they have to reside for a short time in a ruined castle. Many amusing incidents are the result, the castle being the scene also of a pretty romance. A young and beautiful cousin is placed in their care to bring back to America; she carries a pistol, can "shoot the ace of spades at forty yards," and is otherwise unconventional. In leaving Kentucky a large wager had been made that an English lord would capture her; her father had accepted this wager, and was happy in the thought, at the opening of the story, that he had won his bet, and that his daughter was returning home heart whole. Two young men, knowing of this wager, play off some practical jokes on the party, which are returned with interest. The story does not strike a single sad note.

Wood, J: Seymour. An old bean, and other stories. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1893. c. '92. 5+314 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The initial story is a tale of New York club life. A New England ingénue gives an amusing incident in the life of a quiet girl who had tried to earn money as an actress. These two stories appeared in Scribner's Magazine in 1890 and 1891. "Poor Cousin Parker" and "How Amasa Snow got on his feet" appeared in Harper's Weekly in 1889. "Patriotism," "An unworldling," and "A street-car adventure" are published for the first time. By the author of "Gramercy Park" and "A daughter of Venice."

Wright, Julia McNair. The house on the beach. Bost, Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1893.] c. 5+339 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

"The house on the beach" was a small dilapidated dwelling which was the home of Ralph Kent, an educated and refined man, who had degenerated through the vice of intemperance into a social, moral, and physical wreck. In the results that attend his crippled daughter's efforts to rescue her father from his besetting sin, and in the final fate of Ralph, is seen the hopelessness of the drunkard's condition and the dire control which this sin holds over individual life.

Wright, Julia McNair. Mr. Grosvenor's daughter: a story of city life. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1893.] 384 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

After experiencing a life of luxury with the many favorable conditions which attend great wealth, Deborah Grosvenor is compelled by reverses to exchange the pomp of Dives for the poverty of Lazarus—in brief, to experience the life of a working girl in a great city. Her way of adapting herself to her changed circumstances is the theme of the story.

Wright, W: The Brontës in Ireland; or, facts stranger than fiction. N. Y., Appleton. 1893. 16+308 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Dr. Wright goes to Ireland and traces the strange lives of the Brontë family back to the great-grandfather of Charlotte Brontë. He entirely disposes of the story that they were ever called "Prunty" and tells some wonderfully romantic and exciting tales regarding Hugh Brontë, the uncle who came to London to thrash the editor who had written an uncomplimentary review of "Jane Eyre" and its anonymous author. Their wild and daring deeds account for many of the strange imaginings embodied by the sisters in their novels.

The translator says in his preface; "Among technical treatises that of Xenophon on horsemanship is almost unique in one particular. Even after more than twenty-three centuries it is still, in the main, a sound and excellent guide for so much of the field as it covers. This fact, together with the simple and delightful manner in which the subject is treated, has led me to think that some who are not able or do not care to approach the book in the original Greek, might like to read a translation of the earliest known work on the horse and how to ride him."

Yarrow, Mary Craige, comp. Songs for the Shut-in; gathered and arr. by Mary Craige Yarrow. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1893. c. 4–49 p. D. cl., 75 c.

According to the constitution of the Shut-in Society, any sufferer debarred from association with the outside world is considered a fitting candidate for membership. The Shut-in Society includes three classes—invalid members who are adults, the children's department, numbering one hundred and ten afflicted children, who call themselves "Little Sunshine Makers," and associate members. It is the mission of this last-named class to lighten, as far as possible, the sufferings of the invalid fraternity through an interchange of correspondence and by other means within their power. Hence the present collection of short poems and prose extracts from well-known authors, which has been made by an associate member.

Yeats, W. B. The Countess Kathleen, and various legends and lyrics. Bost., Roberts Bros., [1893.] 5–141 p. 1 il. D. (Cameo ser.) bds., $1.

The opening poem is a drama founded on a west of Ireland folk-tale. The heroine sells her soul to devils in order to save the people from starvation during a time of bitter famine, but is preserved from damnation by good spirits. The other verses are founded chiefly on Irish tradition.

Yechton, Barbara. Ingleside; il. by Jessie McDermott. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1893.] c. 219 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Little nine-year-old Dossie Farquhar is the means of healing a breach of long standing between her father and his aunt, a rich maiden lady who had taken his mother's place, but had always refused to pardon his marriage. When he is seriously sick she relents sufficiently to give him money to go to the south of France, and Dossie goes in his absence to make a visit to Ingleside, her father's old home, where she soon wins "Aunt Theodosia's" heart.

Yechton, Barbara. Little Saint Hilary, and other stories; il. by Minna Brown. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1893.] c. 2+25 p. il. D. hf. cl., 60 c.

"Little Saint Hilary" is the title of the first story, and the diminutive of the hero, Hugh Marmaduke Lascelles Dunscombe (Viscount Saint Hilary). Notwithstanding the boy's extreme youth and small stature he could spell out the family motto of the Dunscombes, qui patitur vincit (who endures conquers). The story tells how the lesson of this maxim is verified in the life of the young viscount. With this story is included four others, which have likewise obvious moral applications; their titles are: "Banks—and banks," "Two kinds of saints," "These little ones," "In this sign thou shalt conquer."

a historical sketch. Toronto, Can., The Williamson Book Co., Ltd., 1893. c. 2–172 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

Much of Ontario's history had its inception in her parliaments, and the legislative record of the past century represents the best in that history. In this work is outlined the historical importance of the four Parliament buildings that have been erected in Ontario since 1792, with their varied life of a hundred years, with memories of their members and various legislative acts. Handsomely illustrated with many full-page pictures.

Yonge, Charlotte M. Grisly Grisell; or, the laidly lady of Whitburn: a tale of the wars of the roses. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. c. 4+300 p. D. cl., $1.

When the story opens Grisell Dacre is a fair, rosy child of Yorkist family in the household of the Countess of Salisbury, betrothed to Leonard Copeland, of the Lancastrian faction. She is nearly killed by a powder explosion, which disfigures her for life. The betrothal is broken off, and Grisell is nursed to health in a convent, where she learns gentleness and patience. At sixteen she returns to her rude northern home, where her recreant lover is captured and allowed to choose whether he will "wed or hang." They are married, and young Copeland leaves his detested bride. Through all the dangers arising from the fall of Lancaster, Grisell devotes herself to him unknown, and her affection and self-sacrifice finally win his love. The scene changes from England to the court of the Duke of Burgundy at Bruges.

Yonge, Charlotte M. An old woman's outlook in a Hampshire village. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892, [1893.] 3+285 p. D. cl., $1.

The twelve months of the year are the dividing lines of "an old woman's outlook." Beginning with January, she notes the aspects of the sky and earth, and trees; the snow, the curious birds, and other points of interest in an English landscape; with February and March and on to the end of the year, the reader is given a succession of beautiful pictures of nature, with occasional sketches of the living figures which are part of it.

Yonge, Charlotte M. The treasures in the marshes; il. by W. S. Stacey. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1893.] 5+191 p. il. D. cl., $1.

While Walter Bulfinch was hunting plover's eggs in the marshes of North Lychford, he unearthed some ancient coins, a fragment of a golden cup, and an antique golden torque. Chris Chrediton, a cousin of Walter, who was digging in the Black Mead of South Lychford, discovers about the same time some coins, which were believed by archæologists to date from the time of the Saxon kings. These incidents in the lives of Walter and Chris influence them to different courses of action, and are the means of bringing about the changes described in a story which tells also of the final disposition of the treasures.

Yonge, Charlotte M., and Coleridge, Christabel R. Strolling players: a harmony of contrasts. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893. 3+349 p. D. cl., $1.

The story opens with a business failure by which Sir Lewis Willingham, his young wife and brothers and sisters are reduced to comparative poverty. The Willinghams have always been ardent in amateur theatricals, all are young and enthusiastic, and they form themselves into a company of strolling players to give entertainments at the homes of their wealthy acquaintances. Their experiences are varied, and they learn that acting in play and acting in earnest are very different things. English country life is pleasantly pictured.

A caricature of Doré's illustrations of Dante's "Inferno." The text describes an imaginary trip to the domain of Satan, and the illustrations, which include over forty full-page plates, faithfully present Mr. Young's idea of what Hades ought to be to meet all modern requirements. By applying the latest of nineteenth century inventions the machinery of torture is perfected into a system which provides for every class of sinners "punishment to fit the crime."

Zola, Émile. Le docteur Pascal. N. Y., Amblard & Meyer Bros., 1893. 3+390 p. 1 pl. D. (Les Rougon-Macquart ser.) pap., $1.

Zola, Émile. Doctor Pascal; tr. by Mary J. Serrano. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1893.] c. 2+471 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 145.) pap., 50 c.

The last volume of the Rougon-Macquart series. Old "Aunt Dide," the founder of the race, is still alive in the story at the age of 101, and her son dies at 80 from spontaneous combustion. Dr. Pascal is the son of Félicité Rougon and nearly sixty; he is living at Plassans with his niece Clotilde, a girl of twenty-five, and an old housekeeper; he is devoting the remaining years of his life to the study of his favorite subject, heredity, and has arrived at the belief that only perfect happiness is found in perfect health; and after some experimenting imagines he possesses the secret of curing all ills. Clotilde, who is Pascal's assistant and secretary, falls madly in love with him, and tells him of her infatuation. Their immoral relations are not condemned by Zola, the boy born of the connection being, it is suggested, the future regenerator of the Rougon race. Dr. Pascal's death carries out the theory of heredity developed in this series.

Zola, Émile. Modern marriage; from the French, by B: R. Tucker. N. Y., B: R. Tucker, 1893. c. 64 p. S. pap., 15 c.

"The heroic love of the seventeenth century, the sensual love of the eighteenth, has become the positive love of the nineteenth, to be dealt with expeditiously as in a stock exchange transaction." After this statement Zola gives some of the causes that make modern marriage so often a failure, and tells the history of four marriages in detail, in which the contracting parties are types of several classes of society.

A. C. ARMSTRONG & SON,

Announce for Early Publication:

A NEW AND MOST IMPORTANT SERIES, VIZ.:

Bible Class Expositions.

By Rev. Alexander Maclaren, D.D.

GOSPEL OF ST. MATTHEW, in 2 vols. | GOSPEL OF ST. MARK. 1 vo
GOSPEL OF ST. LUKE. 1 vol. | GOSPEL OF ST. JOHN. 1 vol.

12*mo. Neatly bound in cloth. Each volume,* $1.00.

"A new and most important series of works specially designed for Sunday-schools and Bible-classes, consisting of expositions of the International Sunday-School Lessons. In the present series they are grouped and arranged under the books of Scripture to which they relate, and form a very fairly complete commentary on the particular portion of Scripture. There are various admirable series of Bible Class Handbooks; but, as a rule, they are devoted more to giving information than to the enforcement of moral and spiritual lessons. Dr. Maclaren is confessedly supreme in this particular line. He is not only a thoroughly Biblical scholar, but he is an expositor who presses living truth home to heart and conscience. It is believed that the books will be found most useful to teachers and superintendents who have to deliver addresses to children, for pupils in Bible classes, and for private reading."

"'The Columbian Historical Novels' is a novel and striking conception. . . . The story or romance of these volumes is told in a most attractive way, while the historical facts thus so delightfully carried along are true, and in keeping with most recent investigations. The illustrations are numerous and have the rare merit of lighting up the narrative."—The Lutheran Observer, Philadelphia.

"'The Columbian Historical Novels' are books of a high order and should be widely circulated. They can be safely and profitably read, especially by the young of both sexes."—The Christian Inquirer, New York.

"We recommend these books especially to the teachers of American history."—The Review of Reviews, New York.

HENRY HOLT & CO., 29 West 23d Street, New York.

NEW BOOKS.

25c. Each.—Pastime Series. 107 Titles.—25c. Each.

The Egyptian Harp=Girl.

Those who visited the Temple of Luxor in Midway Plaisance of the Columbian Exposition cannot fail to remember the heroine of this story. It combines all the mysticism of the East and the buried wonders of the Nile with the tragedy and realism of the Great West. It is written by the author of "Uncle Jeremiah and Family at the Great Fair," and promises to be a rival of that famous seller. Handsomely illustrated. Paper, 25 cents.

The Adventures of Uncle Jeremiah and Family at the Great Fair.

No book ever put on the market had a greater sale than this book in so short a time. More than 300,000 copies have been sold, and the demand still makes of it one of the most active sellers in the market. Written by the author of "The Egyptian Harp-Girl." Paper, 25 cents; silk cloth, 50 cents.

Sell Not Thyself.

This realistic story of the ambitions of a poor girl is no less startling than it is illustrative of the fever of the age. Her experiences with the lessons consequent upon her actions are, in some form, being enacted every day in the great cities of this country. Illustrated. 25 cents.

50c. Each.—Library of Choice Fiction. 78 Titles.—50c. Each.

The World's Congress of Religions.

A book prepared by men who know what the masses of the people want. A complete and concise history of the great congress of creed. The sermonizings left out, the gold gathered for the people. It will be a seller and a winner. Order at once.

David of Juniper Gulch.

No book has ever been put on the market with a more wholesome atmosphere about it than this. It is a most delightful story of the free, wild life of the Pacific Coast. Paper, 50 cents.

Opie Read's Novels.

A Tennessee Judge is the latest addition, and its title with the well-known resources of the author is as good a description as is needed to set forth its merits.

The other books of this author have been put in a new and handsome dress. They include: "Len Gansett," "Emmett Bonlore," "The Colossus," "A Kentucky Colonel," and "Selected Stories." Paper, 50 cents; silk cloth, $1.00.

25c. Each.—Detective Series. 55 Titles.—25c. Each.

The Pullman Car Detective.

By a detective whose years of exciting experiences insure the reader not only a thrilling story but likewise an insight into the methods necessary to protect the people who sleep and travel so safely on those famous sleepers. Illustrated. 25 cents.

The publishers have decided to satisfy the great demand for cheap editions of the following famous books. Thomes books of adventures, ten titles, for the Pastime Series, price, 25 cents. Two now ready: "The Bushrangers: A Yankee's Adventures During a Second Trip to Australia," and "The Belle of Australia; or, Who Am I?" Of the Lynch detective books, nine titles, for the Detective Series, price, 25 cents. Two now ready: The famous "Shadowed by Three," also "The Slender Clue." The others will follow one each month.

But above all, dealers should not miss the golden harvest now being gathered from "Glimpses of the World's Fair," 192 views of the great Exposition. Nearly 300,000 sold. Paper, 50 cents; silk cloth, $1.00.

Lovell, Coryell & Company's

NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

New and delightful novel by the author of "Matrimony," "His Grace," "Miss Shafto," and "No New Thing."
12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

Countess Radna.

By WILLIAM NORRIS, author of "The Rogue," "Marcia," "Misadventure," etc.

A novel of the bright and enchaining kind, which we are accustomed to receive from the author of "No New Thing," upon whom the mantle of Thackeray seems to have fallen, is always a delightful event in the new book season. Mr. Norris is not only a clever novelist, but a keen observer of his fellows and a thorough man of the world His plots are therefore fresh and natural, his characters real and life-like, and the dialogue is crisp and entertaining.

A very tasteful and newly illustrated edition of Maxwell Gray's latest and most powerful novel.
Illustrated. 12mo, cloth, $1.50.

The Last Sentence.

By MAXWELL GRAY, author of "The Silence of Dean Maitland."

The clever and cultured authoress who writes under the nom de plume of Maxwell Gray can be compared only with herself. Intellectually she is eclipsed only by George Eliot. She has much of that author's ability and is more of the literary artist than that writer. Like "The Silence of Dean Maitland," "The Last Sentence" is a profound book. Her story not only seizes upon but enthralls the reader; it is strongly conceived and the plot is admirably wrought out.

New and entertaining novel by the author of "Master of His Fate," "The Horned Cat," etc.
12mo, cloth, $1.00.

A Soldier and a Gentleman.

By J. MACLAREN COBBAN, author of "A Reverend Gentleman," etc.

What, by happy chance, befalls the hero of this bright, altruistic story, in being called upon, for a consideration, to represent another man, and in this compromising situation to make love to a pretty girl with heaps of money, the reader must be left to discover for himself. In making the discovery, he will find the story a delightful one, and if his circumstances at all resemble those of the hero, he will not be unlikely to wish himself in the hero's place.

Cheaper one-volume edition. 12mo, cloth, gilt top, $2.00.

The Victorian Age of English Literature.

By Mrs. OLIPHANT, author of "The Makers of Florence," "Diana," "The Cuckoo in the Nest," etc.

A skilful yet honest survey of the literary gains of the era, of much value to all students of English literature. The story is told with intelligent brevity, yet with the charm of an experienced and graceful writer, who is at once well-informed and in full sympathy with her subject.

New and cheaper edition. Portraits, etc. 8vo, cloth extra, $1.50.

Alfred, Lord Tennyson:

A Study of the Poet-Laureate's Life and Work. By ARTHUR WAUGH, B.A., Oxon.

This sympathetic yet critical study of the Poet-Laureate's finished work will be found invaluable alike by those who know and those who have yet to know Lord Tennyson's literary career and labor. Its author has a thoroughly familiar acquaintance with the poet's work and an adequate knowledge of the circumstances under which it successively appeared.

The Drama: Addresses by Henry Irving.

With a frontispiece by Whistler. Edition de luxe, large-paper, limited to 300 copies. With autograph signature of Henry Irving. 1 vol., 8vo, cloth, gilt top, uncut edges, $5.00.

This attractive volume comprises four interesting addresses by Mr. Irving, dealing with the annals of acting and with the art as well as with the traditions of the stage. It is full at once of the enthusiasm and the professional culture which mark everything said or done by the chief figure on the modern stage. The addresses, delivered at Oxford University, on the Four Great Actors of the English Stage, will, we are sure, be read and reread by all lovers of the higher drama, and by every one in sympathy with the actor's art. The work is enriched by an excellent character portrait of Mr. Henry Irving.

Now Ready. Two new editions of Dr. Geikie's graphic and scholarly "Life of Christ." Popular Edition. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; Easter Edition, in white vellum cloth, gilt top, $1.25.

The Life and Words of Christ.

By CUNNINGHAM GEIKIE, D.D., author of "Hours with the Bible," "The English Reformation," etc.

Dr. Geikie's Life of Christ has taken a high place among the scholarly, critical, and expository narratives of the story of the Divine Life on earth. It has all the graphic and picturesque qualities of Canon Farrar's work, without that author's florid rhetoric and rather decorative prose. The present work has gained by its more chaste and subdued style, while it lacks nothing in its great rival's attractiveness or in his gifts as a critical investigator and learned Biblical scholar.

New Novel. By S. Baring-Gould, author of "Urith," "Mehalah," etc. 12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50 cents.

Mrs. Curgenven of Curgenven.

By S. BARING-GOULD, M.A., author of "In the Roar of the Sea," "The Pennycomequicks," etc.

"Among his series of brilliant romances this is one of the best. A deep human interest, strong characterization, and picturesque descriptiveness render it both effective and entertaining."—Morning Post, London.

"The character of Esther Morideg, a wild imp of the moors, is admirably drawn. Esther is a true child of nature, and her strange talk and wild ways constitute the central attraction of this powerful romance."—Athenæum, London.

List of Standard and Copyright Publications

ISSUED BY

J. SELWIN TAIT & SONS, 65 Fifth Avenue, New York.

1894.

Tait's National Library of Best 200 Books.

This list is the outcome of an inquiry made of all the leading libraries of the United States as to the most popular books, and is of special value as embodying the only consensus of American opinion ever obtained on the subject.

The result of this inquiry was made the subject of an elaborate and most interesting article in the December Forum, by Hamilton W. Mabie, editor of The Outlook. This article was entitled "The Most Popular Novels in America," and in it Mr. Mabie says: "Indeed the method employed by Messrs. J. Selwin Tait & Sons is regarded as the best test yet used for such a purpose."

By arrangement with the well-known publishers, Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Roberts Bros., Harper & Brothers, Porter & Coates, D. Appleton & Co., Robert Bonner's Sons, J. B. Lippincott Co., Dodd, Mead & Co., Macmillan & Co., and others, we are allowed to include their most prominent American copyright books in this list.

Each volume will contain a handsome colored photogravure title-page and from four to six new copyright illustrations of original design by American artists.

It will be well bound in beautiful half calf; also in white back and gold, fancy side, and each volume is boxed.

A single asterisk has been placed in the following list against the books now ready, and a double asterisk against the titles of those in the press, which will be issued during the next two months. The remaining books of the series have already been illustrated by our artists, and will be issued at the rate of four per month.

"It is acute, witty, and has plenty of good thrusts in it."—The Independent.

CHRIST IN TYPE AND PROPHECY. By Rev. A. J. MAAS, S.J., Professor of Oriental Languages at Woodstock College, and author of "Life of Christ." 12mo, cloth, net, $2.00.

". . . It is seldom that so thorough a work as this is published. It is full of light and strength, and the author has spared no effort in point of scholarship and research to make it both scholarly and intelligent to all those who believe that Jesus Christ was the Messiah, and that the ancient prophets distinctly foretold His coming into the world. Mr. Maas has put Biblical students everywhere under great obligations to him. . . ."—The Boston Herald.

CHRISTIAN ANTHROPOLOGY. By Rev. JOHN THEIN, Pastor of St. Martin's Church, Liverpool, O. With an introduction by Prof. Chas. G. Herbermann, Ph.D., LL D. 8vo, cloth, net, $2.50.

"It is a practical, careful study of its included themes and is written simply and well. The author is conservative in his positions, although open to new light, and such a book as his should have a wide and useful influence."—The Congregationalist.

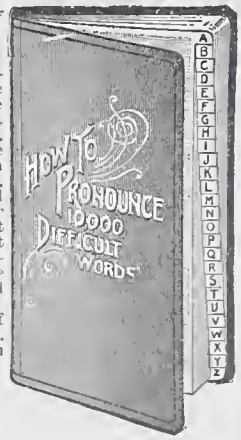
How to Pronounce 10,000 Difficult Words.

An Authoritative Handbook of Words in Common Use.



There are few persons whose education is so complete as to insure the correct pronunciation of all the words met with in daily reading. Czar, Boucicault, isolate, Balmoral, Boulanger, Coup d' etat, etc., are cases in point. These words, with very many others of the same kind, will be found in the book named above. The aid offered to the reader or speaker by it is very great. It enables the orator or reader to get at once and at small cost the pronunciation of a strange word; without it he might have a dozen dictionaries and then not find what he wanted.

It also contains an extended list of words often incorrectly pronounced. by F. M. PAYNE. 128 pages, bound in russia, indexed.

The Annual Literary Index,

INCLUDING PERIODICALS, AMERICAN AND ENGLISH, ESSAYS, BOOK-CHAPTERS, ETC., SPECIAL BIBLIOGRAPHIES AND NECROLOGY OF AUTHORS.

EDITED BY W. I. FLETCHER and R. R. BOWKER,

With the co-operation of members of the American Library Association and of the Library Journal staff.

THE ANNUAL LITERARY INDEX for 1893 complements the "Annual American Catalogue" of books published in 1893 by indexing (1) articles in periodicals published in 1893; (2) essays and book-chapters in composite books of 1893; (3) authors of periodical articles and essays; (4) special bibliographies of 1893; (5) authors deceased in 1893. The two volumes together make a complete record of the literary product of the year.

The volume includes also the features of the "Co-operative Index to Periodicals," originally a monthly supplement to the Library Journal, then extended into a quarterly in an enlarged form, and later issued as an annual volume.

One vol., paper, $3; hf. mor., $3.50.

The American Educational Catalogue.

The Educational Catalogue, established in 1870, is published annually in the Educational Number of The Publishers' Weekly, and subsequently in the "Publishers' Trade List Annual." It includes a price-list of school and text books in use in the United States, arranged alphabetically by author's or editor's name, and a detailed subject index, referring from each specific subject to authors of books on that subject, so that the advantages of both a finding-list for the trade and a class-catalogue for the use of schools are combined. Price, separately, 25 c.

"The Educational Number of The Publishers' Weekly (1873) deserves more than a mere passing notice. Besides the usual array of book advertisements, reviews, announcements and literary notes, it contains a well-digested catalogue of educational works, arranged under their respective subjects, with the prices and publishers' names attached. An idea of the completeness and magnitude of this catalogue may be formed from the facts that the topics in the subject-index number 170, and that there are no less than 120 houses whose publications are thus classified. The catalogue itself covers twenty-nine double-column large octavo pages. The value of such a list for ready reference can hardly be overestimated. The bookseller can turn to it to find by whom a given book is published, and its price; the teacher or school officer can see just what books are within his reach on any particular branch; and the miscellaneous book-collector has here every facility for making selections for his library on any educational subject. All who are interested in school-books ought to preserve this catalogue as a vade mecum."—Christian Union.

The Profession of Bookselling,

A Handbook of Practical Hints for the Apprentice and Bookseller.

BY A. GROWOLL,

Managing Editor of "The Publishers' Weekly."

"The author has collected a stupendous mass of information on his subject, and manages to impart his knowledge with admirable brevity and clearness. . . . It treats of everything that he ought to know, and of most things in which he can be even remotely interested. . . . If accuracy and fulness of information avail, the young man who masters Mr. Growoll's book can scarcely help making his mark in the world."—London Publishers' Circular.

"A volume, attractively printed, that deserves a place among reference-books by reason of its bibliography. Here are lists of works fitted to impart to the bookseller (and to the general reader) a general knowledge of the field of English and American literature, of Continental literature, of the classical and oriental, etc.; lists of trade catalogues, of library catalogues, of trade journals and literary journals; and a broad reference library. . . . For its main purpose this is an excellent manual."—The Nation.

"We wish to give you our advance order for that most valuable series of articles—'The Profession of Bookselling'—and wish to thank you for publishing in book form one of the most useful tools the trade has had placed in its hands for a long time."—THE FIELD & GIBB BOOK AND STATIONERY CO., Lawrence, Kansas.
